'You must get into the habit of looking intensely at words. . . . Never let a word escape you that looks suspicious. It is severe work; but you will find it, even at first, interesting, and at last, endlessly amusing.'—Ruskin.

PREFACE

THE object of this work is to bring into focus much available authoritative information on the employment by Shakespeare of words in their different settings, and to furnish the student with a readily accessible aid for helping him to fix upon the precise meaning of the dramatist's diverse and often puzzling use of them. The book treats not only of those terms which link us by imperceptible bonds to bygone times, and which by their association with old traditions and customs present to us the most instructive and inviting form of archaeological research, it also touches upon those still on the lips of men, whose environment, it may be, has given them new values and altered meanings. While throughout these pages there prevails a dominant touch of archaism in the form or the meaning of the words, it will be observed that obsolete or unusual terms are not exclusively dealt with, for whenever an unfamiliar use is found to be associated with an expression, other ascertained Shakespearian uses are superadded and illustrated.

To express his thoughts Shakespeare seldom employs an inapt or inadequate term, but, like a master-magician, he summons words at will, ranges into ready submission existing forms of speech, turns to his own purposes the flexibility of the language, and easily adapts it to his varied requirements. The universality of his sympathies, the intensity of his conceptions of nature and life, the wealth and variety of his picturesque metaphors, necessitate for his use a correspondingly wide range of expression. While his vocabulary is reputed to be the largest of all the vocabularies of an English classic, the concordances flash upon one's notice several very interesting facts: e.g. that many of his words are used by him only once, and others very seldom, while some again occur very frequently and are registered in whole columns or even pages; on the other hand, words now very common, so common indeed that we can scarcely conceive how Shakespeare or his contemporaries could manage to do without them, do not find a place in the text. Again, in his descriptive passages, and to the phraseology of all his creations, our author contrives to give the individual touch. In this respect he is a man apart. His words with their glow and their throb seem to have about them something more than what they bear on the lips of other men. It has to be remembered that by far the larger part of Shakespeare's writings was intended for effective stage treatment. While composing his dramas, therefore, with an imaginary audience before him, whose interest and emotion were to be aroused, he had not only to adopt all the resources of passion and arrangement for rhetorical and dramatic effect, he had also to express his thoughts in intense and arresting terms breathing with warm responsive life.

The 'rackers of orthography' with their fanciful foibles had passed or were passing at the time when Shakespeare wrote, the artificial and affected language of the euphuist was being laughed down, and the achievement of Caxton had already done much to consolidate English speech. Besides, spelling has now been modernized in all our recent edited texts. We have consequently to consider only to a very limited extent words modified either by phonetic influences or by inflexional changes. It provides, however, a much more vitally interesting study to examine the words of a writer for the historical associations that are grouped around them, for the allusions they suggest, or for the significant changes their meaning has undergone. Glossarists and annotators have already covered much of this field, but not a little still remains in the realm of conjecture, and offers opportunity for instructive philological investigation. Ignorance of the past significance even of words now become familiar, not only deprives one of much of the beauty and pith of the language, but also, as has been experienced in controversies over Scripture usages, it has frequently led to positive misconception or incorrect application, and these in turn have given occasion for much misinformed bitterness. Notwithstanding some diversity of opinion over many expressions in Shakespeare's text, these fierce controversies are happily not associated with it. At the same time they serve to show that if we would read him or his contemporaries with pleasure or profit, we cannot afford to disregard the subtle changes that are incident to language.

It may be objected that in the following pages the discriminating sense is sometimes too finely exercised, and that the distinctive shades of meaning of archaic forms, obsolete variants, and divergent usages are at times too nice to serve any helpful purpose. If this is a blemish, it is one which each reader may readily remedy for himself, and, to make the corrective the easier, at least one seemingly apposite example of its meaning accompanies every assumed sense of each word.

This work does not concern itself greatly with the vagaries of Shakespeare's grammatical forms. Adequate provision for this particular matter has already been made. Malapropisms and most vulgar corruptions are also beyond its scope, so that the 'derangement of epitaphs' of Mrs. Quickly, the amusing aspirates of Fluellen, the delightful perversions of Dogberry, the silly trifles of Launcelot, the 'boozy babblings of Bardolph,' the 'pribbles and prabbles' of Evans, and the turgid coinages of Gerrold, have here practically no place. These facetious and apocryphal quips are not meant to be meddled: to touch them is to tarnish them: their merit is their mystery. It is also outside its sphere to have much regard to minute textual criticism. So little is it necessary for a book of this nature to consider hypothetical readings, or to approach the whirlpool of theories and arguments regarding the most trustworthy version of disputed passages, that it will serve the particular business on hand to best purpose, if the words discussed and illustrated are those of the most generally accepted texts. Further, and for the same reason, it is unimportant to take into account how far Shakespeare shared in the production of several plays, about the genuineness of whose authorship there still remains some doubt. Pericles, Titus Andronicus, The Two Noble Kinsmen, etc., are here for convenience included among the authentic creations of his genius, notwithstand* apparently reasonable claims of Marlowe, Beaumont, Fletcher, and others to a considerable share in their composition.

The derivation of words is given only in obscure cases where it is considered that their etymology may to some extent illuminate their meaning. The treatment of the subject, therefore, even in the instances given, does not profess to be so exhaustive as to satisfy a philological expert.

The compiler may hold an exaggerated idea of the practical use that a book like this is designed to serve. Meanwhile, many are demanding an improved type of school text-book in the English classics, one free from the distraction of notes and the restraints

A SHAKESPEARE WORD-BOOK

A. (1) One.

"These foils have all a length." Ham., V, ii, 250; v. also R. and J., II, iv, 173.

"There is a thing within my bosom tells me." 2 Hen. IV-IV. i. 183. 2 Hen. IV-IV, i, 183.

(3) The same.

"Their legs are both of a bigness." 2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 205.

- (4) A mutilation of the pronoun he. "'A shot a fine shot."
 - 2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 39.
- (5) Used with numeral adjectives. Chaucer, Squiers Tale, 383: ten or twelve." "A many thousand warlike French."

K. J., IV, ii, 199. (6) Used pleonastically. "I would not spend another such a night."

A. Y. L., III, ii, 303.

(2) To walk in an affected manner, to walk affectedly.

"You jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's creatures." Ham., III, i, 144.

AMBSACE. v. Amesace.

AMERCE. To punish with a pecuniary penalty: to inflict a fine or forfeiture. Cf. Spenser, Sonnet LXX, 12:

"Where every one, that misseth then her make.

Shall be by him amerced with penance due."

"I'll amerce you with so strong a fine
That you shall all repent the loss of mine."
R. and J., III, i, 186.

AMESACE (or ambsace). L. ambo, F. as = ace of cards or dice. L. as = (1) a unit, (2) a pound weight. Brachet observes that the word is used as a gambling term in-" J'ai gagné une ambe à la loterie = I have drawn two figures, a pair of chances." The word means a double ace, a name given to two dice turning up ace, hence the lowest throw of the dice. The expression was current in Chaucer's time, v. Prologue to Man of Lawes Tale, 124:

"O noble, O prudent folk, as in this cas! Your bagges ben not filled with ambesas, But with sis cink, that semeth for your chaunce."

Skeat observes on this passage from Chaucer—"The line in the Monke's Tale—"Thy sys fortune hath turned into as'—helps us out here in some measure as it proves that a six was reckoned as a good throw, but an ace as a bad one. So in M.N.D., V, i, 314, we find less than an ace explained as, equivalent to nothing. In the next line sis cink means a six and a five, which was often a winning throw.

. . If the caster throws either seven or eleven (Chaucer's sis cink) he wins; if he throws aces (Chaucer's ambes ace), he loses. . . . In all cases, the double ace is a losing throw."

"I had rather be in this choice than throw ames-ace for my life."

A. W., II, iii, 77.

AMIABLE. (1) Amorous, expressing love.

"Spend all I have, only give me so much of your time in exchange of it as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife. Use your art of wooing," M. W. W., II, ii, 208; v. also M. A., III, iii, 161.

(2) Lovely (not loveable).

Note.—This sense of the word was not formerly restricted to be used only of persons as it now is. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, IV, 250:

"Others whose fruit, burnished with golden rind, Hung amiable."

"While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head."

M. N. D., IV, i, 2.

AMISS. A.S. a, missian = to miss, to err. Amiss = on misse = in a mistake. Cf. Chaucer, Pardoneres Tale, 642: "Tak not my name in ydel or amiss."

I., subs. A fault, calamity, mistake, disaster.

"Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss."

Ham., IV, v, 18; v. also Sonnet XXXV, 7;
CLI, 3.

II., adj. Faulty, wrong, improper. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, V., Intro., 73:

"But most is Mars amisse of all the rest."

"Let us grant it is not Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy."

A. and C., I, iv, 17; v. also Mac., II, i, 221;

K. J., III, i, 270.

III., adv. In a faulty manner, wrongly.

"For that which thou hast sworn to do amiss Is not amiss when it is truly done."

K. J., III, i, 270; v. also Sonnet LIX, 3.

AMORT. F. à la mort = after the manner of the dead.

Dispirited, dejected, depressed.

"How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amort?"
T. of S., IV, iii, 36; v. also I Hen. VI-III, ii, 124.

AMPLE. Adv. Completely.

"I think I know your hostess
As ample as myself."
A. W., III, v, 40; v. also T. of A., I, ii, 115.

- AN. A contracted form of and. Icel. enda=if. Of old the two words were used interchangeably. Horne Tooke derives the word from A.S. unnan=to give. An in Latin means or or whether: in Greek &r is a contraction for édr, meaning if, perchance. Although obsolete in English it still exists in the Scotch dialect: see Scott, The Antiquary, chap. xliv. "Troth, I kenna—an they come so many as they speak o'." Cf. Chaucer, Prologue to The Squire's Tale, 15:
 - "For, and I sholde rekeuen every vice Which that she hath, ywis I were to nice."
 - (1) If.

"Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight."
A. Y. L., IV, i, 48; v. also J. C., I, ii, 258.

(2) Joined with if, and therefore redundant.

"Here shall he see
Gross fools as he
An if he will come to me."

A. Y. L. II. v. 56: v.

A. Y. L., II, v, 56; v. also T. G. V., III, i, 257.

(3) As if. Cf. Coventry Mysteries, p. 80 (Mätznei):

"Ye answer and ye were twenty yere old."

"I will roar you an 't were any nightingale."
M. N. D., I, ii, 72; v. also T. and C.,
I, ii, 189.

(4) Though.

"An thou wert a lion we would do so."
L. L. L., V, ii, 627; v. also M. V., I, ii, 96,
2 Hen. VI-IV, vii, 112.

(5) If but.

"It is best put finger in the eye, an she knew why."

T. of S., I, i, 79.

(6) Whether (used in vulgar language).
"To spy an I can hear my Thisby's face."
M. N. D., V, i, 195.

ANATOMY. (1) A skeleton (death).

"O, that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth!

Then with a passion would I shake the world; And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice."

K. J., III, iv, 40.

(2) A living body, a frame.

"Oh, tell me, friar, tell me, In what vile part of this anatomy Doth my name lodge?"

R. and J., III, iii, 106.

(3) A dead body.

"If he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy."

T. N., III, ii, 56.

(4) A shadow, a spindleshanks, a meagre looking person, a walking skeleton.

"This anatomy Had by his young fair fere a boy."
T. N. K., V, i, 115; v. also C. E., V. i,

ANATOMIZE. (1) To dissect, to lay bare, to examine, to probe.

"The wise man's folly is anatomized Even by the squandering glances of the fool."

A. Y. L., II, vii, 56; v. also A. W., IV, iii, 30.

(2) To describe minutely.

"But should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder. A. Y. L., I, i, 149.

Note.—Armado uses annathonize in this sense, L. L. L., IV, i, 69.

(3) To delineate minutely.

"In her the painter had anatomiz'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's R. of L., 1450.

ANCHOR, 1. A.S. ancer: F. anachorète: L. anachoreta: Gr. ἀναχωρητής, ἀνά= back, $\chi\omega\rho\epsilon\omega = I$ withdraw.

A hermit, an anchorite, one who has retired from the world.

"To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope."

Ham., III, ii, 213.

ANCHOR, 2 (anker). Dut. anker. A Dutch liquid measure. The commentators hold that Nym, in the subjoined quotation, alludes to the scheme for debauching Ford's wife. "The anchor is deep." M. W. W., I, iii, 45.

ANCHORAGE. A vessel's set of anchors. "Lo, as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught, Returns with precious lading to the bay From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage, Cometh Andronicus."

ANCIENT, Adj. F. ancien; antiquus, ante = before.

(1) Old, pertaining to what has existed for some time.

"But they,
Upon their ancient malice, will forget
With the least cause, these his new Honours." Cor., II, i, 218. (2) Aged. Posthumus. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf; Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier; An honest one, I warrant."

Cym., V, iii, 15; v. also T. of S., I, ii, 45

(3) Bygone, former.

"Beshrew your heart, Fair daughter, you do draw my spirits from me

With new lamenting ancient oversights."

2 Hen. IV-II, iii, 47; v. also Rich. III-III, i, 182; Cor., IV, i, 3; T. of S., Ind. ii, 33.

(4) Well advanced.

"Sir, the year growing ancient." W. T., IV, iv, 79.

(5) Steady, sober, orderly, phlegmatic (from long established habits). "Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of your streets And made Verona's ancient citizens. Cost by their grave becoming represents." Cast by their grave beseeming ornaments."

R. and J., I, i, 84.

ANCIENTRY. (1) Deportment of olden time.

"The wedding, mannerly-modest as measure full of state and ancientry." M. A., II, i, 66.

(2) Old people.

"There is nothing in the between but wronging the ancientry, stealing, fighting."
W. T., III, iii, 62.

AND. For its various uses see Abbot's Shakespearian Grammar, §§ 95–105.

ANDIRONS. Various etymologies have been given. Skinner derives it from (a) hand and irons, (b) and and irons, (c) brand and irons. Boucher thinks that and in andirons is the A.S. separable prep. and, Gr. ἀντί, implying opposition, and that and-irons are pieces of iron opposed to each other. Wedgwood believes the true etymology is the Flemish wend-ijser, from wenden = to turn: andiron would then be the rack in front of the kitchen dogs on which the spit turns.

Ornamental irons on each side of the hearth in old houses, which were accompanied with small rests for the ends of the logs. Halliwell observes that the latter were sometimes called dogs, but the term andirons frequently included both, as in the proverb recorded by Howell, "Bauds and attorneyes, like andyrons, the one holds the sticks, the other, their clients, till they consume."

"Her andirons-I had forgot them-were two winking cupids." Cym., II, iv, 88.

ANELE. To administer extreme unction, v. Unaneled.

ANGEL. (1) A messenger from heaven. "Yea, at that very moment, Consideration, like an angel, came." Hen. V-I, i, 27. (2) A good, honest soul.

"But at last I spied An ancient angel coming down the hill Will serve the turn." T. of S., IV, ii, 61.

(3) The object of one's affection. "For Brutus, as you know was Caesar's angel, Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar loved him."

J. C., III, ii, 178. J. C., III, ii, 178.

(4) A person of seeming innocence, purity, and benevolence. "Oh, what may man within him hide, Though angel on the outward side." M. M., III, ii, 245.

(5) A genius, a demon.

"Let the angel whom thou still hast served, tell thee.

Mac., V, viii, 14; v. also 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 187; A. and C., II, iii, 21; Cym., IV, ii, 248.

(6) Sometimes used of a bird, ἄγγελος being in Greek applied to a bird of augury.

"Not an angel of the air,
Bird melodious, or bird fair,
Be absent hence." T. N. K., I, i, 16.
Note.—Skeat remarks—"The same use of the word occurs in Massinger's Virgin Martyn,
I a when the Domen Engle is spoken of as II, 2, where the Roman Eagle is spoken of as 'the Roman angel.' The idea is old as Homer, who uses the expression οἰωνον, ταχῦν ἀγγελον (Iliad xxiv, 292). Observe, too, that angel implies a bird of good omen, to the exclusion of such ill-omened birds as the crow, the cuckoo, and the raven.

(7) A coin of the reign of Edward IV, varying in value from six shillings and eightpence to ten shillings, so called because on one side was a representation of the Archangel Michael in conflict with the Dragon. Cf. M.V., II, vii, 56. "They have in England a coin that bears the figure of an angel stamped in gold."

"Shake the bags

"Shake the bags
Of hoarding abbots: their imprisoned angels
Set them at liberty."

 i Hen. IV-IV, ii, 6; C. E., IV, iii, 41;
 K. J., II, i, 590.

Note.—There seems a play upon words in Shakespeare's use of the term in 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 186; K. J., V, ii, 64; M. W. W., I, iii, 60;
 M. A., II, iii, 35.

ANGERLY. Angrily. Cf. Langland, Piers the Plowman's Crede (Skeat), p. 268: "And angerlich y wandrede the Austyns to prove."

"I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word, Nor look upon the iron angerly."

K. J., IV, i, 82; v. also Mac., III, v, i;
T. G. V., I, ii, 62.

ANGLE. NGLE. (1) A fishing-rod, tackle, and hook. Cf. Habbak. i, 15: "They take up all of them with the angle, they catch them in their net, and gather them in their drag.'

"Give me mine angle; we'll to the river." 4. C., II, v, 10. (2) Lure, bait, attraction.

"That's likewise part of my intelligence, but, I fear, the angle that plucks our son thither." W. T., IV, ii, 42; v. also Ham., V, ii, 66.

A-NIGHT. At night, during the night. Cf. Chaucer, The Clerke's Tale, 464: "He cam alone anyghte."

> "I remember when I was in love I broke My sword upon a stone and bid him take That for coming a-night to Jane Smile."

"Celestial Dian, goddess argentine, I will obey thee." Per., V, i, 250.

A corruption of the Latin ergo = therefore.

"Argo, then their thread of life is spun." 2 Hen. VI.-IV, ii. 27.

ARGOSY. Various conjectures have been made regarding the etymology of this word. It has been supposed to be a corruption of Ragosie, for a ship of Ragusa Ital. una(nave).Ragusa in sixteenth century English appears as Arageuse, Aragosa. Pope and others have supposed it to come from the classical ship Argo, as a vessel eminently famous.

A merchantman.

"Some troops pursue the bloody-minded

That led calm Henry, though he were a King, As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust, Command an argosy to stem the waves."

3 Hen. VI-II, vi. 35; v. also T. of S., II, i, 368; M. V., I, i, 9.

K. J., III, iv, 2; v. also C. E., III, ii, 133.

ARM-GAUNT. A very puzzling word, and one peculiar to Shakespeare. In structure, some commentators compare it to arm-gret (= as thick as a man's arm) as used by Chaucer, "A wreth of gold arm-gret." Warburton, on the whole, gives the best interpretation,—" worn out by military service"; and he suggests that by a transference of the epithet from the horse to its master, the military activity and experiences of the latter are implied.

"So he nodded, And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke Was beastly dumb'd by him." A. and C., I, v, 39.

ARMIGERO. The ablative case of armiger = bearer of arms or esquire, an attendant on a knight. The form of attestation to which Slender refers, would begin-" Coram me A.B. armigero etc.'

> "A gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself armigero, in any bill warrant." M. W. W., I, i, 8.

ARMIPOTENT. Mighty in war: Chaucer has "Ther stood the temple of Mars armipotent." v. also Fairfax, Godfrey of Boulogne:

"For if our God, the Lord armipotent,
Those arméd angels in our aid down send,
That were at Dathan to His prophet sent,
Thou wilt come down with them."

"This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist and the armipotent soldier."

A. W., IV, iii, 216; v. also L. L. L., V, ii, 645.

(1) Defensive weapons.

"Like unscoured armour hung by the wall."
M. M., I, ii, 158.

(2) A suit of armour.

"Thou dost sit Like a rich armour worn in heat of day, That scalds with safety." 2 Hen. IV-IV, v, 30; v. also Hen. V-III, vii, 3; M. A., II, iii, 17.

(3) Anything that serves for a defence. "The single and peculiar life is bound, With all the strength and armour of the mind To keep itself from noyance." Ham., III, iii, 12.

ARMOURER. (1) A maker of armour. " Now thrive the armourers."

Hen. V, II, Prol. 3.

(2) One that fits on armour. "Thou art the armourer of my heart." A. and C., IV, iv, 7.

ARMS. (1) Weapons (offensive or defensive).

> " Come the three corners of the world in arms, And we shall shock them.'

K. J., V, vii, 116. (2) Armorial bearings, or insignia, to identify knights encased in armour.

"This is the very top,
The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,
Of murder's arms."

K. J., IV, iii, 47.

AROINT. Several derivations been suggested for this word. Some connect the Provincial English "rynt ye"= by your leave, stand handsomely. Ray, in his North Country Words, associates the word with a witch, as in the passages from Shakespeare below—"Rynt you witch, quoth Besse Locket to her mother." The milkmaids in Cheshire use the word still. When the cow stands improperly and presses too close upon her, she pushes the animal from her while saying "Aroint thee." Other critics give for its etymology L. averunco=I avert, the participle of which might be formed into aroint as point is from punctum, and joint from junctum. Pope thinks that it might be connected with avaunt. Begone, give place, avaunt.

" 'Aroint thee, witch,' the rump-fed ronyon

Mac., I, iii, 6; v. also K. L., III, iv, III. Note.—Scott (Quentin Durward, XXXVI) uses the word in a similar sense—" Aroint thee, deceitful witch."

AROW. In a row, successively, one after another.

"My master and his man are both broke loose, Beaten the maids a-row."

C. E., V, i, 170.

Probably a variant of errant from L. erro. The term is usually associated with opprobrious names, and is applied to objectionable persons or things. The opprobrious sense is not always present, however, as, e.g., see Scott's Lady of the Lake, VI, 9:

"Come ye to seek a champion's aid, On palfrey white, with harper hoar, Like arrant (= wandering) damosel of yore?"

" true Ford, The Fancies, uses and arrant (manifest) ladies." Cowper, Hope, has, "weeds, arrant (=rank) weeds."

Thoroughgoing, outstanding, downright.

"There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark, But he's an arrant knave."

Ham., I, v, 125; v. also M. A., III, v, 29; 2 Hen. IV-V, i, 28; Hen. V-III, vi, 58.

ARRAS. A superior kind of tapestry, so called from Arras, a town in Artois in the French Netherlands, the chief seat of the manufacture. Between the arras and the walls of a room there were generally large spaces, used as convenient hiding-places. Dr. Johnson thinks Shakespeare has outstepped · probability in finding accommodation for Falstaff, of no moderate size, behind the arras, but Malone has shown that still larger bulks might be concealed there. "Pyrrhus, to terrify Fabius, commanded his guard to place an elephant behind the arras." At a meeting between Queen Mary and Elizabeth, Philip of Spain was concealed behind the arras or tapestry.

"Be you and I behind an arras." Ham., II, ii, 163; v. also 1 Hen. IV-II, iv, 462; K. J., IV, i, 2.

"Augurs (augures) and understood relations

By magot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth

The secret'st man of blood."

Mac., III, iv, 124.

(2) A prophet.

"The sad augurs mock their own presage."
Sonnet CVII, 6.

AUGURER. An augur, an official among the Romans who professed to foretell future events from the flight of birds (L. avis=a bird, Ger. gur=telling, L. garrio=I chatter), the entrails of sacrificial victims, the heavenly bodies, etc. Shakespeare never uses augur in this sense, except in The Phoenix and the Turtle, line 7.

"The persuasion of his augurers
May hold him from the Capitol to-day."

J. C., II, i, 199; v. also A. and C., IV, 12,
4; V., ii, 332; Cor., II, i, 1.

 "And dare avow her beauty and her worth."
 T. and C., I, iii, 271.
 - (2) To assert.

"Of which there is not one, I dare avow,
. . . but will deserve

Hen. VIII-IV, ii, 142.

AWAY WITH. Usually with a negative. The phrase is to be explained by the ellipsis of a verb. "I cannot away with"=I cannot get on the way (or along) with.

To put up with, to bear with, to endure, to tolerate. Cf. Isaiah, i, 13:

"The calling of assemblies I cannot away with." Cf. also Barham, Ingoldsby Legends (1864):

Legends (1864):
"I cannot away with that horrible din
That sixpenny drum and that trumpet of tin."

"She never could away with me." 2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 187.

- AWELESS. (1) Not feeling awe, fearless.

 "Against whose fury and unmatched force
 The aweless lion could not wage the fight."

 K. J., I, 1, 236.
 - (2) Not inspiring awe.

 "Insulting tyranny begins to jut
 Upon the innocent and aweless throne."
 Rich. III-II, iv, 52.

 "We come within our awful banks again."
 2 Hen. IV-IV, i, 176.
- AWKWARD. (1) Distorted, unbecoming, clumsily contrived.

"'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim,
Picked from the wormholes of long vanish'd days."

Hen. V-II, iv, 85.

(2) Contrary, untoward, adverse. Cf. Drayton's Poems:

"And undertook to travaile dangerous waies, Driven by awkward winds and boisterous seas."

> "Was I for this nigh wrecked upon the sea, And twice by awkward wind from England's bank > Drove back again unto my native clime?" 2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 85; v. also Per., V, i, 93.

AWORK. To work. Cf. Ben Jonson, The Case is Alter'd, II, 5:

"I'll set his burning nose once more awork."

"Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work."

Ham., II, ii, 464. v. also 2 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 105; T. and C., V, x, 38; K. L., III, v, 6; R. of L., 1,496.

"What should the people do with these bald tribunes?" Cor., III, i, 163; v. also 1 Hen. IV-I, iii, 65; K. L., I, iv, 151.

BALE. A.S. bealu = woe, mischief, depravity.

Grief, trouble, sorrow: Cf. Spenser, Daphnaide, 320:

"Let now your bliss be turned into bale."

"The one side must have bale.

Cor., I, i, 166.

BALK. A.S. balca = a heap, a ridge, a piece of land missed in ploughing. Vb., (1) To pile up in a ridge or hillock. "Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty knights. Balk'd in their own blood, did Sir Walter I Hen. IV-I, i, 69. see."

(2) To miss one's hope, wish, or aim, hence, to frustrate, to thwart.

> "This was looked for at your hand and this was balked." T. N., III, ii, 22.

(3) To leave unmeddled, to pass over as a "balk" in a field is passed unploughed, hence, to disregard, to neglect. Cf. Davies, Scourge of Folly (1611):

"Learn'd and judicious lord, if I should balke Thyne honor'd name, it being in my way, My muse unworthy were of such a walke Where honour's branches make it ever May."

"Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk The prey wherein by nature they delight.' Note.—The word is used intransitively, meaning to be silent, in Spenser's Faeric Queene, IV, x, 225: "Ne ever for rebuke or blame of any balk'd."

(4) Coyly to say the opposite of what one thinks, or, intentionally to miss the drift of an argument with the view of drawing out a person with whom the speaker wishes to be in friendly dispute. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, ii, 102:

"But to occasion him to further talke, To feed her humour with his pleasing style, Her list in stryfull termes with him to balke."

"Balk logic with acquaintance that you have." T. of S., I, i, 34.

BALLAD. Vb., To write and sing ballads and assail people with them.

" Scald rhymes Ballad us out o' tune."

A. and C., V, ii, 216.

BALLOW. Connected with balk = a beam, and bole = the round stem of a tree. A cudgel, a stick, a pole.

"I'se try whether your costard or my ballow be the harder." K. L., IV, vi, 217.

BALM. I., subs. (1) Consecrated oil. "Not all the water in the rough, rude sea Can wash the balm off an anointed king."

Rich. II-III, ii, 55; v. also I Hen. IV-III, ii, 142; 3 Hen. VI-III, i, 17. (2) Medicinal ointment.

"Instead of oil and balm, Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me

The knife that made it."

T. and C., I, i, 59.

II., vb. (1) To anoint, to impregnate with balm or some odoriferous substance.

(2) To soothe, to assuage, to heal. "This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews.

K. L., III, vi, 96.

BAN. A.S. bannan = to proclaim, ban = a proclamation, banishment.

(1) An announcement of an intended marriage; used in the plural and usually spelt banns.

"I, her husband, contradict your bans." K. L., V, iii, 85; v. also 1 Hen. IV-IV, ii,

(2) A curse.

"With Hecate's ban, thrice blasted, thrice infected. Ham., III, ii, 248; v. also K. L., II, iii, 19.

BANBURY CHEESE. A reference to the thinness of Slender is made in the expression that follows, Banbury cheese being proverbially thin. Cf. Jack Drum's Entertainment, as quoted by Steevens—" Put off your cloathes, and you are like a Banbury Cheesenothing but paring." See also Heywood's Epigrams:

"I never saw Banbury cheese thick enough, But I have often seen Essex cheese quick enough,"
"You Banbury cheese!"

M. W. W., I, i, 117.

BAND. (1) Anything that unites.

" Here's eight that must take hands To join in Hymen's bands." A. Y. L., V, iv, 131.

(2) A bond.

"Tell me, was he arrested on a band?"

BANDITTO. Adj. Ital. bandito (adj.) = banished, published: (subs.) = an outlaw, a highwayman, connected with ban. Pertaining to an outlaw.

> "A Roman sworder and banditto slave Murther'd sweet Tully."

2 Hen. VI-IV, i, 135.

BANDOG. Properly a band-dog, or bounddog: a dog so large and of such a character as to require the restraint of a band: a mastiff, or a cross between a mastiff and a bull. Cf. Spenser, "We hau great Shep. Cal. 163: bandogs will teare their skinne." From their terrific howling they are sometimes introduced in descriptions of night, to heighten the horror of the picture.

> "The time when screech-owls cry, and bandogs howl." 2 Hen. VI-I, iv, 12.

The origin is obscure, perhaps BANDY. connected with Sp. banda=a side. Shakespeare and the old dramatists make use of this metaphor very frequently from the game of tennis in which the ball is bandied (struck backward and forward) from each end of the court.

A. intr. To strive, to contend.

"I will bandy with thee in faction." "One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons."

T. A., I, I, i, 312.

To exchange anything with another person by driving it to and fro like a tennis ball.

> "My words would bandy her to my sweet love, And his to me."

> And ins to line:
> R. and J., II, v, 14; v. also K. L., I, iv, 79;
> K. L., II, iv, 170; 3 Hen. VI-I, iv, 49;
> L. L. L., V, ii, 29; T. of S., V, ii, 172.
> Note.—For noun bandying see R. and J.,
> III, i, 86; and I Hen. VI-IV, i, 190.

> "Let Rome herself be bane unto herself." T. A., V, iii, 73; v. also M. M., I, ii, 121.

(2) Harm, evil, ruin.

"I will not be afraid of death and bane." Mac., V, iii, 59.

II., vb. To poison, to destroy.

"What if my house be troubled with a rat And I be pleased to give ten thousand ducats To have it baned."

M. V., IV, i, 46.

BANK. Vb. To coast along the bank on which towns stood.

"Have I not heard these islanders shout out 'Vive le roi!' as I have bank'd their towns?"

Note,—Staunton suggests an allusion to card-playing and to bank = to win or to put in bank or rest; Schmidt puts forward the conjecture that the word may be equivalent to the Fe glooder to load in to the Fr. aborder = to land in.

BANQUET. (1) A word often used by Shakespeare to signify a feast, or entertainment.

> "We have a trifling foolish banquet towards." R. and J., I, v, 120; v. also A. Y. L., II, v, 61.

(2) The word often meant a dessert after dinner. According to Gifford the banquet was usually placed in a separate room to which the guests removed after they had dined. Compare Massinger, natural Combat:

> "We'll dine in the great room, but let the music and banquet be prepared here.'

See also Taylor, Pennilesse Pilgrim: "our first and second course being three score dishes at one boord, and after that always a banquet." Evelyn used it in this sense as late as 1685, though the modern signification had already come into partial use :-- "The was twelve vast banquet (dessert) chargers pil'd up so high, that those who sat one against another could Of these hardly see each other. sweetmeats the ambassadors tasted not" (Memoirs).

"My banquet is to close our stomachs up,

After our great good cheer."

T. of S., V, ii, 9; v. also T. of A., I, ii, 139.

Note.—A running banquet was (1) a hasty refreshment, used in a lascivious sense (Hen. VIII-I, iv, 12); (2) used for a whipping, as the dessert of rioters after the regular course of limbo (Hen. VIII-V, iv, 54).

(3) Fig. Feast for the mind. "In his commendations I am fed It is a banquet to me."

Mac., I, iv, 56.

BARB, 1. Used by corruption for barde: F. barde = scaly horse armour, the general name for the several pieces of defensive armour with which the horses of knights were covered in war. Cf. Heyward (quoted by Nares):-"Their horses were naked, without any barbs, for albeit many brought barbs few regarded to put them on.' To caparison, to accoutre.

> "His glittering arms he will commend to rust, His barbed steeds to stables."

> Rich. II-III, iii, 117; v. also Rich. III-I, i, 10.

Note.—Unbarbed (=uncovered) is similarly employed in Cor., III, ii, 99; "Must I go show them my unbarbed sconce?"

BARB, 2. L. barba = a beard.

To shave, to dress or trim the beard. Cf. Promos and Cassandra, (1578).

"And who barbes you Grimball? A dapper knave, one Rosco. Row. Grim. I know him not. Is he a deaft barber?" Row.

> "Shave the head and tie the beard, and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so barbed before his death." M. M., IV, ii, 170.

BARBARISM. (1) Cruelty, relentless hardness of heart, the quality of a barbarian.

> "They must perforce have melted, And barbarism itself have pitied him." Rich. II-V, ii, 36.

- (2) Ill-bred people, (abst., for concr.) "Lest barbarism, making me the precedent, Should a like language use to all degrees." W. T., II, i, 80.
- BARBER'S CHAIR. A proverbial expression for accommodating all buttocks, and answering all purposes, found in Ray's Proverbs and elsewhere. Steevens quotes More Fooles Yet (1610):

"Moreover sattin sutes he doth compare Unto the service of a barber's chayre; As fit for every Jacke and journeyman, As for a knight or worthy gentleman."

" It is like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks." A. W., II, ii, 15. BARBER-MONGER. A term of contempt applied to a person dressed out by a barber, a finical fop.

"Draw, you cullionly barber-monger, draw."

BARFUL. Full of obstacles.

" I'll do my best To woo your lady; (aside) yet, a barful strife! Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife." T. N., I, iv, 40.

Consisting of bark, resembling BARKY. bark.

> "The female ivy so Enrings the barky fingers of the elm." M. N. D., IV, i, 41.

BARLEY-BREAK. A rural game often alluded to in the old dramatists. Dr. Jamieson, in Barla-breikis or barleybracks, thus describes the method of playing it in Scotland:-" A game generally played by young people in a corn yard. Hence called, Barley-bracks about the stacks. One stack is fixed on as the dule or goal, and one person is appointed to catch the rest of the company who run out from the dule. He does not leave it till they are all out of sight. Then he sets out to catch Any one who is taken cannot run out again with his former associates, being accounted a prisoner, but is obliged to assist his captor in pursuing the rest. When all are taken, the game is finished; and he who is first taken is bound to act as catcher in the next game." Gifford thus describes it as it is played in England :--" It was played by six people (three of each sex) who were coupled by lot. A piece of ground was then chosen, and divided into three compartments, of which the middle one was called hell. It was the object of the couple condemned to this division to catch the others, who advanced from the two extremities: in which case a change of situation took place, and hell was filled by the couple who were excluded by preoccupation from the other places: in thus "catching," however, there was some difficulty, as, by the regulations of the game, the middle couple were not to separate before they had succeeded, while the others might break hands whenever they found themselves hard When all had been taken in turn, the last couple were said to be in hell, and the game ended." Cf. the description of it by Sir Philip Sidney in the Arcadia:

"Then couples three be straight allotted there, They of both ends the middle two do flie, The two that in mid place, hell called, were Must strive with waiting foot and watching

To catch of them, and them to hell to beare That they, as well as they, hell may supply."

"Sometime we go to barley-break." T. N. K., IV, ii, 26.

Cant term for strong BARLEY-BROTH. beer.

> "Can sodden water, A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barleybroth.

Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat." Hen. V-III, v, 19.

BARN (Barne), 1. Scotch bairn, connected with bear.

A child.

"Mercy on's, a barne: a very pretty barne!
A boy or a child I wonder."
W. T., III, iii, 74; v. also M. A., III, iv, 42.

"They say barnes are blessings."

A. W., I, iii, 25.

BARN, 2. Vb. A.S. bere = barley, and aern = a place.

To store up (only once used as a verb by Shakespeare).

"But like still-pining Tantalus he sits, And useless barns the harvest of his wits." R. of L., 859.

BARNACLE. A name for the Bernacle goose, absurdly believed to be sprung from the barnacle which is found adhering to floating logs of wood, the Rolfe quotes timbers of ships, etc. Marston's Malcontent, III, i, 49: "Any one that shall do so (i.e. flatter greatness) shall be sure to be like your Scotch barnacle, now a block, instantly a worm, and presently a great goose." Max Müller believes that the bird was originally called Hibernicula, which was converted into Bernicula by the dropping of the first syllable, after which the similarity of the names led to the two being confounded together and generated the myth.

"I will have none on't; we shall lose our time,
And all be turned to barnacles, or to apes

And all be turned to barnacles, or to apes With foreheads villainous low."

Temp., IV, i, 244.

BARREN. (1) Sterile.

"Nothing can we call our own but death, And that small model of the barren earth Which serves as paste and cover to our bones." Rich. II-111, ii, 153.

(2) Witless, uninventive, dull.

"There be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too."

Ham., III, il, 38; v. also M. N. D., III, ii, 13; T. N., I, v, 76.

(3) Not descending to posterity.

"Upon my head they placed a fruitless crown And put a barren sceptre in my gripe." Mac., 111, i, 62.

BARRICADO. I., subs. A rampart to resist the advance of a foe.

"Why, it hath bay windows transparent as burricadoes." T. N., IV, ii. 35.

II., vb. To obstruct, to preserve from intrusion.

"Man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?"

A. W., I, i, 113.

BASE. (The form bars seems the older one. Base is apparently a corruption of it. The name bars is said to have been given because the place in which it was first played was, figuratively speaking, "barred" off from the intrusion of those not in the game.) A rustic game for children, the full name of which was prison-base or prison-bars. The game consisted chiefly of running and catching those of the opposite side, until all were sent to prison.

"Athwart the lane, He, with two striplings—lads more like to

The country base than to commit such slaughter." Cym., V, iii, 20.

BASE (to bid a) = To run fast, challenging another to pursue. Cf. Spenser, Shep. Cal., October 5: "In rymes, in riddles, and in byding base."

"To bid the wind a base he now prepares"
(i.e. to challenge the wind to run a race).

"I bid the base for Proteus" (the allusion is obscure, although evidently referring to the fastest runner winning).

T. G. V., I, ii, 97.

BASES. F. bas = bottom, feet, lower part, stocking, hose.

"A kind of embroidered mantle which hung down from the middle to about the knees or lower, worn by knights on horseback" (Nares). Cf. Sidney's Arcadia—"About his middle hee had, insteade of bases, a long cloak of silke." V. also, Butler's Hudibras:—"With gauntlet blue and bases white." In Spenser's Faerie

Queene, V, v, 180, the word is used to represent armour for the legs:

"And put before his lap an apron white, Instead of curiets and bases fit for fight."

"I yet am unprovided Of a pair of bases." Per. II, i, 147.

BASILISCO-LIKE. The allusion is to a bragging cowardly knight in the Tragedie of Soliman and Perseda attributed to Kyd. Nares remarks—"This is an allusion to an old play, entitled Soliman and Perseda, in which a foolish knight, called Basilisco, speaking of his own name, adds, knight, good fellow, knight, knight: and is answered immediately, knave good fellow, knave, knave."

K. J., I, i, 244.

BASILISK. (1) A fabulous animal whose look and breath were fatal, a cockatrice.

"It is a basilisk unto mine eye, Kills me to look on't."

Cym., II, iv, 107; v. also 2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 52; Rich. III-I, ii, 152; W. T., I, ii, 376.

(2) Heavy artillery, an obsolete cannon perhaps resembling the animal in its deadly effect.

" And thou hast talk'd

Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin."

1 Hon. IV-II, iii, 49.

BASS. Vb. To utter in a deep, grave tone.

"It did bass my trespass."

Temp., III, iii, 99.

 CI. "bateless edge" (R. of L., 9), "a sword unbated" (Ham., IV, 7, 139), "unbated and envenom'd (Ham., V, 2, 328).
- (4) To become less, to waste away. "Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? Do I not bate?"

 1 Hen. IV-111, iii, 2.
- (5) To abridge, to curtail. " No leisure bated."

Ham., V, II, 23.

(6) To except.

"Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated, The rest I'd give to be to you translated."

M. N. D., 1, i, 190; v. also A. W., II, i, 12.

(7) To reduce, to attenuate, to weaken. "These griefs and iosses have so bated me, That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh." M. V., III, iii, 32; v. also Sonnet LXII, 10.

BATE, 3, bait, 2 (q.v.). Vb. F. battre = to beat : L. battuo.

A term in falcoury; to flutter the wings as preparing for flight, particularly at the sight of prey. Dyer quotes Holmes' Acad. of Armory, quotes Holmes' Acad. of Armory, "Bate, Bateing, or Bateth, is when the Hawk fluttereth with her Wings either from Perch or Fist, as it were striving to get away." Nares cites Bacon: "I would to God I were hooded, that I saw less: or that I could perform more: for now I am like a hawk that bates, when I see occasion of service; but I cannot fly because I am ty'd to another's fist."

"To make her come, and know her keeper's call,

That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites
That bate, and beat, and will not be obedient."
T. of S., IV, i, 170; v. also R. and J.,
III, ii, 14; 1 Hen. IV-IV, i, 99.
Note.—In r Hen. IV-IV, i, 99; bated, though apparently passive, is used actively—bating.

BATE-BREEDING. Breeding strife, causing quarrel.

"This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy." V. and A., 655.

BATELESS. Not to be blunted.

" Haply that name of 'chaste' unhappily set This batcless edge on his keen appetite."
R. of L., 9.

BATLET. A dim. of bat, a flat wooden mallet with which washerwomen beat their clothes.

"I remember the kissing of her batlet." A. Y. L., 11, iv, 48.

An old singular noun, not BATTALIA. the plural of battalion.

"This drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole."

R. and J., II, iv, 82.

(A licentious allusion is made to this use of the word in A. W., IV, v, 32). II., adj. Miniature, showy, insignificant.

"The sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast."

T. and C., I, iii, 35.

BAVIN. Literally a brush fagot, made of light combustible matter and used for lighting fires. Cf. Lyly's Mother Bombie: "Bavins will have their flashes and youths their fancies, the one as soon quenched as the other is burnt," and Greene, Never Too Late to Mend: "Love is like a bavin, but a blaze." Vaughan remarks that in the statutes of Harrow School, founded in the sixteenth century, there is a provision for the supply of "ash bavins" to light fires. Adj. Easily burnt out and extinguished. "The skipping King, he ambled up and down

With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits."

I Hen. IV-III, ii, 61.

(10) The surface of a thing. "March so many miles upon her peaceful bosom." Rich. II-II, iii, 93. Rich. II-II, iii, 93.

(11) An enclosure.

"This is the way To Julius Caesar's ill-erected tower,
To whose flint bosom my condemned lord
Is doomed."

Rich. II-V, i, 3.

(12) Depth, inmost recesses.

"Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,

Through night's black bosom should not peep again." R. of L., 788.

(13) Phrase: to the bosom. The superscriptions of letters were formerly addressed to the bosom of a lady, and Steevens observes that women anciently had a pocket in the fore part of their stays, in which they not only carried love-letters and love-tokens, but even their money and materials for needlework; and he mentions an old lady who remembered it to be a piece of gallantry to drop letters or other literary favours there, the stays being worn very prominent. "To her excellent white bosom these."

Ham., II, ii, 113; v. also T. G. V., III, i, 250.

II., vb. (1) To admit to confidence. "I am doubtful that you have been conjunct And bosom'd with her." K. L., V, i, 13. K. L., V, i, 13.

BOTTLE LIKE A CAT (Hang me in). Dyce observes—"It appears that cats were enclosed, with a quantity of soot, in wooden bottles suspended on a line, and that he who could beat out the bottom of the bottle as he ran under it, and yet escape its contents, was the hero of the sport."

"If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat and shoot at me."

M. A., I, i, 226. shoot at me." M. A., I, i, 226.
Note.—Steevens quotes Warres or the Peace is Broken: "arrowes flew faster than they did at a catte in a basket."

BOTTLED SPIDER. This expression has caused considerable difficulty among commentators. One would be inclined to give this as an example of metathesis (a change in the order of the sounds in a word) if other examples could be found of this tendency in the writings of Shakespeare. The term occurs twice in the same play. If this explanation were feasible then "bottled spider" might be equivalent to "bloated spider."

"Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider?" Rich. III-I, iii, 242.

spider?"

"Help me curse
That bottled spider."

R "Help me curse
That bottled spider." Rich. III-IV, iv, 81.
Note.—Ritson suggests "a large, bloated, glossy spider, supposed to contain venom proportionate to its size." A writer in The Edinburgh Review, July, 1868, however, observes that "this explanation misses the peculiar force of the epithet bottled, which is exactly equivalent to bunch-backed, and like it emphazies. Richard's deformity. like it emphazises Richard's deformity.
'That bottled spider,' therefore, literally means that humped or hunched venomous creature. The term bottled is still provinciany applied to the big, large-bodied, round-backed spider, that in the summer and backet spiter, that in the summer and autumn spreads its web across open spaces in the hedges 'obvious to vagrant flies.' What, also, has escaped the commentators, the word bottle was used with this precise signification for a hunch or hump in Shake-spears' come day. signification for a future or future in Shake-speare's own day. In a popular work pub-lished a few years before he came to London, and with which he was familiar, we find 'bottles of flesh' given as a synonym for great wens in the throat—the Italian word great wens in the tingar—the rainal word gozzuti being glossed in the margin as follows: 'men in the mountaynes with great bottels of flesh under their chin through the drinking of snow water.' We still retain this meaning or nesn under their chin through the drinking of snow water.' We still retain this meaning of the word in a number of phrases and epithets, such as bottlenose, a big or bunchy nose: bottlehead, provincial for great, thick, or blockhead; and, not to multiply examples, in the bluebottle fly, which is literally the bunchy or unwieldy blue fly."

M. W. W., I, iii, 2; v. also M. W. W., II, i, 178, 183.

BUM-BAILEY (Bum-bailiff). Supposed to be bound-bailey = bailiff of humble character, who served writs and made arrests, so called bound because he was bound by guarantees to execute the duties of his office. Both Wedgwood and Skeat dissent from this view, and hold that the name was applied by the common-people contemptuously to the functionary who caught those he was pursuing by the hinder part of the garments (bum = buttock). Cf. The Old Law, III, i, 172: "You are a bailiff, whose place is to come behind other men, as it were in the bum of all the rest.

An inferior sheriff's officer.

"Go, Sir Andrew, scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-bailiff." T. N., III, iv, 160.

BUNCH OF GRAPES. The name of a room in an inn. M. M., II, i, 133.

"Come, we burn daylight, no!"
R. and J., I, iv, 43; v. also M. W. W.,
II, i, 48.

BURNING DEVIL. An allusion to the disease called brenning or venereal burning.

"A burning devil take them."

T. and C., V, ii, 194.

BURNING-GLASS. A lens which collects the rays of the sun and produces intense heat.

"The appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me like a burning-glass." M. W. W., I, iii, 59.

BURST. To break.

"And then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men."

2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 295; v. also T. of S.,
I, Ind., i, 7; III, ii, 55; IV, i, 69.

BUSH (Good wine needs no). A good thing needs no special advertisement. A. Y. L., Epil. 4.

Note.—The allusion is to the bush of ivy, formerly the sign of a vintner. Cf. Gascoigne, Glass of Government (1575): "Nowadays the good wyne needeth none ivye garland."

BUSKY. Same as bosky. Low L. boscus = a wood : Ger. busch = a wood.

Woody.

"How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above you bosky hill." I Hen. IV-V, i, 2.

F. baiser = to kiss: Ger. bussen, L. basio = a kiss.

I., vb. (1) To kiss (now with only a vulgar or ludicrous application).

"Come, grin on me, and I will think thou smilest

And buss thee as thy wife."

K. J., III, iv, 35.

(2) To come into close contact with.

"Thy knee bussing the stones." Cor., III, ii, 75; v. also T. and C., IV, v, II., subs. A kiss.

"Thou dost give me flattering busses." 2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 225.

BUSYLESS. A very much disputed word among the commentators who have proposed numerous emendations, the chief being—"busy, least," "busy-blest," "busy, lest," "busy felt," "busy left."

Unburdened, or unencumbered with work.

"But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours,

Most busyless, when I do it."

Temp., III, i, 15. Cf. the following epigram with a counter meaning: "Some people are busiest when they have least to do."

(1) Except.

"If you misdoubt me that I am not she, I know not how I shall assure you further, But I shall lose the grounds I work upon." A. W., III, vii, 3; v. also A. and C., I, i, 43.

(2) If not, unless.

"The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings."

A. and C., V, i, 27; v. also T. of S., III, i, 60; A. and C., IV, xi, r.

(3) So as not.

"It is enough my hearing shall be punish'd With what shall happen, 'gainst the which there is No deafing but to hear."

T. N. K., V, iii, 9.

(4) Otherwise than.

"I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother."

Temp., I, ii, 119; v. also Rich. III-I, iii, 287.
"Who shall believe

But you misuse the reverence of your place."

2 Hen. IV-IV, ii, 23.

(5) Except that, unless that, were it not that.

"And but my noble Moor Is true of mind, and made of no such business As jealous creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill thinking,"

Oth., III, iv, 25.

(6) To prevent that.

"Have you no countermand for Claudio yet But he must die to-morrow."

(7) Neg. rel. = who not.

"No man here but honours you."

J. C., II, i, 91.

(8) Only.
 "More, she's a traitor, and Camillo is
 A federary with her, and one that knows
 What she should shame to know herself
 But with her most vile principal, that she's
 A bed-swerver." W. T., II, i, 88.

(9) That not.

"It must not be denied but I am a plain dealing villain." M. A., I, iii, 27.

(10) Nevertheless.

"Were you a woman, I should woo hard but be your groom." Cym., III, vi, 70.

BUT AS. Only as it were.

"He hath but as offended in a dream."
M. M., II, ii, 4.

BUTCHERLY. Butcher-like, cruel, murderous.

"What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly, This deadly quarrel daily doth beget."

3 Hen. VI-II, v, 89.

BUTCHERY. (1) A shambles, a slaughter house.

"This house is but a butchery."
A. Y. L., II, iii, 27.

(2) Cruel slaughter of human beings on an extensive scale.
"Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn To do this piece of ruthful butchery."
Rich. III-IV, iii, 5.

BUTT. F. but = a butt, mark, aim: butte = a hillock, a goal.

(1) A target, elevated ground in which the target was fixed, used in plural, see Scott, Lady of the Lake, V, 22:

"But, chief beside the butts, there stand Both Robin Hood and all his band."

"I am your butt and I abide your shot."
3 Hen. VI-I, 4.

(2) Goal, end, place to be reached.

"Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
The very sea-mark of my utmost sail."

Oth., V, ii, 266.

(3) Any obtuse lump: cf. emmet-but= an ant-heap.

"Why, no, you ruinous butt."

T. and C., V, i, 26.

BUTT-SHAFT. A kind of arrow used in shooting at the butts, made without a barb, so as to stick and be easily extracted.

"The very pin of his heart cleft with the blind boy's butt-shaft."
R. and J., II, iv, 16; v. also L. L. L., I, ii, 164.

BUTTER-WOMEN'S RACK TO MARKET. Rack, connected with vb. rock= to go with a swaying motion.

Going at a quick amble like butter-

women to market.
"It is the right butter-women's rack to market.

A. Y. L., III, ii, 86.

Note.—In Holme's Armoury "rack" is defined as "a pace wherein the horse neither Trots or Ambles, but is between both." Cf. The Field, October 17, 1885: "Col. Dodge's definition of a rack is that it is half-way between a pace and a trot."

BUTTERY. F. bouteille=a bottle, a corruption of botelerie=a botlery, a place for bottles. As butter and other provisions were kept in butteries the word easily became corrupted.

A pantry, a room for provisions.

"Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery."
T. of S., Ind, I, 102; v. also T. N., I, iii, 65.

BUTTON. F. bouton = a bud.

(2) A knob on a cap.

"On Fortune's cap we are not the very button."

Ham., II, ii, 225.

(3) A catch for a dress.
"Pray you, undo this button."

K. L., V, iii, 310.

(4) Power: perhaps alluding to an old idea of bachelor's buttons having some dominancy in amatory matters.

"He will carry 't; 'tis in his buttons."
M. W. W., III, ii, 60.

BUXOM. A.S. bocsum=obedient, tractable; bugan=to bend, yield. "This word exhibits a singular change of meaning, from the original notion of obedience to that of brisk, cheerful, healthy, in the confined application of modern times. . . As pliableness and gentleness are the distinguishing features of woman, the word seems to have been mainly applied as a term of commendation to a young woman, and so to have passed on to designate other admired characteristics of female society, cheerfulness, liveliness, and what tends to produce it, vigorous health " (Wedgwood).

(1) Yielding, obedient, disciplined. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, ii, 202: " Of them that to him buxome are and prone."

"Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of heart And of buxom valour."

Hen. V-III, vi, 24.

(2) Fresh, lively, brisk. Cf. Milton, L'allegro, 24: "buxom, blithe, and debonair." "This king unto him took a fere, Who died and left a female heir, So buxom, blithe, and full of face."

Per., I, Ind 23.

BUY (Buye). To pay for, to suffer for, to aby (q.v.).

CANDLE CASE. A receptacle for candle

"Petruchio is coming in a new hat and an old jerkin, a pair of old breeches thrice turned, a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another laced."

T. of S., III, ii, 44.

CANDLE ENDS (To drink off). Nares observes: "A piece of romantic extravagance long practised by amorous gallants. It may perhaps be asked why drinking off candles' ends for flapdragons should be esteemed an agreeable qualification. The answer is, that as a feat of gallantry, to swallow a candle's end formed a more formidable and disagreeable flap-dragon than any other substance, and therefore afforded a stronger testimony of zeal for the lady to whose health it was drunk." Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, Monsieur Thomas, II, 2:

"Carouse her health in cans

"Carouse list and candles'-ends."

And candles'-ends."

Doll. "Why doth the prince love him so

Fals. Because he eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles'-ends for flap-2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 207. dragons."

CARIERE (So conclusions passed the). M. W. W., I, i, 160. Compare this expression of Bardolph with that of Nym in M. W. W., I, i, 149: "Beavis'd, sir, and pass good humours"; and again at line 160, "and being fap, sir, was as they say, cashiered: and so conclusions passed the carieres." It is difficult to interpret Bardolph's meaning and various explanations have been offered. But it might imply not more than some meaningless rant. says that it means "the common grounds of good behaviour are passed," while Clarke suggests that the idea is "and their words ran high at full gallop." Baret has "a carrire, the short turning of a nimble horse, now this way, now that way." Hence Halliwell suggests that the term in the M. W. W. is applied to a drunken man who "passes the careires" and turns this way, that way, and every way. Nares observes that "to pass the careire" was a military phrase for running the charge in a tournament or attack, and quotes Sir John Smythe's Discourses (1589): "They (horses) after the first shrink at the entering of the bullet, doo pass their carriere, as though they had verie little hurt."

CATE-LOG. Launce's blunder for catalogue.

An enumeration, a list.

"Here is the cate-log of her condition."

T. G. V., III, i, 270.

CATER-COUSIN. The etymology and original meaning are uncertain. Derived by some from F. acheteur = one who buys, as though meaning one connected only remotely, as eating together; by others from F. quatre= four, from the ridiculousness of applying the term cousin or relation to so remote a degree.

An intimate, or familiar friend.

"His master and he, saving your worship's reverence, are scarce cater-cousins."

M. V., II, ii, 119.

CATES. Said to be a contraction of English delicates = luxuries, but more probably from F. acates: achat = apurchase, L. ad capto.

Provisions, delicacies, dainties.

"But though my cates be mean, take them in good part."

C. E., III, i, 29; v. also x Hen. IV-III, i, 16r; r Hen. VI-II, iii, 79; Per., III, ii, 29. (Note the play on the word in T. of S., II, i, 190:—"For dainties are all Kates.")

CATLING. (1) The string of a lute or violin, made of catgut.

"O madness of discourse, That cause sets up with and against itself!"

T. and C., V, ii, 142.

(7) Reason; a term applied to the classified causes of quarrel in the duelling science of the time, ridiculed by Shakespeare in As You Like It, when he makes Touchstone enumerate the degrees of quarrel upon the lie, to the number of seven. At the same time he introduces it by saying: "O sir, we quarrel in print by the book, as you have books for good manners.

"The first and second cause will not serve my turn."

L. L. L., I, ii, 166; v. also R. and J., II, iv, 23; A. Y. L., V, iv, 49.

CAUSELESS. Coleridge observes Shakespeare uses the word in the following passage "in its strict philosophical sense, cause being truly predicable only of phenomena, that is, things natural, and not of noumena or things supernatural."

"We have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless."

A. W., II, iii, 3.

cautus = cautious, CAUTEL. L. caveo, wary: cautela, a term in Roman law merely meant precaution, and the sinister meaning associated with the word may be due to the subtlety of such precautions.

CHERRY-PIT. A child's game consisting of throwing cherry-stones into a small hole. Cf. Nash, Pierce Penniless: "You may play at chery-pit in the dint of their cheeks" (in this quotation allusion is made to the disfigurement of ladies' faces by painting).

"What, man, it is not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan."

T. N., III, iv, 107.

CHEVERIL. F. chevreau = a kid, dim. of chévre, L. capra.

I., subs. Something soft, pliant, and of a yielding nature like kid leather.

"O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad."

R. and J., II, iv, 74.

II., adj. Like kid-skin, flexible, easily turned.

"A sentence is but a cheveril glove to a good wit; how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward."

T. N., III, i, 10; v. also Hen. VIII-II, iii, 32.

CHEW. To ruminate mentally, to meditate upon.

"Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this."

J. C., I, ii, 171.

CHEWET. F. chouette=a jackdaw, a chough.

A chatterer.

Note.—According to some critics, chewet signifies a sort of small pie or pudding, made of minced meat, and fried in oil. "Goubelet=a kind of little round pie resembling our chuet."

"Peace, chewet, peace."

1 Hen. IV-V, i, 29.

CHIDE. A., trs. (1) To rebuke, to scold at.
"Thus chides she death."

V. and A., 932.

(2) To blame.

"I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults."

A. Y. L., III, ii, 275.

(3) To execrate.

"The hours that we have spent, When we have chid the hasty-footed time For parting us."

M. N. D., III, ii, 200; v. also M. N. D. III, ii, 312.

(6) To roar around.

"Where is he living, clipp'd in with the sea That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales

Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?" r Hen., IV-III, i, 45.

B., intrs. To scold, to quarrel.

"We shall chide downright if I longer stay." M. N. D., II, i, 142; v. also T. of S., I, ii, 92; 222; Cym., V, iv, 32; Oth., II, i, 106; Sonnet III, 1.

CHIDING. I., subs. (1) A noise hounds in full cry.

"I was with Hercules and Cadmus once, When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear With hound of Sparta; never did I hear Such gallant chiding." M. N. D., IV, i, 120.

(2) A noise of wind.

"The icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind." A. Y. L., II, i, 7.

(3) Reproof, reproach.

" In good faith, I am a child to chiding." Oth., IV, ii, 114; v. also M. W. W., V, iii, 9.

II., adj. Noisy.

"As doth a rock against the chiding flood." Hen. VIII-III, ii, 197. "Thou hast as chiding a nativity As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make."

Per. III. i. 32. Per., III, i, 32.

CHILD. (1) A son or daughter.

"It is a wise father that knows his own child."

M. V., II, ii, 69.

(2) A female infant; so used yet by the peasantry in parts of Somerset and Devon.

> "Mercy on's a barne; a very pretty barne! a boy or a child, I wonder?" W. T., III, iii, 68.

(3) Any young person.

"He will spare neither man, woman, nor child." 2 Hen. IV-II, i, 16.

(4) The product or effect of anything. "This noble passion Child of integrity." Mac., IV, iii, 115.

(5) Childe or chyld—a term applied to the scions of knightly families when they became candidates for knighthood in the times of chivalry: not an unusual meaning in the old ballads and romances. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, VI, ii, 318:

"Chyld Tristram pray'd that he with him might

On his adventure."

The name of one of Byron's principal poems "Childe Harold" has made the term familiar.

"Child Rowland to the dark tower came." K. L., III, iv, 167.

(6) Phrase: "To be a child o' the time "= to accommodate one's self to circumstances.

"Be a child o' the time."

A. and C., II, vii, 101.

CHILD-CHANGED. Changed by the unnatural conduct of one's children.

"The untuned and jarring senses, O, wind up Of this child-changed father."

K. L., IV, vii, 17.

Note.—Steevens has suggested "changed to a child by his years and wrongs."

CHILDHOOD. I., subs. (1) The time during which we are children.

"As the resemblance of an idle gaud Which in my childhood I did dote upon." M. N. D., İV, i, 165.

(2) The beginning.

"Doth she not think me an old murderer, Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy." R. and J., III, iii, 95.

(3) The relation to parents.

"Thou better know'st The offices of nature, bond of childhood."

K. L., II, iv, 173.

II., adj. (1) Childish, simple, innocent. "I urge this childhood proof." M. V., I, i, 144.

(2) Befitting a child.

"O, is it all forgot? All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence." M. N. D., III, ii, 202. M. N. D., III, ii, 202.

In "he childed as I fathered" CHILDED. the meaning apparently is he was unnaturally treated by his children as I was by my father.

K. L., III, vi, 109.

CHILDING. Fruitful, productive.

"The spring, the summer, The childing autumn, angry winter, change."

M. N. D., II, i, 112.

CHILDNESS. Childishness.

"With his varying childness cures in me Thoughts that would thick my blood."

W. T., I, ii, 170.

CHILDREN (shall have no Names, My) = my children will be illegitimate.

"Then belike my children shall have no names."

A. and C., I, ii, 34.

CHILD'S FATHER. A future husband.

"Some of it is for my child's father."

Note.—It has been suggested that child's father probably means the father or begetter of my careful thought, dreams being called in R. and J., I, iv, 97, "the children of an idle brain."

CHINE. F. échine, probably L. spina= a thorn, spine.

(1) The backbone, the spine.

"His horse . . . possessed with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine. T. of S., III, ii, 50. (2) Part of an animal consisting of backbone and adjoining parts cut for cooking.

"Let's purge this choler without letting blood." Rich. II-I, i, 153.

(2) Anger, wrath.

"For me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler." Ham., III, ii, 272.

(3) The humour which, when in excess, was supposed to cause irascibility of temper.

"'Twas burnt and died away, And I expressly am forbid to touch it,

And I expressly am forbid to touch it, For it engenders choler, planteth anger." For it engenders choler, planteth anger." T. of S., IV, i, 155.

Note.—Meat overdone or burnt was supposed to induce choler. Cf. C. E., II, ii, 60. Observe in the use of this word Shakespeare's fondness for quibbling with collar owing to the similarity of sound.

CHOLERIC. (1) Irascible.

"Better 't were that both of us did fast, Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric."
T. of S., IV, i, 157.

(2) Angry.

" Are you so choleric with Eleanor?"

(3) Making irascible.

"I fear it is too choleric a meat." T. of S., IV, iii, 19; v. note to choler.

"The obscure bird Clamour'd the livelong night." Mac., II, iii, 44. (2) "Clamour your tongues."

W. T., IV, iii, 241.

The explanations of this phrase that have been offered are by no means satisfactory. Nares observes that to clamour is an expression taken from bell-ringing. It is now contracted to clam and in that form is common among ringers. The bells are said to be clamm'd, when, after a course of rounds or changes, they are all pulled off at once, and give a general clash or clam, by which the peal is concluded. Again, Warburton says: "When bells are at the height, in order to cease them, the repetition of the strokes becomes quicker than before: this is called clamming them." As the clam is succeeded by a silence this reference of the term to bell-ringing gives support to Malone's interpretation—"Give one grand peal, and then have done." Halliwell (Archaic and Provincial Dictionary) makes clam mean to "muffle a bell," Johnson remarks that "to clam a bell is to cover the clapper with felt." If this clown had habitually employed corruptions, one would be inclined to suggest that he makes use of a coinage here from clam meaning to "muffle," and that the text should read "clammer your tongues" in the sense of "Keep your tongues silent." Hunter observes that the same phrase occurs in Taylor the Waterpoet's Sir Gregory Nonsense:

"He thus began: Cease friendly cutting throats, Clamour the promulgation of your tongues."

close they had made
Had not Achilles' self stood up."
"Which like the meteors of a troubled heaven, All of one nature, of one substance bred, Did lately meet in the intestine shock

And furious close of civil butchery. I Hen. IV-I, i, 13.

(4) Cadence, dying fall, "a device which in music answers the use of stops in language. The effect is produced by the particular manner in which certain chords succeed one another, the order being generally such as to produce suspense or expectation first, and then to gratify it by a chord that is more satisfying to the ear" (Grove). Cf. Bacon, Advancement of Learning: "Is not the trope of music, to avoid a slide from the close or cadence, common with the trope of rhetoric of deceiving expectation?" Cf. also Milton, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, 110: "With thousand echoes still prolongs each heavenly close."

"Government, though high, and low, and lower,

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent, Congreeing in a full and natural close Like music."

Hen. V-I, ii, 182; v. also Rich. II-II, i,

III., adj. (1) Drawn tight, shut fast, allowing no opening.

> "Spread thy close curtain." R. and J., III, ii, 5.

"The cloudy messenger turns me his back."

Mac, 11I, vi, 41; v. also Temp., II, i, 142;

I Hen. IV-III, ii, 83; 2 Hen. VI-III,

i, 155; P. P., IX, 14.

CLOUT. (1) A rag, a cloth.

"If I were mad I should forget my son:
Or madly think a babe of clouts were he."

K. J., III, iv, 58.

(2) A kerchief.

"A clout upon that head
Where late the diadem stood."

Ham., II, ii, 482.

(3) A bandage. "Had we done so at first, we had driven them home

With clouts about their heads."

A. and C., IV, vii, 6.

(4) The bull's eye of the butt at which archers shot for practice. It was so called from having been originally made of a piece of white cloth. Nares considers that the word is from F. clouette = a nail, because the centre was marked by a stud or pin. In L. L., IV, i, 131, the dramatist makes use of the expression "cleaving the pin."

"'A' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score."

2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 40; v. also K. L., IV, vi, 90.

(5) Fig. Any object sought for.
"'A' must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout."
L. L. L., IV, i, 128.

CLOUTED, 1. F. clouette = a nail.

Clouted brogues were a kind of coarse wooden shoes strengthened with clouts or nails. Others explain the expression by "patched or mended shoes," but as Arviragus is guarding against noise, it would not be necessary, with that object, to put from 'his feet "mended" shoes.

"I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues from off my feet."

Cym., IV, ii, 213.

CLOUTED, 2. A.S. clút = a patch.

Mended, patched: this meaning might be assumed in the subjoined quotation, as allusion is there made to the quality of thriftiness.

"Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon, For they are thrifty honest men."

2 Hen. VI-IV. ii. 172.

CLOY, 1. F. clouer = to nail up, to fasten, clou=a nail, L. clavus.

(1) To stop up, hence, to occupy. "It is not likely

That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,

Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now." Cym., IV, iv, 19.

(2) To glut, to surfeit. "Cloy the hungry edge of appetite By bare imagination of a feast." Rich. II-I, iii, 296; v. also Rich. III-IV, iv, 62.

(3) To stifle the feelings of gratitude by over-indulgence.

"The man that was his bedfellow,
Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours."

Hen. V-II, ii, 9.

CLOY, 2. From an earlier word clye, or clee=a claw: L. Ger. kleyen=to scratch with the nails.

Vb. To scratch, to claw.

" His royal bird Prunes the immortal wing and cloys his beak." Cym., V, iv, 118.

CLOYLESS. Uncloying, incapable of cloying.

> "Epicurean cooks Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite." A. and C., II, i, 25.

CLOYMENT. Satiety.

"Their love may be called appetite, No motion of the liver but the palate That suffer surfeit, cloyment and revolt."

T. N., II, iv, 99.

CLUBS! An old cry in any public affray, to assist with clubs:- To preserve the public peace. "Clubs, Clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace." T. A., II, i, 37.

(2) To raise a disturbance.

"I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out 'Clubs!'" Hen. VIII-V, iv, 41.

(3) To call for assistance in any street

"I'll call for clubs, if you will not away." I Hen. VI-I, iii, 38.

CLUSTER. A mob, a crowd, an assemblage, a swarm.

"How! was it we? We loved him; but, like beasts,
And cowardly nobles, gave way to your clusters,

Who did hoot him out o' the city."

Cor., IV, vi, 123.

"Reveng'd may she be on that hateful duke Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire, Will coast my crown." 3 Hen. VI-I, i, 268.

COASTING. Inviting, alluring, amorous. (Applied to those who take the first step to meet a hesitating approach.) "O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue, That give a coasting welcome ere it comes."

T. and C., IV, v, 59.

COBLOAF. Ger. kopf = the head.

A crusty uneven loaf with many knobs and a round top (loaves called cobbs are still made in Oxfordshire), hence, from appearance, a rough, loutish, misshapen fellow.

Thersites. "Thou shouldst strike him, Ajax. Cobloaf!" T. and C., II, i, 41.

COCK, 1. Dutch, koq = a boat. A cock-boat.

"Yond tall, anchoring bark Diminish'd to her cock; her cock a buoy Almost too small for sight."; K. L., IV, iv, 19

COCK, 2. A common corruption, or purposed disguise of the name of God.

The use of this term as a petty oath has been considered to be out of regard to the feelings of the pious minded, who were as yet unaccustomed to its profane employment: it may also have been used to escape the penalties attached to profane swearing.

"Cock's passion, silence!"
T. of S., IV, i, 102; v. also Ham., IV, v,

COCK, 3. (1) The male of the domestic fowl or other bird.

COCK OCK AND PIE. v. Cock, 2. Pie or Pye (Gr. $\pi l \nu a \xi = \text{an index}$) was the English name for the popish ordinal, that is, the table or index in the book for finding out the service to be read upon each day, hence it represents the service-book. Like softened oaths of the time (e.g. marry) its origin was neglected, and erroneous etymologies became associated with it in the popular mind, so that the cock and the magpie became common signs for taverns and alehouses.

"By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night.' 2 Hen. IV-V, i, i.

COCK-A-HOOP. Origin doubtful, supposed to be from F. $coq \ a \ huppe=a$ crested cock: hence, a proud fellow,

At sixes and sevens, by the ears; hence, in modern use, exultingly, boastfully.

"You will set cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man." R. and J., I, v, 79.

COCKATRICE. A fabulous creature with the body of a serpent and the head of a cock, believed to be hatched from a cock's egg by a serpent and to kill by its looks, a basilisk.

"They will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices." T. N., III, iv, 171; v. also Rich. III-IV, i, 55; R. and J., III, ii, 47; R. of L., 540.

COCKER. W. cocri = to fondle. Dut. kokalen = to pamper.

To bring up in a fondling manner, to pamper, to spoil. Nares quotes from Barrough's Method of Physick (1624): "The young man flourishing as it were in the Aprill of his age, cockereth in himself a foolish imagination of his owne lustinesse, and reputeth it as a discredit unto him to seeme to feare the approach of any disease."

"Shall a beardless boy, A cockered silken wanton, brave our fields?"

K. J., V, i, 70.
Note.—Scott employs the word in Quentin
Durward, XIII: "I have not been cockered in wantonness or indulgence."

COCKLE, 1. A.S. coccel = tares.

(I) A weed that is troublesome in cornfields.

"Sowed cockle, reaped no corn."

L. L. L., IV, iii, 383. (A proverbial expression equivalent to you sow, so you must reap.")

T. of S., IV, iii, 67; v. also Per., IV, iv, 60.

COCKLED. Furnished with a shell. "Love's feeling is more soft and sensible, Than are the tender horns of cockled snails." L. L. L., IV, iii, 338.

COCKLE-HAT. A pilgrim's hat, so called from the practice followed by palmers of wearing a cockle shell in front of their hats as emblematical of their crossing the sea to visit the Holy Land. there was always a certain amount of protection under the pilgrim's habit it was sometimes assumed as a disguise.

"By his cockle-hat and staff, And his sandal shoon." Ham., IV, v, 25.

COCKNEY. The origin is doubtful: (1) a young cock, (2) a cook, (3) an effeminate person, (4) a dweller in Cockayne, (5) a simpleton, have all been suggested; it is now applied to a native or resident of London, more especially one of the lower classes. Skeat derives it from

M.E. cokenay=a foolish person. (I) A silly cook (apparently), a scullion: a squeamish affected woman has been suggested.

"Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels, when she put them into the paste alive."

K. L., II, iv, 116.

(2) A coxcomb.

"I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney." T. N., IV, i, 12.

COCK-SHUT. Cock-shut was a broadway cut through a wood, through which woodcocks might dart or 'shoot,' and in which they might be caught with nets. Cf. Jacob, A New Law Dictionary (1762). "Gallivolatium = a cock-shoot or cockglade." These nets were chiefly used in the twilight of the evening when woodcocks, come out to feed. word became associated with nightfall or twilight. Cf. Ben Jonson, Masque of Satyrs:

"Mistress, this is only spite; For you would not yesternight Kiss him in the cock-shut light."

Steevens quotes, Arden of (1592): "In the twilight, Feversham (1592): cock-shut light."

"Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself, Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop Went through the army." Rich. III-V, iii, 70.

"That codding spirit had they from their mother."

T. A., V, i, 99.

CODLING. An unripe apple.

"Not old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a peascod, or a coding when 'tis almost an apple."

T. N., I, v, 147.

COD-PIECE. A part of the breeches in front in olden time made very protuberant, and indelicately conspicuous. It was put to various uses. Nares quotes Herrick:

"If the servants search they may descry, In his wide cod-piece, dinner being done, III nts wide coa-piece, dinner being done,
Two napkins cram'd up and a silver spoon."

"Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a cod-piece to take away the life of a man!"

COSIER. v. Cozier.

COSTARD. Etymology unknown.

A man's head—the meaning associated with the word in Shakespeare's works and in the writings of other authors of same period. Beaumont and Fletcher (Woman's Prize, III, 4), use it in the sense of a covering for the head, "your velvet costard," while in Drayton's Polyolbion it is mentioned among others as a species of apple, "The wilding, costard, then the well-known pomewater." From this last signification of the word we have the name costermonger, a dealer in apples.

"Ise try whether your costard or my ballow be the harder."

K. L., IV, vi, 217; v. also L. L. L., III, i, 64; Rich. III-1, iv, 152; M. W. W., III, i, 14.

COSTERMONGER. v. Costard.

COTE. F. cote = the side, cotoyer = to pass by the side of : L. costa.

To come up with, to outstrip, to overtake. The word was a common sporting term, and was applied, technically, to a brace of hounds being slipped at the stag or hare, one of which outstripped the other. Cf. Drayton's Polyolbion:

"When each man runs his horse with fixed eyes, and notes

Which dog first turns the hare, which first the other cotes."

"We coted them on the way, and hither they are coming." Ham., II, ii, 304.

COT QUEEN. Etymology doubtful, possibly F. coquin, or for cockquean = a man woman.

A man who busies himself with female affairs. The following quotation from Ben Jonson's Poctaster gives some justification for the suggested derivation coquin=a rascal, coquine=a hussy: "We tell thee, thou angerest us, cot-quean: and we will thunder thee in pieces for thy cot-queanity." On the other hand Addison compares a woman meddling with state affairs to a man interfering in female business (a cotquean), and adds, "Each of the sexes should keep within its bounds."

"Go, you cot-queen, go, Get you to bed." R. and J., IV, iv, 6.

M. N. D., V, i, 156.

CRANTS. Ger. krantz=a garland. A pure German word, and probably also Danish, as, Rosencrantz (one of the characters in Hamlet) = the rose-garland. Possibly Shakespeare found the word in some of the legends about Hamlet (Nares).

A garland, a wreath, a coronet, a tire for the head.

> "Here she is allowed her virgin crants." Ham., V, i, 218.

CRARE. A small coasting vessel, lighter, a wherry. "What coast thy sluggish crare Might easiliest harbour in?"

Cym., IV, ii, 204.

CRAVEN. "In the old appeal or wager of battle, in our common law, we are told that the party who confessed himself wrong, or refused to fight, was to pronounce the word cravent, and judgment was immediately given against him. When battle had been joined, if the appellant cried cravent he lost liberam legem, that is, the right of such appeal in future: but if the appellee, he was to be hanged." (Nares.)

I., subs. (1) A recreant, cowardly fellow, one who sues for mercy.

"I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee

To tear the garter from thy craven's leg."

I Hen. VI-IV, i, 15.

(2) A degenerate or beaten cock: Steevens quotes Rhodon and Iris (1631): "That he will pull the craven from his nest."

"No cock of mine; you crow too like a craven."

T. of S., II, i, 221.

II., adj. Cowardly.

"Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple Of thinking too precisely on the event . . . I do not know Why yet I live to say 'This thing's to do.'" Ham., IV, iv, 40.

" One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens, And in the essential vesture of creation Does tire the inginer." Oth., II, i Oth., II, i, 64.

(5) Natural perfection.

"What demi-god Hath come so near creation?" M. V., III, ii, 116.

(6) A fancy, a coinage of the brain.

"Wast thou but A dagger of the mind, a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain."

Mac., II, i, 38. Note.—The application of the word is obscure in M. M., II, iv, 127:

> "Women! Help Heaven! men their creation mar

In profiting by them."

Steevens accepts an explanation given in the Edinburgh Review, November, 1786: "Men debase their nature by taking advantage of such weak pitiful creatures." Rolfe gives it: "Men spoil women by taking advantage of their weakness"; while Clarke combines both interpretations: "men impair their own natures and injure women by taking advantage of them." The rendering which makes "woman" man's creation will doubtless be based upon the Scriptural account of her origin, Gen. ii, 21, 22.

CREATURE. (I) Anything created, animate or inanimate. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, III, 442:

"Alone, for other creature in this place, Living, or lifeless, to be found was none."

Cf. also, Bacon, Essay, Of Truth: "The first creature of God, in the works of the days was the light of the sense." Again, I Tim. iv, 4: "Every creature of God is good." Also Rom. viii, 39.

"Only you do lack
That mercy which fierce fire and iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses."

CRESCENT NOTE. A rising reputation. Cym., I, iv, 2.

CRESCIVE. Growing, having the power of growth: Steevens quotes Drant's Horace's Art of Poetry (1567): "As lusty youths of crescive age doe flourishe freshe and grow." The word is only once used by Shakespeare, who employs crescent with a similar meaning in various other places, e.g. Ham., I, iii, II; Cym., I, iv, 2; A. and C., II, i, 10. "Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night, Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty."

Hen. V-I, i, 66.

CRESSET. An open lamp which was set up as a beacon or carried on poles. The light was from a wreathed rope. smeared with pitch. In former times they were used instead of the modern lighthouse, and, from the fact that they were often seen in elevated positions, the heavenly luminaries were often compared to cressets. Cf. Drayton, The Owl (1320):

"Which from the mountain, with a radiant eye, Brav'd the bright cressit of the glorious sky."

Cf. also Milton, Paradise Lost, I, 728:

" Many a row

Of starry lamps and blazing cressets fed With naphtha and asphaltus, yielded light with naphtia and aspiratus, yielded right

As from a sky."

"At my nativity,

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,

DOMINICAL. Subs. L., dies dominica= the Lord's day.

The dominical or Sunday letter, which in the old calendars was always printed in red. In the Calendar the first seven letters of the alphabet are applied to the days of the week, the letter A being always given to the first of January, whatever that day may be, and the others in succession to the following days. As the year does not consist of an exact number of weeks, and as every year does not consist of the same number of days it is clear that a change is always taking place in these letters. The following rule is given in the Book of Common Prayer, to find the Dominical or Sunday letter according to the Calendar in the Prayer Book: "For the next century, that is, from the year 1800 till the year 1899 inclusive, add to the current year its fourth part, and then divide by 7: if there is no remainder, then A is the Sunday letter: if any number remaineth, then the letter corresponding to that number is the Sunday letter.

"Let me not die your debtor, My red dominical, my golden letter!" L. L. L., V, ii, 44.

DOMINEER. To run riot. Cf. Taylor, Works (1630):

DUE, 2. L. doto = I endow. Vb. To endue, to endow.

"This is the latest glory of their praise, That I thy enemy due thee withal. I Hen. VI-IV, ii, 34. DUELLO. The laws and observances of duelling, which were laid down with great exactness in several treatises. They were formed into such a ridiculous system, as to afford a constant subject for humorous satire to Shakespeare and his contemporary dramatists. The ridicule heaped upon "the lie direct" or the seventh cause in A. Y. L., V, iv, 64 is well known.

"Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy; the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you; he cannot by the duello avoid it." T. N., III, iv, 281.

DUG. (I) A breast or teat of a woman (used without contempt). The word is now applied only to the paps or teats of animals.

"He is my son, ay, and therein my shame, Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit." Rich. III-II, ii, 30; v. also 2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 393.

(2) The teat of an animal.

"The cow's dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milked."

A. Y. L., III, iv, 45.

DUKE. L. dux.

A leader, a chief. Cf. Gen. xxxvi, 19: "These are the sons of Esau who is Edom, and these are their dukes."

"Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke."
M. N. D., I, i, 20; v. also Hen. V-III, ii, 21; III, ii, 97; T. N. K., I, i, 47.

DULL. slow of I., (1) Stupid, understanding.

"She is not bred so dull but she can learn."

M. V., III, ii, 163.

(2) Without sensibility. Cf. Macaulay, History of England, XV:

"Though he was too dull to feel, his wife felt for him. "So faint, so spiritless,

So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone."

2 Hen. IV-I, i, 80.

(3) Wearied, tired, inert.

"My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile beguile
The tedious day with sleep."

Ham., III, ii, 201.

(4) Soothing soporific, causing or disposing to sleep (applied to Morpheus).

"O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch

A watch-case or a common larum-bell?"

2 Hen. IV-III, i, 15; v. also 2 Hen.

IV-IV, v, 2.

(5) Drowsy, sleepy.

"While she was in her dull and sleeping M. N. D., III, ii, 8.

inclination to sleep.

" Epicurean cooks Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite, That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour Even till a Lethe'd dulness."

A. and C., II, i, 27; v. also Temp., I, ii, 185; Sonnet LVI, 8.

(3) Dimness.

"No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid seal with wanton dulness My speculative and offic'd instruments. Oth., I, iii, 268.

(4) Pleasantry, buffoonery, apparent stupidity.

"Always the dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits." A. Y. L., I, ii, 48.

DULLARD IN THIS ACT, A=A person stupidly insensible and indifferent to what is going on.

Cym., V, v, 265.

DUMB. Vb. To render dumb, to confound, to silence.

"What I would have spoke Was beastly dumb'd by him." A. and C., I, v, 41; v. also Per., V, Prol. 5. DUMB-DISCOURSIVE. Pleading silently, or by looks.

"There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive That tempts most cunningly."

T. and C., IV, iv, 92.

DUMP. (1) Plu. State of melancholy, depression of spirits.

"When griping grief the heart doth wound, And doleful dumps the mind oppress."

R. and J., IV, v, 120; v. also M. A., II, iii, 66; T. A., I, i, 391.

(2) Plu. A melancholy tune, a mournful elegy.

"Sing no more ditties, sing no more, Of dumps so dull and heavy."

M. A., II, iii, 69; v. also T. G. V., III, ii, 85; R. of L., 1127.

(3) A tune of any kind (possibly dance music—a dump appears to have been a kind of dance). Cf. Humour out of Breath (1607): "He loves nothing but an Italian dump."

"Play me some merry dump."
R. and J., IV, v, 110.

DUN. (1) Dark, gloomy. "Come, thick night!
And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell." Mac., I, v, 49.

- (2) Of a dull brown colour. In the following passage there seems a reference to the colour of the mouse, but the origin of the phrase or its connexion with the constable no one has been able to explain. Malone supposes it to have meant "Peace be still," and Nares gives for comparison The Two Merry Milkmaids (1620): "Why then 'tis done, and dun's the mouse and undone all the courtiers." The same quibble with done is found in many old writers. "Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word."

 R. and J., I, iv, 40.
- (3) The name of a horse, doubtless from its colour, "To draw Dun out of the mire" was a rural pastime in which one of the persons who played represented a horse stuck in the mire. Gifford explains the expression thus: "Dun in the mire is a Christmas gambol at which I have often played. A log of wood is brought into the room: this is Dun (the cart-horse), and a cry is raised that he is stuck in the mire. Two of the company advance, either with or without ropes, to draw him out. After repeated attempts, they find themselves unable to do it, when Dun is extricated of course: and the merriment arises from the awkward and affected efforts of the rustics to lift the log, and from sundry arch contrivances to let the ends of it fall on one another's toes. This will not be thought a very exquisite amusement, and yet I have seen much honest mirth at it." Cf. Chaucer, The Manciple's Prologue, 5:

"Ther gan our hoste for to jape and play,
And sayde, 'sires, what? Dun is in the myre?'"

"If thou art Dun, we'll draw thee from the mire."

R. and J., I, iv, 41.

DUP. Do + up,

To do up, to open.

"Then up he rose and donned his clothes And dupp'd the chamber door."

Ham., IV, v, 53

DURANCE. (1) Confinement, bondage. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, v, 377: "To be captived in endlesse duraunce of sorrow and despayre without aleggeaunce."

Of sorrow and despayre without aleggeaunce."

"He upon some action
Is now in durance."

T. N., V, 1, 269; v. also M. M., III, i, 70;
L. L. L., III, i, 124.

(2) A coarse leathern dress worn by the lower orders, known also as everlasting from its durability, latterly applied to any very strong fabric. Cf. The Three Ladies of London (1584): "The taylor that out of seven yards stole one and a half of durance." Halliwell quotes a tailor's bill as late as 1723, in which one of the items was—" sixteen yards of fine durance." Nares quotes Westward Hoe (1607): "Let me not live but I will give thee a good suit of durance." A reference is made to the same material in C. E., IV, ii, 33: "A devil in an everlasting garment hath him." Everlasting or something similar to Cf. it was also called perpetuana. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, III, 2: "I wonder at nothing more than our gentlemen ushers, that will suffer a piece of serge or perpetuana to come into the presence." Cf. also Marston, What you Will, II, i, 8:

"He's in his old perpetuana suit."
"He, sir, that takes pity on decayed men and gives them suits of durance."
C. E., IV, iii, 23; v. also I Hen. IV-I, ii, 39, where there is a play upon the word in the sense of confinement in prison, the allusion being to the probable result of Falstaff's thieving expeditions.

DUST. (1) Earth matter reduced to so fine particles as to be capable of being carried in air.

"The dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,
Raised by your populous troups."

A. and C., III, vi, 48.

"Mighty states characterless are grated To dusty nothing." T. and C., III, ii, 182.

(2) Reducing to dust.

"All our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death." Mac., V, v, 23.
Note.—As another example of the proleptic use of the same adj. cf. Anthony Copley,
A Fig for Fortune (1596), quoted by Collier—
"Time and thy grave did first salute thy nature,
Even in her infancie and cradle-rightes,
Inviting it to dustie death's defeature."

DUTY. (1) That which one is bound to do.

"Do thy duty and have thy duty." T. of S., IV, i, 31.

"Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?" 1 Hen. VI-V, iv, 107.

EFFUSE, I., vb. To pour out, emit.

> "Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd, > Will cry for vengeance at the gates of > heaven."
> I Hen. VI-V, iv, 52.

II., subs. Effusion, waste, outpouring, (only once used as a substantive by Shakespeare).

"The air hath got into my deadly wounds.

And much effuse of blood doth make me faint."

3 Hen. VI-II, vi, 27.

A.S. = again. This is the meaning EFT. of the word in Chaucer and Spenser. Adj. Quick, ready.

"Yes, marry, that's the eftest way."

M. A., IV, ii, 32.

Note.—Theobald and Steevens thought that the word here was a blunder for deftest.

EFTSOONS. Soon after. Cf. Chaucer, The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, 734:

"And to the chanoun he profred eftsone Body and good." Cf. also Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, i, 98:

"The champion stout

Eftsoones dismounted from his courser brave."
"Toward Ephesus Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee why."

Per., V, i, 256; v. also T. N. K., III, i, 12. EGAL (Equal). (1) Being on the same

"Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love."

M. V., III, iv, 13.

(2) Impartial.

" Egal justice."

T. A., IV, iv, 4.

EGGS AND BUTTER. This was a common dish for breakfast before the introduction of tea. It consisted of eggs poached in butter or salad oil and eaten with fried onions, verjuice, nutmeg, etc.

> "Not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter."
> I Hen. IV-I, ii, 19; v. also I Hen. IV-II, i, 50.

EGGS FOR MONEY?-Will you Takea proverbial expression = will you let yourself be duped or imposed upon, or will you take an affront? The origin of the phrase has not been satisfactorily The word egg is used to made out. denote something worthless, e.g. A. W., IV, iii, 280: "He will steal an egg out of a cloister," and, again, Cor., IV, iv, 21, "not worth an egg." Steevens quotes A Match at Midnight (1633): "I shall have eggs for my money: I must hang myself." Reed adds from Relations of the most famous Kingdomes (1630): "The French infantery skirmisheth bravely afarre off, and cavallery gives a furious onset at the first charge: but after the first heat they will take eggs for their money," i.e. tamely yield to the attack (Rolfe).

W. T., I, ii, 161.

EGMA. A purposed corruption of enigma which occurs immediately before it.

"No egma, no riddle, no l'envoy." L. L. L., III, i, 66.

EGYPT, of. Note.— The First-born Johnson, and after him other commentators, say that this expression means high-born persons of the land.

"I'll go sleep if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt."

A. Y. L., II, v, 60.

EGYPTIAN THIEF AT POINT OF DEATH, Like to th' = the robber Thyamis mentioned in the Æthiopics of Heliodorus, a translation of which appeared in 1587. This Shakespeare may very well have read as it was a popular book. this simile a particular story is presupposed: which ought to be known to show the justness and the propriety of the comparison. It is taken from Heliodorus' Æthiopics, to which our author was indebted for the allusion. This Egyptian thief was Thyamis, who was a native of Memphis, and at the head of a band of robbers. Theagenes and Chariclea falling into their hands, Thyamis fell desperately in love with the lady, and would have married her. Soon after, a stronger body of robbers coming down upon Thyamis' party, he was in such fears for his mistress that he had her shut into a cave with his treasure. It was customary with these barbarians, when they despaired of their own safety, first to make away with those whom they held dear, and desired for companions in the next life. Thyamis, therefore, benetted round with his enemies, raging with love, jealousy, and anger, went to his cave, and calling aloud in the Egyptian tongue, so soon as he heard himself answered towards the cave's mouth by a Grecian, making to the person by the direction of her voice, he caught her by the hair with his left hand, and (supposing her to be Chariclea) with his right hand plunged his sword into her breast" (Theobald).

T. N., V, i, 112.

EIGHT AND SIX, Written in. Written in lines alternately of eight and six syllables (in fourteen syllable measure like that of the popular ballads).

M. N. D., III, i, 25.

EISEL. A.S. aisel = vinegar.

Vinegar. Cf. Chaucer, Romaunt of the Rose, 215:

"She was like thing for hungir ded, That lad her life only by bred Knedin with eisel strong and eyre."

Cf. also, the eighth prayer in the Salisbury Primer (1555): "O blessed Jesu!... I beseech thee for the bitterness of the aysell and gaul that thou tasted."

"Swounds, show me what thou'lt do!
Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast?
woo't tear thyself?

Woo't drink up eisel? eat a crocodile? I'll do 't."

I'll do 't."

Ham., V, i, 262; v. also Sonnet CXI, 10.

Note.—The passage from Hamlet has been the subject of endless discussion among commentators. It is held that some river or lake is referred to—(t) the Yssel (in Holland), the Oesil (in Denmark), the Weissel (or Vistula). Elze suggests Nilus (from the mention of the[rocodile), and even Lake Esyl (which was supposed to figure in Scandinavian legends, although Wright has pointed out that no such lake is known to Norse mythology). But why other than vinegar? as the purpose is to suggest some drink of disagreeable or repelling taste corresponding to such an unsavoury food as crocodile, rather than an impossibly huge one?

EKE, 1. v. Eche.

EKE, 2. Also, besides, likewise, moreover.

"And I to Ford shall eke unfold How Falstaff varlet vile, His dove will prove."

M. W. W., I, iv, 85; v. also M. W. W., II, iii, 77; M. N. D., III, i, 97.

ELBOW. Vb. To stand beside (at the elbow) as a constant companion and mentor.

"A sovereign shame so elbows him."

K. L., IV, iii, 42.

ELD. A.S. yldo, aeld, eld=old age, eald=old.

(1) Old age, decrepitude. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, x, 72:

"Her heart with joy unwonted inly sweld,
As feeling wondrous comfort in her weaker eld."
"Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled

Soft infancy, that nothing can but cry, Add to my clamours."

T. and C., II, ii, 105.

(2) Old people.

"All thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged and doth beg the alms
Of palsied eld." M. M., III, i, 36.

(3) People of olden times.

"The superstitious idle-headed eld Receiv'd and did deliver to our age The tale of Herne the hunter, for a truth,"

M. W. W., IV, iv, 35.

ELDER. Adj. (1) More advanced in age.
"How much more elder art thou than thy looks!"

M. V., IV, i, 247.

(2) Born before another.

"Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this." A. Y. L., I, i, 52.

(3) Superior (from priority in rank or office).

"We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible."

J. C., II, ii, 47; v. also A. and C., III, x, 13.

(4) More mature.

"I tender you my service, Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young, Which elder days shall ripen."

Rich. II-II, iii, 43.

ELDER-GUN. A pop-gun. Delius quotes Philaster, I, i: "If he give not back his crown again upon the report of an elder-gun, I have no augury."

"That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gu s that a poor and private displeasure can do against a monarch."

Hen. V-IV, i, 184.

of air or sky surrounding the earth, hence, the sky, heavens, or outer world. Vaughan observes: "This old signification (the sky) is still retained by the folk of South Pembrokeshire. A peasant recently said to me: 'I thought this morning that we should have rain, for I saw, as I came along, a weather-gall in the element.' A 'weather-gall' is a kind of half rainbow (v. R. of L., 1588) and is regarded as a sign of wet weather by the country people." Cf. Milton, Comus, 299:

"I took it for a faery vision
Of some gay creatures of the element,
That in the colours of the rainbow live,
And play i' the plighted clouds."

And play i' the plighted clouds."

"The dement itself, till seven years' heat, Shall not behold her face at ample view."

T. N., I, i, 26; v. also 2 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 48; Hen. V-IV, i, 99; J. C., I, iii, 128; A. and C., III, ii, 40; Cor., I, x, 10; R. of L., 1588.

(2) A constituent part. The old physiological notion was, that man was composed of four elements: fire, air, earth, and water, corresponding to the four humours Choler, Blood, Phlegm, and Melancholy, which in turn gave rise to four temperaments or complexions. A due proportion and equable mixture of these elements combined to produce the perfect man.

"There's little of the melancholy element in M. A., II, i, 327; v. also J. C., V, v, 73; A. and C., V, ii, 288.

(3) The natural habitat of any creature. "She chanted snatches of old tunes, As one incapable of her own distress, Or like a creature native and indued Unto that element." Ham., IV, vi

Ham., IV, vii, 180. (4) The natural sphere or position suited to a person. "Hysterica passio, down, thou climbing sorrow, Thy element's below."

K. L., II, iv, 55; v. also Hen. VIII-I, i, 48.

(5) The life blood, the essential part, the mainstay. "Three lads of Cyprus,-noble swelling spirits, That hold their honours in a wary distance,

The very elements of this warlike isle,— Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups, And they watch too." Oth., II, iii, 47.

ELEVEN AND TWENTY. A reference to the game of Bone-ace or One-andthirty. This was an ancient and popular game at cards. Florio, under Trentuno, mentions "a game of cards called one and thirtie or bone-ace. From Machivell's Dogge (1617), quoted by Halliwell, these two seem to be distinct games:

"But what shall bee our game? Primero? Gluke?

Or one and thirty, bone-ace, or new-cut?"

"Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the master,
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long."

T. of S., IV, ii, 57.

Vb. To mat, to tangle, to knot in (Elves or Fairies were supelf-locks. posed to do this especially in the case of horses. Cf. R. and J., I, iv, 90.)

"My face I'll grime with filth, Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots."

K. L., II, iii, 10.

ELSE. Pron., others.

" Bastards, and else." K. J., II, i, 276.

ELVISH-MARKED. Marked by fairies with some physical defect or malformation. Steevens observes: "The common people in Scotland have still an aversion to those who have any or redundancy, natural defect thinking them marked out for mischief."

"Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog." Rich. III-I, iii, 228.

EMBALLING. A coronation: the ceremony of placing the ball in the left hand of the queen as one of the insignia of royalty.

"In faith, for little England You'd venture an emballing; I myself Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd

No more to the crown but that."

Hen. VIII-II, iii, 45. Note.—Shakespeare evidently makes no distinction between a queen-regnant and a queen consort. Strictly, the former only was endowed with this symbol of royalty.

EMBARQUEMENTS. Probably connected with embargo. Sp. em=in, on, and barra = a bar: embargar=to lay an embargo on. For embarquement Cotgrave (1626) gives two meanings, (1) an embarking, taking ship, putting into ship; (2) an imbargering, i.e. laying an embargo on. Heath conjectures that we should read "Embargements." The New English Dictionary makes the following quotation from Hakluyt's Voyages (1599) Index II: "The King of Spaines Commission for the general imbargement or arrest of the English, Embarment, another form of the word, is also found. A tract was printed in 1584, entitled "A true report of the general embarrement of all English shippes."

Hindrance, restraint.

"The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice, Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst My hate to Marcius." Cor., I, x, 22.

EMBASSADE. An embassy (only once used by Shakespeare).

"When you disgraced me in my embassade, Then I degraded you from being king." , 3 Hen. VI-IV, iii, 32.

EMBASSY. A mission, a message.

"Shall we sparingly show you far off The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy?"

Hen. V-I, ii, 240; v. also K. J., I, i, 6;
II, i, 44.

EMBAY. To enclose in a bay, to landlock, to shut in between promontories.

" If that the Turkish fleet Be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they're drowned."

Oth., II, i, 18.

EMBER-EVES. A.S. ymbren = a round course, an anniversary, ymb = about, around, and rinnan = to run (nothing to do with embers or ashes).

Evenings preceding several emberdays, that is, certain days set apart for prayer and fasting, and especially for supplicating a blessing on the crops.

"It hath been sung at festivals, On ember-eves and holy ales.

Per., I, Prol. 6.

EMBLAZE. To emblazon, to display conspicuously, to glorify.

"Thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,

T' emblaze the honour which thy master got."

2 Hen. VI-IV, x, 76.

EMBOSS, 1. I., vb. Etym. doubtful; supposed to be from F. bosse = a bunch, because bosses or lumps of foam were thrown from the mouth of an animal when hard hunted. Mahn suggests Sp. embocar = to cast from the mouth.

(1) To press hard and exhaust so as to cause foaming at the mouth. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, xii, 152: "As a dismayed Deare in chase embost, Forgetful of his safety, hath his right way lost."

Halliwell quotes Turberville's Hunting: "When the hart is foaming at the mouth, we say that he is embossed": and Wit and Drollery: "He chaf'd and foam'd, as buck embost."

"The poor cur is emboss'd."
T. of S., Ind. i, 16.

(2) To be at bay and foam with rage. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, i,

"Like dastard Curres that, having at a bay The salvage beast embost in wearie chace, Dare not adventure on the stubborne fray." "O he is more mad

Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly

Was never so embossed."

A. and C., IV, xiii, 3.

II., adj. Swollen, tumid, protuberant.
"Thou art a boil,

A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle In my corrupted blood."

EMBOSS, 2. O.F. embosquer; F. bosc, a wood.

To drive into bushes, to surround, to corner: "To emboss a deer, = to enclose him in a wood" (Johnson).

"We have almost embossed him,—you shall see his fall to-night."

A. W., III, vi, 107.

EMBOUND. To bound in, to enclose.

Which was clay." "That sweet breath embounded in this beauteous $K.\ J.,\ IV,\ iii,\ 137.$

1 Hen. IV-V, iv, 109.

(2) To drain, to empty, to exhaust. "The schools, Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off The danger to itself." A. W., I, iii, 247.

EMBRACE. Vb. A., trs. (1) To receive with open arms.

"Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither."

K. J., II, i, ii.

(2) To close with, to yield to.

"Let me embrace thee, sour adversity, For wise men say it is the wiser course." 3 Hen. VI-III, i, 24.

(3) To admit, to receive, to accept.

"He would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming."

T. of A., III, i, 21.

(4) To clutch at, to catch at.

"Welcome, then,
Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace."

K. L., IV, i, 7.

(5) To hold, to seize, to take possession of.

"Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom." T. and C., III, ii, 34.

(6) To surround, to encompass.

"You'll see your Rome embraced with fire." Cor., V, ii, 7.

(7) To cherish.

"You never shall—so help you truth and God!—

Embrace each other's love in banishment."

Rich. II-I, iii, 184-

(8) To accept cordially, to welcome. "And you embrace the occasion to depart." M. V., I, i, 64.

(9) To undergo, to submit to.

"What cannot be eschewed must be embraced."

M. W. W., V, V, 220.

B., intrs. (1) To join in an embrace.
"Let us embrace."

L. L. L., IV, iii, 213.

(2) To fraternize.

"Let me embrace with old Vincentio."
T. of S., IV, v, 68.

(3) To join in sexual intercourse. "Your brother and his lover have embraced." M. M., I, iv, 40.

EMBRACEMENT. Embrace (used oftener than embrace). Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, viii, 86:

"But she, the more to seeme such as she hight, Coyly rebutted his embracement light."

"I was then present saw them salute of

"I was then present, saw them salute on horseback,

Beheld them when they lighted, how they clung

In their embracement."

Hen. VIII-1, i, 10; v. also Rich. III-1I, i, 30; W. T., V, i, 114; C. E., I, I, 44; T. A., V, ii, 68; T. of S., Ind. 116; T. and C., IV, v, 148; V. and A., 312.

EMBRASURE. Embrace (used only once by Shakespeare).

"Rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures."
T. and C., IV, iv, 37.

EMBRUE (Imbrue, Embrew). A., trs. To stain with blood. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, vi, 147:

"After late chace of their embrewed game."

"Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here."

T. A., II, iii, 222; v. also M. N. D., V,
i, 335.

B., intrs. To shed blood.

"What! Shall we have incision? Shall we embrue?" 2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 160.

EMMANUEL (=God be with us). The name given to Jesus in the Old Testament, formerly prefixed to public deeds and private letters. Staunton quotes a letter written about 1609:

"EMANUELL.

"Worshipfull Sir, my thoughts runnyng upon the well performance of this worke," etc.

2 Hen, VI-IV, ii, 88.

EMMEW. To confine as in a mew or cage, to keep in the background. Note.—Referring to the following passage Hunter observes that "a hawk was said to emmew a bird when hovering over and wheeling round it, preparatory to seizure." If this use could be supported the figure would be self-explanatory.

"This outward-sainted deputy, Whose settled visage and deliberate word Nips youth i' the head, and follies doth emmew

As falcon doth a fowl, is yet a devil."

M. M., III, i, 90.

EMPALE. v. Impale.

Of thrice three times the value of this bond."

M. V., I, iii, 146.

B., trs. To finish, to conclude, to bring to an end.

"Some consequence . . . shall expire the term
Of a despised life." R. and J., I, iv, 106.

Cf. Spenser, Mother Hubberd's Tale, 309:

"When as time flying with wings swift Expired had the term that these two javels Should render up a reckoning of their travels."

EXPLOIT. (1) Warlike adventure.

"It well may serve
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit."

A. W., I, ii, 17.

"My liege and Madam, to expostulate What majesty should be, what duty is, Why day is day, night night, and time is time

Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time."

Ham., II, ii, 89; v. also T. G. V., III, i, 251.

(2) To remonstrate.

"Stay not to expostulate, make speed."
3 Hen., VI-II, v, 135; v. also Oth., IV,

EXPOSTURE. Probably a coinage of Shakespeare formed on the analogy of composture (T. of A., IV, iii, 44). Exposure.

" Determine on some course More than a wild exposture to each chance That starts i' the way before thee." Cor., IV, i, 36.

EXPRESS. Adj. (1) Exact and true in form as though pressed from a die and fitted for its purpose. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, XI, 354:

"Of his presence many a sign
Still following thee, still compassing thee round
With goodness and paternal love: his face Express."

"In form and moving how express and admirable,' Ham., II, ii, 294.

(2) Given in direct terms and not left to inference, clear, plain.

"Bid me tell my tale in express words." K. J., IV, ii, 234.

EXPRESSIVE. Communicative, openhearted.

> "Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained your-self within the list of too cold an adieu. Be more expressive to them." A. W., II, i, 51.

EXPRESSURE. (1) Utterance or description.

"An operation more divine Than breath or pen can give expressure to."

T. and C., III, iii, 204.

(2) Character, expression.

"By the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated." T. N., II, iii, 143.

(3) Mark, impression, trace.

"The expressure that it bears, green let it be, More fertile-fresh than all the field to see."

M. W. W., V, v, 64.

EXPULSE. To expel, to drive out, to banish. Cf. North's Plutarch, p. 499: "For he was expulsed the senate."

"For ever should they be expuls'd from France." I Hen. VI-III, iii, 25.

EXSUFFLICATE. Etym. doubtful: probably derived from Low Latin exsufflare = to spit upon. Nares, quoting Du Cange, says, that it is derived from the old ecclesiastical form of renouncing the devil, in the ancient baptism of catechumens, when the candidate was commanded by the priest to turn to the west, and thrice exsufflate Satan.

Various meanings have been suggested, e.g. puffed out, empty, frivolous, or, contemptible, abominable. (The word is found only in the following passage.)

"Exchange me for a goat
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufficate and blown surmises Matching thy inference."

Oth. III, iii, 182.

EXTEMPORAL. Inspiring, furnishing unpremeditated words.

"Assist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. L. L. L., I, ii, 171.

EXTEMPORALLY. Readily, without premeditation.

"The quick comedians Extemporally will stage us, and present Our Alexandrian revels."

A. and C., V, ii, 217; v. also V. and A., 836.

EXTEND. (I) To stretch out, to A., trs. hold out, to reach forth.

> "I extend my hand to him thus." T. N., II, v, 61.

(2) To stretch to the point of breaking. "Let it not gall your patience, good Iago, That I extend my manners." Oth., I, i, 99.

(3) To spread abroad, to disseminate. "The report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage."

W. T., IV, ii, 39.

(4) To amplify, to increase.

"If much you note him,
You shall offend him and extend his passion." Mac., III, iv, 57.

(5) To offer, to present, to show. " If you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it and extend to you what further becomes his greatness." A. W., III, vi, 61.

(6) To praise highly, to extol, to probably, as Nares magnify: suggests, from the idea of extending or augmenting the commendations or qualities of a person.

"I do extend him, sir, within himself."

Note.—The meaning seems to be—"I praise him no more than he deserves." v. also Cym., I, iv, 17.

(7) To seize upon (a legal term-v. extent 4). Cf. Massinger, A New Way to Pay Old Debts, V, 1:

"But when This manor is extended to my use, This manor is extenued to My."
You'll speak in humbler key."
"Labrinus—

This is stiff news-hath with his Parthian force Extended Asia from Euphrates." A. and C., I, ii, 95.

B., intrs. To stretch, to reach.

"And yet enough
May not extend so far as to the lady."

M. V., II, vii, 28.

EXTENT. (1) Amount, degree, measure.
"The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent not more."
Oth., I, iii, 80,

- (2) Behaviour, conduct, condescension.

 "Lest my extent to the players . . . should more appear like entertainment than yours."

 Ham, II, ii, 361.
- (3) Maintenance.

"Was ever seen
An Emperor of Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent
Of equal justice, used in such contempt?"
T. A., IV, iv, 3.

(4) A seizure, appraisement or valuation of lands for payment of debts (in Scotland for the purpose of assessment). The reference is to a writ of extendi facias under which a seizure of lands or goods could be effected. Wright quotes Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England, IV, 80: "Upon all debts of record due to the crown, the sovereign has his peculiar remedy by writ of extent: which differs in this respect from an ordinary writ of execution at suit of the subject, that under it the body, lands, and goods of the debtor may be all taken at once, in order to compel the payment of the debt. And this proceeding is called an extent from the words of the writ: which directs the sheriff to cause the lands, goods and chattels to be appraised at their full, or extended, value (extendi facias), before they are delivered to satisfy the debt.

"Let my offices of such a nature Make an extent upon his house and lands."

A. Y. L., III, i, 17.

(5) Violent attack, such as might be made in serving an "extent," v. 4.
"Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion sway In this uncivil and unjust extent Against thy peace." T. N., IV, i, 49.

Against thy peace." T. N., IV, i, 49.

EXTENUATE. (1) To weaken, to lessen.

"Or else the law of Athens yields you up— Which by no means we may extenuate— To death, or to a vow of single life." M. N. D., I, i, 120.

(3) To palliate.

"Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce."
A. and C., V, ii, 125; v. also Oth., V, ii, 342.

(4) To detract from, to undervalue.

"His glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy."

J. C., III, ii, 36.

EXTERMINE. Vb. To exterminate, to destroy, to put an end to.
"Your sorrow and my grief

Were both extermined."

A. Y. L., III, v, 88.

EXTERN. I., adj. Outward, visible.

"My outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern." Oth., I, i, 63.

II., subs. Outward show or deportment.

"Were 't aught to me I bore the canopy, With my extern the outward honouring."

Sonnet CXXV, 2.

EXTINCT. (1) Extinguished, quenched.

"My oil-dried lamp and time-bewasted light Shall be extinct with age and endless night."

Rich. II-1, iii, 222.

(2) Exhausted.

"These blazes, daughter, Giving more light than heat, extinct in both, Even in their promise, as it is a-making, You must not take for fire."

Ham., I, iii, 118.

EXTINCTED. Extinguished, suppressed (only once used by Shakespeare).

"That he may bless this bay with his tall ship, Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits."

Oth., II, i, 80.

EXTINCTURE. Extinction, hence, coldness (only once used by Shakespeare).

"O cleft effect! could modesty, hot wrath, Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath."

L. C., 294.

EXTIRP. To extirpate, to eradicate. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, x, 222:

"Which to extirpe, he laid him privily Downe in a darksome lowly place far in."

"But it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking be put down."

M. M. III it ruo: v. also I Hen. VI-III,

M. M., III, ii, 110; v. also 1 Hen. VI-III, iii, 24.

EXTOLMENT. The act of praising.

"But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article."

Ham., V, ii, 112.

EXTORT. (1) To wrest and gain by force, to exact.

"You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free."

Cym., III, i, 47.

(2) To exhaust, to take away.

"None of noble sort
Would so offend a virgin and extort
A poor soul's patience."

M. N. D., III, ii, 160.

EXTRACTING. Distracting, absorbing. Malone quotes The Historie of Hamlet (1608), "to try if men of great account bee extract out of their wits."

"A most extracting frenzy of mine own From my remembrance clearly banished his." T. N., V, i, 274.

EXTRAUGHT. L. extraho.

Extracted, descended.

"Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught." 3 Hen. VI-II, ii, 142. EXTRAVAGANCY. Roaming at large, vagrancy, aimlessly wandering.

"My determinate voyage is mere extrava-gancy." T. N., II, i, 10.

EXTRAVAGANT. Roving, wandering beyond bounds, vagabond, vagrant.

"Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies To his confine.

Ham., I, i, 154; v. also Oth., I, i, 137. EXTREME. I., adj. (1) Outmost, furthest. "The hairy fool Stood on the extremest verge of the swift A. Y. L., II, i, 42.

(2) Last, final.

"The extreme parts of time extremely forms All causes to the purpose of his speed."

L. L. L., V, ii, 730.

(3) Utmost, greatest, most violent.

"I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire,
But qualify the fire's extreme rage."
T. G. V., II, vii, 22; v. also R. of L., 230.

(4) Harsh, tyrannical, oppressive. "And till action, lust

Is perjur'd, murtherous, bloody, full of blame, Savage, extreme, rude, crucl, not to trust." Sonnet CXXIX, 4

(5) Intense, strong, extravagant, profuse.

"Be not as extreme in submission As in offence." $M.\ W.\ W$, IV, iv, II.

(1) The utmost degree. II.. subs.

"Then must you speak Of one that lov'd not wisely but too well; Of one not easily jealous, but being wrought Perplex'd in the extreme." Oth., V, ii, 345.

(2) Affliction, trial, calamity, suffering. " Fierce extremes

In their continuance will not feel themselves." K. J., V, vii, 13; v. also R. and J., IV, i, 62; T. and C., IV, ii, 108; R. of L., 969.

(3) Extremity.

"Always resolute in most extremes." I Hen. VI-IV, i, 38.

"Like to the time o' the year between the extremes Of heat and cold." A. and C., I, v, 42.

(5) Extravagance of behaviour.

"Sir, my gracious lord, To chide at your extremes it not becomes me."

W. T., IV, iii, 6.

EYAS. F. niais = an eyas, a nestling: L. nidus = a nest. The word should be anyas or a nias instead of an eyas, so, a napron should be written instead of an apron, a nadder instead of an adder. These words exemplify the effect of aphaeresis, or the disappearance of part of the initial syllable of a word. Prevôt, Manuel Lexique, thus defines the French word: "On appelle oiseau niais, un oiseau de fauconnerie qu' on prend au nid, et qui n'en est encore sortie. mot paroit formé du nid même, ou le d ne se prononce pas." Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, ii, 303:

"Like eyas hauke up mounts unto the skies. His newly-budded pinions to assay."

A nestling, a young hawk.

"There is, sir, an eyrie of children, little eyases."

Ham., II, ii, 324. Note.—Capell suggests that the word is applied to children, "from their eagerness, and their flying at game above them.

EYAS-MUSKET. Eyas (q.v.) + musket; F. mousquet = a small hawk: L. musca =a fly.

A young sparrow-hawk, a pet name for a young boy.

"How now, my eyas-musket; what news with you?" M. W. W., III, iii, 18.

EYE. I., subs. (1) The organ of sight. "I might not this believe Without the sensible and true avouch Of mine eyes."

Ham., I, i, 58.

(2) Socket, receptacle (for the eye). "A carrion death within whose empty eye There is a written scroll." M.V., II, vii, 63.

(3) Sight, look.

"All askance he holds her in his eye." V. and A., 342.

(4) Keenness of appreciation.

"I looked upon her with a soldier's eye." M. A., I, i, 289.

(5) Presence. Steevens quotes The Regulations for the Queen's Household (1627): "Such as doe service in the Queen's eye."

"We shall express our duty in his eye." Ham., IV, iv, 6; v. also A. and C., II, ii, 212; T. N., II, ii, 13.

(6) View.
"Be, in eye of every exercise, Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth."

T. G. V., I, iii, 33.

(7) A perforation, the thread-hole in a needle.

"This Ajax has not so much wit as will stop the eye of Helen's needle."

T. and C., II, i, 80.

(8) A tinge, a shade.

Ant. "The ground indeed is tawny. Seb. With an eye of green in 't."

Temp., II, i, 56.

(9) Fig. attention: literally, as Staunton observes, "The aperture on one side, which contains the bias or weight that inclines the bowl from a direct course, was sometimes called the eye."

"And this same bias, this commodity, This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word, Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France Hath drawn him from his own determined K. J., II, i, 583. aid.'

(10) Range, scope, compass. "If it stand, as you yourself still do, Within the eye of honour." M. V., I, i, 137.

(11) Phrases: (a) The eye of heaven= the sun.

> "With taper-light To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish, Is wasteful and ridiculous excess. K. J., IV, ii, 15; v. also Rich. II-I, iii, 275.

(b) To change eyes=to fall in love with each other.

"At the first sight they have changed eyes." Temp., I, ii, 440; cf. "mingle eyes" Temp., I, ii, 440; cf. A. and C., III, xiii, 156.

(c) "Eye of death" = an eye menacing death. 1 Hen. IV-I, iii, 143.

II., vb. To appear.

'But, sir, forgive me, Since my becomings kill me when they do not Eye well to you." A. and C., I, iii, 97.

EYE-BEAM. A glance of the eye.

"So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not To those fresh morning drops upon the rose, As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows. L. L. L., IV, iii, 24.

EYE-DROP. A tear.

> "That tyranny which never quaffed but blood, Would, by beholding him, have washed his knife With gentle eye-drops."

2 Hen. IV-IV, v, 88.

EYE-GLASS. The retina of the eye.

" Your eye-glass Is thicker than a cuckold's horn." W. T., I, ii, 257.

EYELESS. Dark, starless.

"Unkind remembrance! thou and eyeless Have done me shame." K. J., V, vi, 12.

EYLIAD. v. Oeiliad.

YNE. Plu. of eye (often used for rhyming purposes). Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, iv, 184:

"And eke with fatnesse swollen were his eyne; And like a crane his necke was long and fyne." "To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyne? Crystal is muddy."

M. N. D., III, ii, 138; v. also M. N. D.,
I, 1, 244; II, ii, 99; V, i, 178; A. Y. L., IV, iii, 50; L. L. L., V, ii, 20; A. and
C., II, vii, 115; Per., III, Prol. 5;
T. of S., V, i, 103; V. and A., 633.

EYRIE (Aery, eyerie). F. aerie; A.S. aeg = an egg; Low L. aria = a nest of goshawks.

(I) A nest. Cf. Dryden, Hind and Panther, Part III:

"Some haggard hawk, who had her eyry nigh,
Well pounc'd to fasten, and well wing'd to fly."
"And like an eagle o'er his aery towers,
To souse annoyance that comes near his nest."

K. J., V, ii, 149.

(2) A young brood.

"There is, sir, an eyrie of children, little eyases." Ham., II, ii, 33; v. also Rich. III-I, iii, 270.

F

FABLE. Vb. To be wrong, mistaken.

"He fables not; I hear the enemy."

I Hen. VI-IV, ii, 42.

(1) To meet in FACE. Vb. A., trs. front, to oppose.

"Give me them that will face me." 1 Hen. IV-II, iv, 167.

(2) To bully, to browbeat, to attack impudently. " Face not me." T. of S., IV, iii, 125.

(3) To countenance, to lend approval to. "Was this the face that fac'd so many follies?" Rich. II-IV, i, 284.

(4) To trim, to edge. "Thou hast faced many things."
T. of S., IV, iii, 121.

(5) To put a face or appearance on, so as to make it look better.

" Face the garment of rebellion With some fine colour that may please the eye." I Hen. IV-V, i, 74.

(6) To patch, to mend with a different colour.

"More dishonourable ragged than an old faced ancient." I Hen. IV-IV, ii, 29.

B., intrs. To uphold a false appearance, to play the hypocrite.

"Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign."

1 Hen. VI-V, iii, 142.

"To face out"=to C. Phrases: (a) brave with effrontery, to put down by positive assertion.

"A madcap ruffian and a swearing Jack, That thinks with oaths to face the matter out."

T. of S., II, i, 283.

(b) "To face down" = to withstand with boldness.

"But here's a villain that would face me down. He met me on the mart." C. E., III, i, 6.

FACE-ROYAL. "A face exempt from the touch of vulgar hands." (Johnson).

"He will not stick to say his face is a face-royal." 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 21. Note.—"Perhaps this quibbling allusion is to the English real, rial, or royal. The poet seems to mean that a barber can no more earn sixpence by his face-royal than by the face stamped on the coin called a royal: the one requiring as little shaving as the other" (Steevens). "If nothing be taken out of a royal it will remain a royal as it was. This appears to me to be Falstaff's conceit. A royal was a piece of coin of the value of ten shillings" (Mason). In the passage quoted Falstaff evidently intends a pun on the double sense of a royal or kingly face, and the face sense of a royal or kingly face, and the face stamped on the coin.

FACE WITH A CARD OF TEN. To face was a termat the game of Primero, and meant to stand boldly upon a card, whence came the phrase "to face with a card of ten "= to face anything out by sheer impudence. Nares suggests that the phrase may have expressed originally the confidence or impudence of one who with a ten, as at brag, faced or outfaced one who had really a faced card (=a court-card, i.e. knave, king, or queen) against him." Skelton is queen) quoted:

"First pycke a quarrel and fall out with him then, And so outface him with a card of ten."

And Steevens quotes from Law-Tricks (1608): "I may be outfac'd with a card of ten."

"A vengeance on your crafty wither'd hide! Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten."

T. of S., II, i, 399.

FACINERIOUS. A corruption of facinorous: L. facinus = a wicked deed. Wicked, atrocious.

"He's of a most facinerious spirit that will not acknowledge it." A. W., II, iii, 29.

(I) A deed, an act. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, ix, 338:

"She was empassion'd at that piteous act, With zelous envy of Greekes cruell fact."

Cf. also, Milton, Paradise Lost, XI, 457:

"The bloody fact

Will be avenged."

"To say the truth this fact was impious."

 K. L., I, ii, 176.
- (2) To adapt, to accommodate.

 "Know my aspect
 And fashion your demeanour to my looks."

 C. E., II, ii, 34.

(3) To contrive, to bring about.

"In the meantime I will so fashion the matter that Hero shall be absent."

M. A., II, ii, 41.

(4) To counterfeit, to prevent.

"It better fits my blood to be disdained of all than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any."

M. A., I, iii, 25.

FASHION-MONGER. A fop, who is ever inventing some new fashion. (Cf. Fancymonger.)

"Why is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashionmongers?" R. and J., II, iv, 30.

"Are you fast married?" Oth., I, ii, II.

(7) Willingly, readily.

"He teaches him to kick and to hack,
Which they'll do fast enough of themselves."

M. W. W., IV, i, 59.

FAST AND LOOSE. A cheating game, employed at fairs and other gatherings by gipsies and other sharpers to beguile the credulous of their money. It is also called "pricking at the belt or girdle." It is thus described by Sir J. Hawkins: "A leathern belt is made up into a number of intricate folds, and placed edgewise upon a table. One of the folds is made to resemble the middle of the girdle, so that whoever should thrust a skewer into it would think he held it fast to the table; whereas, when he has so done, the person with whom he plays may take hold of both ends to draw it away." Nares observes that the drift of the game was to encourage wagers whether it was fast or loose, which the juggler could make it at his option. The expression is often employed metaphorically.

"Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose, Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss."

A. and C., IV, xii, 28; v. also K. J., III, i, 242; L. L. L., I, ii, 147; III, i, 97.

2 Hen. VI-IV, ix, 45.

FIERY-POINTED. Casting rays as if pointed with fire.

"Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun, Rushing from forth a cloud bereaves our sight." R. of L., 372. Note.—It is possible that Shakespeare meant "fire y-pointed," ge—changed to y—i—ora—was a common prefix to A.S. perfect participles, as y-clept, y-clad, i-sung, a-feard. Cf. Milton, On Shakespeare, "star y-pointing pyramid," which is not a correct formation inasmuch as it is not joined to the perfect participle.

FIFTEENTH. "Fifteenth is a tribute or imposition of money laid upon any city, borough, or other town through the realm, not by the poll, or upon this or that man, but in general upon the whole city or town; and is so called, because it amounts to a fifteenth part of that which the city hath been valued at of old, or to a fifteenth part of every man's personal estate, according to a reasonable valuation." Blount: Law Dictionary.

"A proper jest, and never heard before, That Suffolk should demand a whole fitteenth For costs and charges in transporting her." 2 Hen. VI-I, i, 133.

FIFTEENS. Plural of fifteenth.

"He that made us pay one and twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy."

2 Hen. VI-IV, vii, 24.

FIFTY DISEASES OF A HORSE. seems to have been proverbial to speak of the "fifty diseases of a horse." Malone quotes The Yorkshire Tragedy (1608): "O stumbling jade! the spavin o'ertake thee! the fifty diseases stop thee." Some of these ailments are noted in T. of S., III, ii, 48 and seq.—
"the glanders," "mose in the chine," "the lampass," "the fashions," "wind-galls," "spavins," "the fives," "the staggers," "the bots."

"Though she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses." T. of S., I, ii, 78.

To insult with ficoes or contemptuous motions of the fingers by putting the thumb between the fore and middle finger, or thrusting it into the mouth (v. fico or figo).

"When Pistol lies do this (making the action of reproach), and fig me, like The bragging Spaniard."

2 Hen. IV-V, iii, 116.

FIGHT. Subs. (1) A contest of arms. "Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,
That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
That him depart."

Hen. V-IV, iii, 35.

(2) A technical naval term for something to screen the combatants during an engagement. "Fights are the wast-cloaths, which hang round about the ship, to hinder men from being seen in fight: or any place wherein men may cover themselves, and yet use their arms." Phillip's World of Words. Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, Valentinian, II, 2:

"While I were able to endure a tempest, And bear my fights out bravely, till my tackle Whistled i' the wind, and held against all weathers."

Steevens quotes The Fair Maid of the West (1615):

"Then now up with your fights, and let your ensigns, Bless with St. George's cross, play with the winds."

Dryden also employs the term in "Song of the Sea Fight in Amboyna,"

"Who ever saw a noble sight,

"That never viewed a brave sea-fight!

Hang up your bloody colours in the air,

Up with your fights, and your nettings prepare."

"Clap on more sails; pursue, up with your fights."

M. W. W., II, ii, 121.

A. W., IV, iii, 198.

(2) A list, a catalogue.

"The valued file Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle." Mac., III, i, 94; v. also Mac., V, ii, 8; $Hen.\ VIII-1$, i, 75.

(3) Rabble, horde.

"But for our gentlemen,
The common file—a plague! tribunes for them!
The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge From rascals worse than they."

Cor., I, vi, 43.

(4) Number, multitude.

"The greater file of the subject held the duke to be wise." M. M., III, ii, 122.

"Let the pebbles on the hungry beach Fillip the stars." Cor., V, iii, 59.

(3) To toss, to throw: "A diversion, is common with boys in Warwickshire and the adjoining counties, on finding a toad, to lay a board about two or three feet long, at right angles, over a stick about two or three inches in diameter... Then placing the toad at A (one end of the board), the other end is struck by a bat or large stick, which throws the creature forty or fifty feet perpendicular from the earth, and its return in general kills it. This is called Filliping the Toad" (Steevens).

"If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle." 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 204.

FILTH. (I) Anything that defiles, dirt.

"His filth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell." M. M., III, i, 92.

(2) Filthy things.

"Filths savour but themselves."
K. L., IV, ii, 39; v. also Temp., I, ii, 346;
Oth., V, ii, 230.

(3) A prostitute.

"To general filths Convert o' the instant, green virginity."
T. of A., IV, i, 6.

FIND. (1) To discover or recover by searching or by accident.

"I to the world am like a drop of water That in the ocean seeks another drop, Who, falling there to find his fellow forth, Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself."

C. E., 1, ii, 37; v. also M. V., 1, i, 143. Note.—" Find forth "= find out.

"And the poor beetle, that we tread upon In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great As when a giant dies."

M. M., III, i, 80; v. also Cor., V, iii, III.

(4) To learn, to ascertain.

"Bring us what she says, And how you find of her."

A. and C., V, i, 68.

(5) To provide, to furnish. Cf. Chaucer, The Nonne Preestes Tale, 9:

"By housbondrye of such as God hir sente, fond (=provided for) herself, and eek hir doghtren two.'
"Hugh Capet also . . .

To find his title with some shows of truth

Convey'd himself as heir to the Lady Lingare." Hen. V-I, ii, 72. Note.—Various readings have been here suggested—e.g.—Mason, "to fine," from the metaphor of fining liquors: Warburton, "to fine" = to refine: Steevens, "to fine" = to make showy or specious: Johnson, "to find" = to deduce: Knight, "to find" = to deduce. to deduce.

FIND-FAULT. A detractor. faultfinder, a censorious person.

"The liberty that follows our places, stops the mouth of all find-faults." Hen. V-V, ii, 257.

FINE, 1. L. F. finitus = wellfin: rounded.

Adj. (1) Not coarse, small.

" Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery tull of fine dirt?" Ham., V, i, 101.

Note.—Rushton, Shakespeare as a Lawyer, p. 10: "His fine pate is filled not with fine dirt, but with the last dirt, which will ever occupy it, leaving a satirical inference to be drawn, that even in his lifetime his head was filled with dirt."

Fair. of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt?" Ham., V, i, 101.

(2) Fair.

"Was 't not to this end That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?"

"You have made a fine hand, fellows."

Hen. VIII-V, iv, 58.

FINE, 2. L. finis = an end. I., subs. (i) End, upshot, result. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, V, iii, 329:

And all men's eyes and hearts, which these among Stood gazing, filled were with rufull tine
And secret feare, to see their fatall fine."

"Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries?"

Ham., V, i, 101; v. also M. A., I, i, 215;
A. W., IV, iv, 35.

(2) A penalty (pecuniary or other). "Mine were the very cipher of a function. To fine the faults whose fine stands in record."

M. M., II, ii, 40; v. also K. J., V, iv, 37.

(3) Penance for an offence.

"If I profane with my unworthiest hand This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this."

R. and J., I, v, 92.

(4) A legal term, an agreement in feudal law between persons con-" A fine, cerning lands or rents. which was till quite recently a very usual method of transferring an estate of freehold, was neither more nor less than amicable agreement of a suit, actual or fictitious, by leave of the King or his justices, whereby the lands which were the subject of the action became, or were acknowledged to be, the right of one of the parties" (Blackstone).

> "Is this the fine of his fines?" Ham., V, i, 101.

(5) Phrases; (a) "Fine and recovery" -Ritson observes: "Our author had been long enough in an attorney's office to learn that-fine recovery is the strongest assurance known to English law."

"If the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again."

M. W. W., II, ii, 186. There is again a quibbling reference to the phrase in C. E., II, ii, 73.

(b) "In fine"=in conclusion, in short.

"Your daughter . . .
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chastely absent." A. W., III, vii, 37.

M. M., II, ii, 40; v. also M. M., III, i, 114.

(3) To fix as the amount of ransom. " Know'st thou not

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?"

Hen. V-IV, vii, 70.

FINELESS. Infinite, boundless (only once used by Shakespeare).

"But riches fineless is as pure as winter To him that ever fears he shall be poor."

Oth., III, iii, 173.

FIRAGO. Virago, a termagant woman (a random expression used by Sir Toby, and wrongly applied to a man whom Viola personates).

"I have not seen such a firago."
T. N., III, iv, 261.

FIRE-DRAKE. A worker at a furnace, a man with a red face. This word is employed with various meanings-(1) a fiery dragon (Beaumont and Fletcher); (2) a fiery meteor, a will-o'the -wisp or ignis fatuus (Drayton); (3) a kind of fireworks, a rocket, e.g.: "Like firedrakes Mounted a little, gave a crack, and fell."

Middleton, Five Gallants. "That fire-drake did I hit three times on Hen. VIII-V, iv, 34. the head."

FIRE, FIRE: Cast on no water. Blackstone observes that this alludes to an old popular catch of three parts in these words-

"Scotland burneth, Scotland burneth, Fire, fire-Fire, fire; Fire, fire—Fire, me, Cast on some more water."

T. of S., IV, i, 20. FIRE-ILL. "A fire-ill take her!"= "Pox take her" (Nares). Seward unnecessarily conjectures "Ferril" for ferula, which would have been quite appropriate on the lips of Gerrold the Schoolmaster, as in T. N. K., III, v, 112; it is, however, one of the Countrymen who is speaking in the following passage:

"A fire-ill take her! does she flinch now?"
T. N. K., III, v, 53.

FIRE-NEW. Brand-new, fresh from the mint or forge, applied originally to things manufactured in metal, afterwards to anything new.

flake=flash (obsolete). Cf. Spenser, Faeric Queene, III, ii, 43:

"And ever and anone the rosy red Flasht through her face, as it had been a flake Of lightning."
"The cilent hours steel on

"The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east."
Rich. III-V, iii, 87.
Note.—It is evidently intended to depict clouds through which light is sifting.

FLAMEN. A priest whose services were appropriated to one deity.

"Seld-shown flamens
Do press among the popular throngs."

Cor., II, i, 203.

FLAP-DRAGON. I., subs. A small combustible body set afloat burning in a glass of liquor. Candle-ends were sometimes used, and a toper's dexterity was shown by swallowing the liquor unhurt. Almonds, plums, and raisins were also used for this purpose.

"A' plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flapdragons." 2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 207; v. also L. L. L.,

V, i, 40.

To engulf, to swallow at a II., vb. gulp, as gallants in the revels swallow flapdragons to the health of their mistresses.

FLOUTING-STOCK (Evans, vlouting-stog) = a laughing-stock.

"He has made us his vlouting stog."

M. W., III, i, 103.

FLOWER-DE-LUCE. Note.—It is disputed whether this flower is a white lily or a bulbous iris. The fleur-de-lis (Lat. lilius) is the armorial emblem of France, but there seems some confusion with luce as if from lux. Ellacombe quotes St. Francis de Sales (contemporary with Shakespeare), who says "Charity comprehends the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost, and resembles a beautiful Flower-de-luce, which has six leaves whiter than snow, and in the middle the pretty little golden hammers," a description which, as Rolfe observes, better fits the lily than the iris. Spenser, on the other hand, distinguishes be-tween lilies and the "flowre Delice." v. Shepherd's Kalendar, April:

"Strowe me the ground with Daffadowndillies, And cowslips, and Kingcups, and loved Lillies: The pretic Paunce,

And the Chevisaunce Shall match with the fair flower Delice."

Bacon makes the same distinction, v. Essay, 46: "Flower Delices and Lillies of all Natures." The judgment of most recent writers seems to identify the flower with the more common species of Iris. Shakespeare, however, includes it among the lilies, a fact which need not be wondered at, as scientific botanical knowledge was not very accurate in his time.

"Lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one."
W. T., IV, iii, 127; v. also I Hen. VI-I, i, 80; 1, ii, 99; 2 Hen. VI-V, i, 11.

FLOWERY TENDERNESS. Care, concern expressed by a figure of comparison (flowery= figurative).

"Think you I can a resolution fetch From flowery tenderness."

From flowery tenderness."

M. M., III, i, 82.

FLURT. To snap the fingers derisively, to scorn.

"Now flurted
By Peace, for whom he fought."

FLUSH. Adj. (1) Vigorous, fresh, glowing.

"All his crimes broad blown, as flush as May."

Ham., III, iii, 81.

(2) Ripe.

"Now the time is flush."
T. of A., V, iv, 8.

FLUX. (1) Any flow or issue of matter.

"Civet is of a baser birth than tar: the very uncleanly flux of a cat."

A. Y. L., III, ii, 66.

(2) An assemblage, a concourse.

"Then, being there alone,
Left and abandon'd of his velvet friends,
'Tis right:' quoth he; 'thus misery doth part
The flux of company.'"

A. Y. L., II, i, 52.

FLUXIVE. Flowing, weeping.

"These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes."

L. C., 50.

FLYING AT THE BROOK. A term used in falconry for hawking at waterfowl.

"He will foin like any devil."

2 Hen. IV-II, i, 16; v. also M. W. W.,
II, iii, 21.

II., subs. A thrust, a push of the sword (in fencing). Cf. Harrington's Ariosto (1591), XXXVI, 55:

"Now he intends no longer to forbeare, Both hurleth out a foyne with force so maine." "Come, no matter for your foins."

K. L., IV, vi, 221.

FOINING. Posturing.

"Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining fence."

M. A., V, i, 84.

FOISON. F. foison; L. fusio, fundo = Ipour forth. Plenty, abundance. Cf. Spenser, The Mourning Muse of Thestylis, 98: "Her heart sent drops of pearle, which fell in toyson downe

Twixt lilly and the rose."
"Nature should bring forth, Of its own kind, all foison, all abundance,

Of its own kind, air forson, air abundance, To feed my innocent people."

Temp., II, i, 160; v. also Temp., IV, i, 110; M. M., I, iv, 43; A. and C., II, vii, 20; T. N. K., V, i, 53; Sonnet LIII, 9.

(4) Obstinate tenacity.

"Never could maintain his part but in the force of his will." M. A., I, i, 201. "Warburton's professional eye first detected the allusion here to heresy, as defined in scholastic divinity: according to which it was not merely heterodox opinion, but a wilful adherence to such opinion. The subject was a familiar one in Shakespeare's day" (White).

(5) Moral efficacy.

"The force of his own merit makes his way." Hen. VIII-I, i, 64.

(6) Virtue, efficacy.

"Through the forest have I gone, But Athenian found I none, On whose eyes I might approve This flower's force in stirring love."

M. N. D., II, ii, 69.

(7) Wild exposure.

The martlet Builds in the weather on the outward wall, Even in the force and road of casualty."

M. V., II, ix, 30.

(8) Naval or military array. "O Thou, whose captain I account myself, Look on my forces with a gracious eye." *Rich. III-*V, iii, 110.

(1) To compel, to II., vb. A., trs. enforce.

Hen. V-II, Prol., 32.

nen

FORCED. (1) Imputed.
"For ever

Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou Takest up the princess by that forced baseness Which he has put upon 't."

W. T., II, iii, 78.

(2) Far-fetched.

Thou dearest Perdita, With these forced thoughts, I prithee, darken

The mirth o' the feast." W. T., IV, iii, 41. FORCEFUL. Powerful, strong, impetu-ous. "Follow

Our forceful instigation." W. T., II, i, 152.

FORDO. For, with a negative force.

(1) To destroy utterly, to undo. Cf. Chaucer, The Knightes Tale, 702:

"Thus hath your ire our kinrede al fordo." Cf. also Spenser, Faerie Queene, V, xii, 22:

"Appointed by that mightie Faerie Prince, Great Gloriane, that Tyrant to fordo."

"This is the very ecstasy of love,
Whose violent property fordoes itself."

Ham., II, i, 101; v. also Ham., V, i, 207;

K. L., V, iii, 291; Oth., V, i, 129.

(2) To exhaust, to overcome. "Whilst the heavy ploughman snores, All with weary task fordome." M. N. D., V, i, 363.

FORE-ADVISE. To advise beforehand.
"Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advised, had touch'd his spirit

And tried his inclination."

Cor., II, iii, 183.

Cym., III, iii, 73.

FOREFEND. v. Forfend.

FOREGOER. An ancestor.

"Honours thrive, When rather from our acts we them derive Than our foregoers." A. W., II, iii, 136.

FOREHAND. I., subs. (1) The chief part, the thing preferred to others.

"The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
The sinew and the forehand of our host."

T. and C., I, iii, 143.

(2) Circumstances which combine to give one some superiority over another.

"And, but for ceremony, such a wretch, Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep,

Had the forehand and vantage of a king."

Hen, V-IV, i, 265.

II., adj. (1) Previous, prior.

"You will say she did embrace me as a husband,
And so extenuate the forehand sin."

M. A., IV, i, 47.

(2) Forward.

"He would have clapp'd i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft, a fourteen, and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see."

2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 41.

Note.—A forehand shaft is an arrow specially formed for shooting straight forward. Ascham refers to it, not very clearly, in his Toxophilus, as follows: "Agayne the biggbrested shafte is fytte for him which shoteth right afore him, or els the brest, being weke, should never wythstande that strong piththy kind of shootynge; thus the underhande must have a small breste, to go cleane away out of the bowe, the forehande must have a bigge breste, to bere the great myghte of the bowe."

FOREHORSE TO A SMOCK. The forehorse was the foremost horse in a team and was usually gaily caparisoned with tufts, ribbons, and bells. Bertram complains that bedizened like one of these horses he will have to usher in and squire ladies at court instead of winning renown in the field.

A. W., II, i, 30.

FOREIGN. (1) Of another country, alien, extraneous.

"The watery kingdom whose ambitious head Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar To stop the foreign spirits."

M. V., II, vii, 46.

(2) Living abroad, employed in foreign embassies.

"They will not stick to say you envied him, And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous, Kept him a foreign man still."

Hen. VIII-II, ii, 127.

(3) Pertaining to strangers.

"I love the king your father, and yourself, With more than foreign heart."

Per., IV, i, 34; v. also Oth., IV, iii, 89.

FOREPAST. Previous, antecedent.

"My forepast proofs, howe'er the matter fall, Shall tax my fears of little vanity, Having vainly feared too little."

A. W., V, iii, 121.

FORESAY. To decree, to pre-ordain. "Let ordinance

Come as the gods foresay it."

Cym., IV, ii, 146.

FORESLOW. v. Forslow.

FORESPEND (Forspend). (1) To exhaust, to wear out, to use up. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, IV, v, 301:

"Who was to weet a wretched wearish elfe, With hollow eyes and rawbone cheekes forspent."

"After him came spurring hard
A gentleman, almost forspent with speed."
2 Hen. IV-I, i, 37; v. also 3 Hen. VI-II,
iii, I,

(2) To bestow beforehand.

"Towards himself his goodness forespent on We must extend our notice."

Cym., II, iii, 58.

The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke." 2 Hen. IV-IV, v, 141; v. also R. of L.,

(2) To judge beforehand, to regard with prejudice.

> "(They) forestall prescience and esteem no But that of hand." T. and C., I, iii, 199.

(3) To anticipate and so arrest. Skeat observes that the original sense of the word is "to buy up goods before they had been displayed at a stall in the market," hence, to anticipate. "And what's in prayer but this two-fold force,

To be forestalled ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd being down?"

Ham., III, iii, 49; v. also Ham., V, ii, 203.

(4) To prevent from seeing, hence, to deprive, to dispossess, to take from. " May

This night forestall him of the coming day."

Cym., III, v, 69.

To the word in FORESTALL'D. passage that follows various explanations have been offered—" Asked before it is granted (Malone): "pre-determined shall not be granted, or will be rendered nugatory" (Mason): "precluded from being absolute, by the refusal of the offender to accuse or alter his conduct: "supplicated, not offered freely:" "cut off beforehand." Note the use of the same expression by Massinger, The Duke of Milan, III, i, 152:

"Nor come I as a slave, Pinion'd and fetter'd, in a squalid weed, Falling before thy feet, kneeling and howling, For a forestall'd remission."

Again, in the same author, The Bondman, III, iii, 170:

"Better expose Our naked breasts to their swords and sell Our lives with the most advantage, than to trust In a forestall'd remission."
"Never shall you see that I will beg

A ragged and forestall'd remission 2 Hen, IV-V, ii, 37. FORETHINK. (1) To anticipate, to fore-

"Forethinking this, I have already fit—
'Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, That answer to them." Cym., III, iv, 168.

(2) To contrive or design beforehand, to decree.

" Alter not the doom Forethought by heaven." K. J., III, i, 312.

FOREWARD. The vanguard, the front (only once used by Shakespeare).

"My foreward shall be drawn out all in length." Rich. III-V, iii, 294.

FORFEIT. I., vb. A., intrs. (1) To transgress.

"Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind." M. M., III, ii, 173.

(2) To fail to observe an obligation. "I will have the heart of him if he forfeit."

M. V., III, i, 108.

B., trs. (1) To lose a right or claim by a fault or crime.

"All the souls that were were forfeit once."

M. M., II, ii, 73.

(2) To render subject or liable.

"Can yet the lease of my true love control, Suppos'd as torteit to a confin'd doom." Sonnet CVII, 4.

(3) To give up, to abandon.

"Undone and forfeited to cares for ever."

A. W., II, iii, 262.

(1) Act of being deprived II., subs. of something for a fault or neglect, forfeiture.

Our state to be divisint and out of trame."

Our state to be disjoint and out of frame."

Ham., I, ii, 20; v. also L. L., III, ip3.

(6) The ordered universe, the cosmos.

"It goes a beauty with my disposition."

"It goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory."

Ham., II, ii, 288; v. also Mac., III, ii, 16.

(7) Coherence, shape, form.
"Put your discourse into some frame."
Ham., III, ii, 277; v. also M. M., V, i, 61.

FRAMPOLD (Frampal). Etym. doubtful. Capel derives it from the custom of franc-pole, or free-pole, in some manors, by which the tenants had a right to the wood of their fence, and all that they could reach with their hatchets. This right gave rise to many litigious suits: and hence the meaning of the word.

Cross, ill-humoured, peevish, fretful, quarrelsome, hence, perhaps, vexatious. Cf. Ben Jonson, Tale of a Tub: "Nay, hilts I pray thee: grow not fram-pull now." Cf. also Scott, Quentin Durward, Cap. XXVII: "Thou art ever such a frampold grumbler."

"Her nusband! alas the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; he's a very jealous man; she leads a very frampold life with him."

M. W. W., II, ii, 82.

FRANCHISE. F. franchir = to make free, franc (L. francus) = free.

I., subs. The privilege of a freeman.
"Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd Into an augur's bore."

Cor., IV, vi, 87.

II., vb. To make free.

"So I lose none In seeking to augment it, but still keep My bosom fanchised and allegiance clear, I shall be counsell'd." Mac., II, i, 28.

FRANK, 1. F. franc.

Adj. (1) Free, unrestrained.

"The frank election made,
Thou'st power to choose, and they none to forsake."

A. W., II, iii, 62.

(2) Bountiful, liberal.

"Frank nature, rather curious than in haste, Hath well compos'd thee." A. W., I, ii, 20; v. also K. L., III, iv, 20; R. and J., II, ii, 131; Sonnet IV, 4.

(3) Open, candid, ingenuous.

"With frank and with uncurbed plainness Tell us the Dauphin's mind." Hen. V-I, ii, 244.

FRANK, 2. O.F. franc = a pigsty.

I., subs. An enclosure for fattening animals, a sty (only once used as subs. by Shakespeare). Cf. Scott, Woodstock, XVIII: "Here we are again in the old frank, Joliffe—well victualled too."

"Where sups he? Doth the old boar feed in the old frank?" (=in the old quarters).

2 Hen. IV-II, ii, 128.

II., vb. To shut up in a sty.

"He is frank'd up to fatting for his pains."

Rich III-I, iii, 314; v. also Rich. III-IV, v, 3.

FRANKLIN. L. francus = free.

A freeholder, a yeoman, a man above a villain but not a gentleman. The usage varied. "Chaucer's frankeleyn," says Nares, "is evidently a very rich and luxurious gentleman: he was the chief man at the sessions, and had been sheriff and frequently knight of the shire." Cf. Chaucer, The Squires Tale, 695:

"'In feith, Squyer, thou hast thee wel yquit, And gentilly I preise well thy wit,' Quod the frankeleyn."

Cf. also Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, x,

49:
"A spatious court they see,

Both plaine and pleasaunt to be walked in,
Where them does meet a francklin faire and free."
"There's a franklin in the wild of Kent hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold."

FRET, 2. A.S. fretian or fraetwan = to ornament.

To variegate, to interlace.

"Yon grey lines
That fret the clouds are messengers of day."
J. C., II, i, 103.
Note.—At a meeting of the New Shakespeare Society on October 11, 1878, a paper was contributed by Mr. Ruskin on the word fret as employed in this passage. The following is an outline of the paper and the discussion as it appeared in The Academy of the time: "Fret means primarily the rippling of the cloud—as sea by wind; secondarily, the breaking it asunder for light to come through. It implies a certain degree of vexation, some dissolution, much order, and extreme beauty. The reader should have seen 'Daybreak' and think what is broken, and by what. The cloud of night is broken up, by Day, which breaks out, breaks in, as from heaven to earth, with a breach in the cloud wall of it. The thing that the day breaks up is partly a garment rent, the blanket of the dark torn to be peeped through. . . Mr. Sanjo of Japan, Mr. E. Rose, and Mr. Hetherington described the early dawns they had seen, which bore out Shakespeare's and Mr. Ruskin's descriptions of the grey light bursting through ragged gashes in the clouds; and Mr. Harrison instanced the parallel lines in R. and J., III, V, 7: to come through. It implies a certain degree

v, 7:
"Look, love, what envious streaks Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east," where the streaks of light—grey light, too ("yon grey")—are not like lace on the clouds, but behind and bursting through the crevices that the severing clouds leave between them, ragged-edged, fretted like lace. In colour, form, fact, the two passages correspond with nature (v. Rolfe's ed. R. and J., p. 192).

Cf. Spenser, Faerie (2) To ornament. Queene, II, ix, 326:

"In a long purple pall, whose skirt with gold Was fretted all about, she was arrayd."

"The roof o' the chamber

With golden cherubins is fretted."
Cym., II, iv, 88; v. also Ham., II, ii, 290.

FRET, 3. F. frete = a verril, the iron band, or hoop that keeps a wooden tool from rising.

I. subs. The point at which a string instrument is to be stopped, in such an instrument as the lute or guitar (Nares). Only so much of the string can be set in vibration as lies between the fret and the bridge. Frets are therefore employed to regulate the pitch of the notes produced on stringed instruments. Cf. Milton, Paradise VII, 597:

"The solemn pipe And dulcimer, all organs of sweet stop, All sounds on fret by string or golden wire, Tempered soft tunings, intermixed with voice Choral or unison."

"I did but tell her she mistook her frets And bow'd the hand to teach her fingering." T. of S., II, i, 148; v. also R. of L., 1140.

II., verb. To manipulate.

"Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, yet you cannot play upon me." Ham., III, ii, 354. Note.—It is perhaps used here in the other sense of "to annoy."

FRETTED. Varied, fluctuating.

"His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear Of what he has and has not.'

And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken

Is so from word to word." A. W., III, vii, 10.

FRONT. Beginning.

"Flora peering in April's front." W. T., IV, iv, 3.

FRONTIER. (1) An outwork in fortification.

" Palisadoes, frontiers, parapets."

1 Hen. IV-II, iii, 48.

(2) Scowling aspect—possibly connected with (1).

> "And majesty could never yet endure The moody frontier of a servant brow." I Hen. IV-I, iii, 19.

FRONTLET. A forehead band, which had the effect of contracting the brows. This sometimes may have given to the expression an angry, scowling look. Hence, the term is equivalent to a trown.

> "What makes that frontlet on?" K. L., I, iv, 176.

FROTH AND LIME. The allusion in the following passage is to the tapster's tricks of frothing beer and liming sack. Rolfe observes: "The frothing is said to have been done by putting soap into the bottom of the tankard when the beer was drawn. Cotgrave's Wits Interpreter says that the trick can be thwarted if the customer will watch his opportunity and rub the inside of the tankard with the skin of a red herring."

"Let me see thee froth and lime." M. W. W., I, iii, 13.

Also called galligaskins, which GASKINS. Skeat says to be a corruption Garguesques, Greguesques and that the notion of some of the weavers of galligaskins that they were so called because they originally came from Gascony is a mistaken one. Gascovnes is nevertheless a variant which appears in some of the old writers: v. Lyly, Mother Bombie, IV, 2: "Much in my gascoynes, more in my round house" (= hose). Nares has suggested Gallo-Gascoins, being a kind of trousers first worn by the Gallic Gascons, i.e. the inhabitants of Gascony, probably the sea-faring people in the parts of that country.

Wide, loose breeches.

"If one point break, the other will hold; Or if both break, your gaskins fall."

T. N., I, v, 23.

Oth., III, iii, 280; v. also M. M., IV, vi, 13.

(2) Honourable.

"He, being remiss, Most generous and free from all contriving, Will not peruse the foils." Ham., IV, vii, 135. (3) Noble, magnanimous, lofty in thought.

"When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madman's issue?"

K. L., I, ii, 8.

GENIUS. L. = a tutelar spirit of a person.

(I) A tutelary deity whose province it was to take care of one from birth, attendant spirit. According Empedocles every man came into the world with two angels or demons, the one inciting him to do right, the other urging him to hazardous enterprises. This theory was known as the Platonic doctrine of the soul, and is alluded to by Shakespeare himself in the 144th Sonnet. Cf. Edinburgh Review, July 1869, p. 48: "According to the physiology and psychology of the time, the soul was regarded as essentially a spiritual nature temporarily united with mortal faculties and a mortal frame which it wields as instruments. . . In mediaeval theology, indeed, the rational soul is an angel, the lowest in the hierarchy for being clothed for a time in the perishing vesture of the body. But it is not necessarily an angel of light. It may be a good or evil genius, a guardian angel or a fallen spirit, a demon of light or darkness. But, whatever its nature, it rules, guards, keeps and controls the man, wielding the lower powers as instruments to its own issues." (Quoted from Knight's Julius Caesar.)

"There is not but he
Whose being I do fear; and under him,
My genius is rebuked."
Mac., III, i, 56; v. also Temp., IV, i, 27;
J. C., II, i, 66; C. E., V, i, 332.

Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton."
Hen. V-II, Prol., 35; v. also M. N. D.,
V, i, 126; 436; M. W. W., III, ii, 78;
L. L. L., II, i, 225.

IV., vb. To raise in rank, to ennoble.
"For he to-day that sheds his blood with me,

Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition."

Hen. V-IV, iii, 63,

GENTLEMAN OF A COMPANY. A subordinate officer with small pay. Cf. Fletcher, Honest Man's Fortune, II, ii, 29: "I myself was but then gentleman of a company, and had as much need as any man."

"And now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth."

2 Hen. IV-IV, ii, 23; v. also Hen. V-IV,

i, 39.

GENTLENESS. (1) Gentlemanly feeling, softness of manners, sweetness of disposition.

"Perforce I must confess I thought you lord of more true gentleness."

M. N. D., II, ii, 132.

(2) Civility, affability.

"Your gentleness shall force
More than your force move us to gentleness."

A. Y. L., II, vii, 101.

(3) Kindness, goodwill.

"Your gentleness shall force More than your force move us to gentleness."

A. Y. L., II, vii, 102; v. also T. N., II, i, 38; T. A., I, i, 237.

(4) Easiness, moderation.

"This milky gentleness and course of yours Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon, You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom Than praised for harmful mildness."

K. L., I, iv, 329.

(5) Sweetness.

"The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness." Temp., II, i, 133. Temp., II, i, 133.

(6) Mental calmness, coolness.

"Let gentleness my strong enforcement be."
A. Y. L., II, vii, 117.

GENTRY. (1) Courtesy, civility, politeness, good-breeding.

"If it will please you To show us so much gentry and goodwill."

Ham., II, ii, 22; v. also Ham., V, ii, 107.

(2) Gentle birth, rank derived from inheritance.

"Where gentry, title, wisdom, Cannot conclude but by the yea and no Of general ignorance." Cor., III, i, 144; v. also W. T., I, ii, 38; R. of L., 569.

(3) People of good breeding.

"We do incite The gentry to this business."

Cym., III, vii, 7.

Cf. Spenser, GERMAN. brother. Α Faerie Queene, II, viii, 406:

"Which when his german saw."
"You will have coursers for cousins, and gennets for germans."
Oth., I, i, 109.

GERMANE. (1) Nearly related, akin.

"Those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman."
W. T., IV, iii, 755; v. also T. of A., IV, iii, 348; T. N. K., V, i, 9.

(2) Pertinent, appropriate.

"The phrase would be more germane to the matter if we could carry cannon by our sides."

Ham., V, ii, 149.

GERMAN CLOCK. The cheap wooden from Germany clock imported inferior workmanship, and frequently out of repair. The old dramatists were fond of comparing the feminine composition to their elaborate but unreliable machinery. Cf. Ben Jonson, Epicure, IV, 2: "She takes herself asunder still when she goes to bed, into some twenty boxes; and about next day at noon is put together again, like a great German Clock." Cf. also Westward Ho (1607): "No German clock, no mathematical engine whatsoever, requires so much reparation.'

"A woman that is like a German clock, Still a-repairing, ever out of frame." Oth., III, i, 187.

GERMEN. L = a sprout, a shoot.

A germ, a sprout, a fruitful seed.

"Though the treasure Of nature's germens tumble all together E'en till destruction sicken, answer me."

Mac., IV, i, 59; v. also K. L., III, ii, 8.

GEST, 1. O.F. jiste = a bed, a couch. A journal or roll of the several days and stages prefixed in the progress of English sovereigns, hence, the fixed limit of a visit. Cf. Strype, Memorials of Cranmer, p. 283 (quoted by Nares): Cranmer entreated Cecil "to let him have the new-resolved upon gests, from that time to the end, that he might from time to time know where the King was." Steevens quotes Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay (1594): "Castile, and lovely Elinor with him,

Have in their gests resolv'd for Oxford town."

He also quotes The White Devil (1612):

"Like the gests in the progress, You know were you shall find me." "I'll give him my commission

To let him there a month behind the gest Prefix'd for's parting." W. T., I, ii, 41.

GEST, 2. L. gesta = things done. An exploit, a deed of arms. Warner, Albion's England (1586), Book I,

"To write the gests of Britons stout and actes of English men."

Cf. also Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, x, 135:

"And goodly gan discourse of many a noble gest."
"Run one before,

And let the queen know of our gests." A. and C., IV, 82.

GET GROUND. To get an advantage over.

"With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress." Cym., I, iv, 91.

GET WITHIN. To engage with, to grapple with, to spring upon.

> "Some get within him, take his sword away." C. E., V, i, 34.

GHAST. v. Gast.

GHASTLY. Adv. A.S. gaestan = tofrighten.

Hideously, haggardly (common as an adjective).

> "But see, his face is black and full of blood, His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd, Staring full ghastly like a strangled man." 2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 170.

GHASTNESS. v. Gastness.

GHOST. I., subs. (1) The soul of man, breath of life.

"Often did I strive To yield the ghost." Ric Rich. III-I, iv, 37.

(2) Spirit after death, shade, an apparition, a spectre.

"Vex not his ghost; O, let him pass! he hates him much That would upon the rack of this tough world

Stretch him out longer.' K. L., V, iii, 312; v. also J. C., II, ii, 23; Ham., I, v, 125; M. N. D., III, ii, 381.

(3) A corpse (as frequently in our early writers).

"Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and blood-less."

2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 161; v. also Ham., I, iv, 85.

(4) A skeleton.

"He will look as hollow as a ghost, As dim and meagre as an ague's fit, And so he'll die." K. J., III, iv, 84. II., vb. To haunt as a ghost.

"Since Julius Caesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
Then saw you labouring for him."

A. and C., II, vi, 13.

GIANT. Adj. Monstrous, enormous, incredible.

"A giant traitor." Hen. VIII-I, ii, 199.

GIANT-DWARF. A dwarf with the power of a giant.

"This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid."

L. L. L., III, i, 177.

GIB. An abbreviation for Gilbert=O.F. tibert, the name given to the cat in the old fable of "Reynard the Fox."

A male cat, gen. one that has been castrated. Cf. Dunbar, Twa Merrit Wemen (1508), 120:

"I dar nought luk to my luf for that lene gib."

"I am so melancholy as a gib cat or a lugged bear."

I Hen. IV-I, ii, 68; v. also Ham., III, iv, 183.

Note.—"As melancholy as a gib cat" is a common proverbial phrase, cf. Crockett, Standard Bearer, 65: "I had been sitting demure as a gib cat."

GIBBET. Vb. To hang or suspend in any way.

"A' shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket."

2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 245.

Note.—The allusion is to the nimbleness with which a man fixes the slings on a barrel of beer when it is to be hoisted.

GIDDILY. Carelessly, heedlessly, negligently.

"The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,

Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune."
T. N., II, iv, 84.

GIDDINESS. Inconsiderateness, thought-lessness, rashness.

"Neither call the giddiness of it in question."

A. Y. L., V, ii, 5.

GIDDY. (1) Causing giddiness, rendering dizzy.

"Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship boy's eyes, and rock his brains

In cradle of the rude imperious surge . . .?"
2 Hen. IV-III, i, 18.
(Note.—This is an example of hypallage.)

(2) Dizzy.

"He that is giddy thinks the world goes round."

T. of S., V, ii, 20.

(3) Mazed, wild, distracted.

"Thou hast made me giddy With these ill tidings." K. J., IV, ii, 131.

(4) Changeable, fickle, uncertain. "Giddy in spirit still gazing in a doubt Whether those peals of praise be his or no." M. V., III, ii, 145; v. also A. Y. L., IV, i, 144; Hen. V-III, vi, 28. (5) Excitable, excited, elated.

"Art not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too?"

M. A., III, iii, 126; v. also 2 Hen. IV-IV, v, 214.

(6) Vacillating, unsteady.

"We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us."

Hen. V-I, ii, 145.

(7) Tumultuous.

"I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world."
Rich. III-II, iii, 5.

GIDDY-PACED. Skipping, flighty, fickle, moving irregularly.

"More than light airs, and recollected terms
Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times."
T. N., II, iv, 6.

GIG. A top, a whirligig. Cf. use of verb in Cleaveland's Poems (1651):

"No wonder they'l confesse no losse of men;
For Rupert knocks 'em, till they gig agen."

"To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon to tune a jig."

L. L. L., IV, iii, 162; v. also L. L. L., V,
i, 60, 62.

GIGLOT (Giglet). Dim. of giggle: Icel.

gikkr=a pert person.
I., subs. A light giddy girl, a minx,

a flirt, a wanton.

"Away with those giglots too, and with the other confederate companion."

II., adj. (I) Loose, wanton.

"Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a giglot wench."

1 Hen. VI-IV, vii, 41.

(2) Inconstant, fickle, giddy.

"The famed Cassibelan, who was once at point—
O giglot fortune!—to master Caesar's sword."

Cym., III, i, 30.

GILD. (1) To wash over with gold. "To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,

Is wasteful and ridiculous excess." $K.\ J.$, IV, ii, II.

(2) To make resplendent.

"Gilded tombs do worms enfold."

M. V., II, vii, 69.

(3) To supply with money, to enrich.

"I will make fast the doors, and gild myself With some more ducats."

M. V., II, vi, 49.

(4) To make drunk, to flush with drinking. Note.—In the following passage there is an allusion to the "grand elixir" or aurum potabile of the alchemists, which they pretended would confer immortal youth upon him who drank it. It was a joke of the time to compare old sack not only to this elixir but also to the philosopher's stone, and "gilded," is also found in the same sense as here. Cf. Fletcher, Chances, IV, 3:

Duke. "Is she not drunk too?

Wh. A little gilded o'er, sir. Old sack, old sack, boys!"

"Find this grand liquor that hath gilded them."

Temp., V, i, 280.

(5) To give a good appearance to, to make plausible.

"I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have."

I Hen. IV-V, iv, 154.

(6) To redden, to besmear with blood. Note.—Nares observes that though there is no real resemblance between the colour of blood and that of gold, it is certain that to gild with blood was an expression not uncommon in the sixteenth century. At this we shall not be surprised, if we recollect that gold was popularly and very generally regarded as red. Cf. Mac., II, iii, 94: "His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood." Cf. Heywood, Iron Age, pt. II:

"We have all gilt our Greekish arms With blood of our own nation." "If he do bleed,

I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt."

Mac., II, ii, 56; v. K. J., II, i, 316.

GILDED. (1) Gay-coloured.

"I saw him run after a gilded butterfly."

Cor., I, iii, 57; v. also A. Y. L., IV, iii, 109.

(2) Covered with a yellow scum,

"Thou didst drink
The stale of horses and the gilded puddle."

A. and C., I, iv, 62.

GILDERS (Guilders). Dut. and Ger. guilder=a florin, a coin worth is. 8d. Money (generally).

"To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen.—

Who, wanting gilders to redeem their lives, Have seal'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods."

C. E., I, i, 8; v. also C. E., IV, i, 4.

GILL-FLIRT. v. Flirt-gill.

GILLIAN. A woman's name = Juliana. C. E., III, i, 31.

GILLYVOR (Gillyflower). F. giroflée: Gr. κύρυον=a nut, φύλλον = a leaf. The stock, pink, sweetwilliam, wallflower.

"The fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations and streak'd gillyvors."

W. T., IV, iii, 93.

Too wide for Neptune's hips."
2 Hen. IV-III, i, 50; v. also Cym., III,
i, 81.

(3) Phrase: To turn the girdle. Both the origin and the exact meaning of this expression are doubtful. According to some, the sword was formerly worn much at the back, and to bring it within reach when required, the buckle of the belt had to be turned behind. Again, Holt White observes: "Large belts were worn with the buckle before, but for wrestling the buckle was turned behind, to give the adversary a To turn fairer grasp at the girdle. the buckle behind, therefore, was a challenge." Cf. Cowley, On the Government of Oliver Cromwell: "The next month he swears by the living God, that he will turn them out of doors, and he does so in his princely way of threatening, bidding them turne the buckles of their them." Farmer girdles behind quotes from a letter (1602) in Winwoods' Memorials: "I said what I spake was not to make him angry. He replied, if I were angry, I might turn the buckle of my girdle behind them."

"If he be (angry), he knows how to turn his girdle."

M. A., V, i, 140.

HEAVY-THICK. Thick and heavy.

"If that surly spirit, melancholy,
Had baked thy blood and made it heavythick."

K. J., III, iii, 43.

"hebenon" by a transposition of letters is for "henebon," by which Shakespeare, meant henbane, a poisonous weed. But, as the quartos have "hebona," there is a suggestion of the "heben" of Spenser, representing the yew (Ger. eiben), which "was accounted, from ancient times, the most deadly of poisons." In Marlowe's Jew of Malta (1590) "the juice of hebon" is mentioned along with "all the poisons of the Stygian pool." Spenser has "trees of bitter Gall and Heben sad: Dead sleeping Poppy and black Hellebore" (Faerie Queene, II, vii, 461), and his "heben" could hardly represent the "henbane" (a weed), as he speaks in another passage of a "speare of heben wood" (Faerie Queene, I, vii, 326), also, "a curious coffer made of heben wood" (Ruines of Time, 139).

Cf. also Scott, Bridal of Triermain, III, 13:

"The tough shaft of heben wood."

Further, the allusion to "leperous distilment" points to a skin disease, or tetter, as one of the effects commonly attributed to the poisonous qualities of "the double fatal yew."

> "Thy uncle stole, With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial, And in the porches of my ears did pour The leperous distilment."

Ham., I, v, 62.

"The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power

Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil, They hither march amain.

T. A., IV, iv, 64. HIGH-SIGHTED. With lofty looks: Aldis Wright observes with respect to the following passage—" There seems to be an implied comparison of tyranny to an eagle or bird of prey, whose keen eye discovers its victim from the highest pitch of its flight. We have the same figure in the first scene of the play (l. 73, etc.), and although the primary meaning of 'high-sighted' may be 'proud, supercilious,' there is a secondary meaning in keeping with the comparison of tyranny to a bird of prey. That this comparison is intended appears to me to be confirmed by the occurrence of the word which is technically used of hawks flying in search of game."

"So let high-sighted tyranny range on Till each man drop by lottery."

J. C., II, i, 118. HIGH-STOMACHED. High-tempered, proud, haughty. "High-stomach'd are they both and full of Rich, II-I, 1, 18.

" A man in hue, all hues in his controlling, Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth."

Sonnet XX, 8.

HUGGER-MUGGER. Etymology doubtful; the second element is probably a reduplication from the first, like mixtiemaxtie, hocus-pocus, hurly-burly, etc.: in Halliwell's Provincial Dictionary "huggering" appears and "lying in ambush." The phrase in hugger-mugger frequently occurs in the writings of pre-Shakespearean authors.

hugger-mugger = clandestinely, privately, in a sneaking way.

"We have done but greenly In hugger-mugger to inter him. Ham., IV, v, 67.

Vb. To float helplessly to and fro like a dismasted ship, to lie to. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, XI, 840:

"He look'd, and saw the ark hull on the flood."

look d, and saw the ark nutt on the nood." Mar. "Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.
Viola. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a little longer."

HUMOUR OF FORTY FANCIES, The. Probably the title of a collection of ballads, as Steevens suggests, the booklet being stuck in the hat instead of a plume.

T. of S., III, ii, 63.

HUNDRED LACKING ONE. v. note.

"The Lent shall be as long again as it is, and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred lacking one."

2 Hen. VI-IV, iii, 7.

Note.—The allusion is thus explained by Malone—"In the reign of Elizabeth, butchers were forbidden to sell flesh-meat during Lent: but by special licence they might kill a certain number of beasts each week, nominally for the sake of invalids, who could not do without animal food." It has been suggested that "a week" should be added, but such abbreviated expressions were frequent and recognized.

Cf. "His death will be a march of twelve score" (yards); I Hen. IV-II, iv, 507: "at twelve score" (yards); 2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 41: "at fourteen and fourteen and a half" (score yards); 2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 42: "short point-blank twelve score" (yards): Steevens further quotes Westward Hee (1606): further quotes Westward Hoe (1606):

"I'll get me twelve-score (yards) off, and give aim."

HUNGER. Vb. To crave, to desire eagerly.

(3) The game captured or killed in the chase.

> "Boys, we'll go dress our hunt." Cym., III, vi, 90.

HUNT COUNTER. Vb. To be on the wrong scent, to be at fault: Turbervile, in his Booke of Hunting, says: "When a hound hunteth backwards the same way that the chase is come, then we say he hunteth counter." Cf. Ben Jonson, Tale of a Tub, II, 6: "I hunt-counter thus and make them double."

> "You hunt counter; hence! avaunt!" 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 84
> For "to run counter" v. C. E., IV, ii, 39; > and "to be counter" v. Ham., IV, v, 110.

HUNT'S UP. A tune played on the horn under the windows of sportsmen very early in the morning to awaken them. Hence the term was applied to any noise of an awakening or alarming nature. We have the full form of the expression "The hunt is up" in T. A., II, ii, I: and a corruption hunsup is quoted in Halliwell's Dictionary, meaning clamour, a turbulent outcry. "A hunt is up" Florio makes equivalent to "musike plaid under one's window in a morning"; and Cotgrave defines resveil as "a Hunts-up, or morning song, for a new-married wife, the day after the marriage." The term was a common one. Cf. Drayton, Eclogue: "Time plays the hunts-up to thy sleepy head"; again, Drayton, Polyolbion: "Hunts-up to the morn the feather'd sylvans sing." Sempill, Ballads, The Epitaph of Habbie

Simpson: "Now who shall play The Day it Dawis, or Hunts up, when the cock he crows?"

"Since arm from arm that voice doth thus affray,

Hunting thee hence with hunt's up to the day."

R. and J., III, v, 34.

HURLY. F. hurler, L. ululo=to howl; ulula = an owl (an imitative word). Tumult, bustle, commotion.

"Methinks I see this hurly all on foot." K. J., III, iv, 169; v. also 2 Hen. IV-III, i, 25; T. of S., IV, i, 186.

HURLY-BURLY. The second part of the word is reduplicated from the first, like hocus-pocus, hotch-potch, huggermugger, argie-bargie (Sc.), mixtie-maxtie (Sc.), etc.

I., subs. Turmoil, tumult.

"When the hurly-burly's done."

Mac., I, i, 3.

II., adj. Tumultuous, confused. "Which gape and rub the elbow at the news Of hurly-burly innovation." I Hen. IV-V, i, 78.

HURRICANO. Anything which sweeps along violently like a hurricane, a waterspout: cf. Drayton, Mooncalf: "And down the show'r impetuously doth fall,

As that which men the hurricano call."

S that which men the hurricano call."

"You cataracts, and hurricano, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples."

K. L., III, ii, 2; v. also T. and C., V, ii, 172.

HURTLE. Frequent, from hurt, hurl is a contraction of hurtle: F. heurter=to strike, push, clash together.

To resound, to make a rattling or crashing noise like the clash of arms: Spenser uses the word in the sense of to dash, to hurl, to brandish. Cf. Gray, Fatal Sisters:

"Iron sleet of arrowy shower Hurtles in the darkened air."

"The noise of battle hurtled in the air." J. C., II, ii, 22.

HURTLING. Noise of conflict. "In which hurtling

From miserable slumber I awaked." A. Y. L., IV, iii, 132.

HUSBAND. I., subs. (1) One who keeps house.
"You will turn good husband now, Pompey;

M. M., III, ii, 63.

Note.—The allusion is to the usually accepted etymology of the word.

(2) A man joined to a woman in marriage.

"Let husbands know Their wives have sense like them." Oth., IV, iii, 90.

(3) A frugal manager, an economist. "Some Cf. Evelyn, Acetaria: who are husbands of their oil, pour at first the oil alone."

"I am undone! While I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the University."

T. of S., V, i, 57; v. also Hen. VIII-III, ii, 142.

(4) Husbandman: cf. Spenser, Faerie

Queene, IV, iii, 258:

"Like as a withered tree, through husbands toyle, Is often seene full freshly to have florisht, And fruitfull apples to have borne awhile, As fresh as when it first was planted in the soyle."

Also, Mother Hubberd's Tale, 266: "For husbands' life is labourous and hard."

"This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband." 2 Hen. IV-V, iii, 12.

II., vb. (1) To cultivate. "Bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled with excellent endeavour." 2 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 109.

(2) To economize, to manage frugally.
"For my means, I'll husband them so well,
They shall go far."

Ham., IV, v, 117.

(3) To provide with a husband. "Being so fathered and so husbanded." J. C., II, i, 297.

(4) To carry into effect. "Well, husband your device."

M. W. W., IV, vi, 52; v. also T. of S., Ind., i, 68.

HUSBANDRY. (1) Economic management, stewardship, care for one's business. Cf. Chaucer, Nonne Preestes Tale. 8.

A. Y. L., I, i, 32.

(2) A frame, a shell, a skeleton. "Leaving them but the shale and husks of men."

Hen. V-IV, ii, 19.

In Shakespeare's time "I" was I. I. commonly spoken and written for aye. It afforded much scope and great temptation for punning. Throughout a whole sonnet Drayton indulges in this wordplay:

"Nothing but No and I, and I and No, How falls it out so strangely you reply? I tell you, fair, I'll not be answer'd so With this affirming No, denying I. I say, I love: you slightly answer, I:

I say, you love: you peule me out a No: I say, I die; you echo me with I; Save me, I cry; you sigh me out a No. Must woe and I have nought but No and I? No I am I, if I no more can have:

Answer no more, with silence make reply,
And let me take myself what I do crave:
Let No and I, with I and you be so:
Then answer No and I, and I and no."
"Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but

And that bare vowel 'I' shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice; I am not I, if there be such an I;

Or these eyes shut that make thee answer 'I.' If he be slain, say ' I'; or if not, No."

R. and J., III, ii, 36; v. also T. G. V.,

I, i, 109. II.—When emphasis was intended the " I " was frequently repeated, like one of the uses of the disjunctive moi. When French thus employed its meaning was approximately "for my part." Cf. Ben Jonson, Bartholomew Fair (Induction), "I am an ass, I." "I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I."

2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 92; v. also R. and J.,
III, i, 52.

ICELAND DOG. A term applied to Nym by Pistol to convey the impression that he was a quarrelsome, under-bred individual. Cf. Harrison, Description of England, p. 231: "Besides these also we have sholts or curs dailie brought out of Iceland, and much made of among us bicause of their sawcinesse and quarrelling." Massinger, The Picture, V, I, and Beaumont and Fletcher, The Queen of Corinth, IV, I, speak of the " Iceland cur."

"Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland." Hen. V-II, i, 39.

IDEA. Image.

"Withal I did infer your lineaments, Being the right idea of your father."

M. A., IV, i, 243.

IN WILL AND ERROR. "First wilfully, afterwards by mistake" (Clarke).

"Now, to our perjury to add more terror, We are again forsworn,—in will, and error."
L. L. L., V, ii, 473.

IRIS. Gr. *Iριs = a rainbow.

(1) A messenger (as Iris was of Juno).

"Wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe, I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out."

2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 407.

(2) An intermixture of colouring that surrounds the eye when it is wet with tears (resembling a rainbow).

"What's the matter,
That this distemper'd messenger of wet,
The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?"

A. W., I, iii, 142.

(3) A flowering plant.

"Make him fall
His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends."
T. and C., I, iii, 380.

IRK. Sw. yrka=to urge, same root as work and urge.

To vex, to annoy, to weary. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, IV, vii, 127: "But what I was it irkes me to reherse."

"To see this sight, it inks my very soul."

3 Hen. VI-II, ii, 6; v. also I Hen. VI-I, iv, 105; A. Y. L., II, i, 22.

"He's irremovable,
Resolv'd for flight." W. T., IV, iii, 496.

IS BECOME. Has bechanced, has come by fate.

"I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become." 3 Hen. VI-II, i, 10; v. also 3 Hen. VI-IV, iv. 25.

ISSUE. (1) Progeny, offspring, a child or children.

"What is this
That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby-brow the round
And top of sovereignty?"

Mac., IV, i, 87.

(2) Result, consequence.

"If ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest."

W. T., I, ii, 249.

(3) Action, deed, that which proceeds from one.

"How the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men."

J. C., III, i, 295.

(4) Conclusion.

"I am to pray you not to strain my speech To grosser issues nor to larger reach Than to suspicion." Oth., III, iii, 219. ITERANCE. Iteration, repetition.

"What means this iterance, woman?" Oth., V, ii, 149.

ITERATION. (1) Skill in quotation.

"O, thou hast damnable iteration and art indeed able to corrupt a saint. I Hen. IV-I, ii, 83.

(2) A readiness with similes.

"When their rhymes, Full of protest, of oath, and big compare, Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,— As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, As sun to day, as turtle to her mate."

T. and C., III, ii, 169.

IVY-TOD. A thick bush or tuft of ivy. Cf. Spenser, Shepherd's Calendar, March

"At length within an Yvie todde, (There shrouded was the little god)
I heard a busie bustling."

Cf. also Drayton:

"And, like an owle, by night to goe abroad, Roosted all day within an ivie tod."

Also Beaumont and Fletcher, Rule a Wife, IV, 3:

"Michael van Owle, how dost thou? In what dark barn, or tod of aged ivy, Hast thou lyen hid?"

"His head's yellow, Hard-hair'd, and curl'd, thick twin'd, like ivy-tods, Not to undo with thunder."

- JACK. F. Jacques, L. Jacobus: In the principal modern languages John, or its equivalent, is a common name of contempt or slight. Hence, in English we have Jack-a-napes, Jack-pudding, Jack-ass. A Jack o' the clock (q.v.) was a figure which in old public clocks struck the hours upon the bell : hence, the word Jack came to be applied to any piece of mechanism, and to various implements which supplied the place of a boy or attendant, as roasting-jack, boot-jack, rail-jack, jack-frame, jackscrew, etc.
 - (1) A term of contempt: a clown, a saucy fellow, an impudent rascal: cf.

 Marlowe Fdward II-I, iv. 411: "I Marlowe, Edward II-I, iv, 411: have not seen a dapper Jack so brisk,"

"Your fairy . . . has done little better than played the Jack with us."

played the Jack With Us. Temp., IV, i, 198; v. also Cor., V, ii, 57; A. and C., III, xiii, 93; M. V., III, iv, 77; M. A., V, i, 91; T. of S., II, i, 157; 282; R. and J., II, iv, 121; 1 Hen. IV-II, iv, 10; III, iii, 83; V, iv, 143; Rich. III-I, iii, 53.

(2) A large jug formerly of waxed leather, now of metal: a pitcher, a drinking vessel. Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, Bloody Brother, II, 2: "Body of me, I'm dry still: give me the jack, boy."

"Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair without, the carpets laid and everything in order."

T. of S., IV, i, 42.

(3) The small bowl aimed at in the game of bowls.

Fig. "Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack, upon an upcast to be hit away."

Cym., II, i, 2.

(4) The hammer or quill-carrier of the virginal, etc., hence, erroneously, for keys in the quotation from the Sonnets.

Stevens quotes Ram Alley (1611): "Where be these rascals that skip up and down

Like virginal jacks?"
"I envy those jacks that nimble leap To kiss the tender inward of thy hand."

Sonnet CXXVIII, 5.

(5) A figure in a clock for striking the hours (v. Jack o' the clock).

"Like a jack, thou keep'st the stroke Betwixt thy begging and my meditation."

Rich. III-IV, ii, 113.

JACK-A-LENT. A stuffed puppet, dressed in rags, which was thrown at in Lent in Shrovetide games. Cf. Ben Jonson, Tale of a Tub, IV, 2:

"Travell'd to Hamstead Heath on an Ash Wednesday

When thou didst stand six weeks the Jack of Lent, For boys to hurl three throws a penny at thee, To make thee a purse."

(I) A butt, an object of satire.

See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-Lent, when 'tis upon ill employment."

M. W. W., V, v, 122.

(2) A simple fellow.

"You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?" M. W. W., III, iii, 22.

JACK-A-NAPES (Jack-a-nape Jack-anape = Jack-on-ape).

abs. (I) A monkey, an ape.
"I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-a-napes."

Hen. V-V, ii, 138. I., subs.

- (2) A coxcomb, a fop, an upstart. "That jack-a-napes with scarfs; why is he melancholy?"

 A. W., III, v, 97.

II., adj. Upstart. "I will teach a scurvy jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make." M. W. W., I, iv, 97.

W. T., I, ii, 43.

JACK O' THE CLOCK. v. Jack. automaton, outside the clocks of former days, for striking the hours. Such figures are still found in imitations of the antique, and they are actually to be seen on the "Clock Tower" in Berne, and on the clock of Strasburg Cathedral.

" My time Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy, While I stand fooling here his Jack o' the clock." Rich. II-V, v, 60.

II., vb. (1) To overbear, to overmaster, to overdrive. Cf. Bacon, Essay XXXII: "It is a dull thing to tire, and, as we now say, to jade anything too far." "If we live thus tamely, To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, Farewell nobility." Hen. VIII-III, ii, 280.

(2) To drive like a worthless nag, to drive dispirited.

> "How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks,

> The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out o' the field." A. and C., III, i, 34.

(3) To spurn, to kick, to treat like a jade, to subject to mean offices. "The honourable blood of Lancaster Must not be shed by such a jaded groom." 2 Hen. VI-VI, i, 52.

JADERY. The tricks of a jade, the properties of a vicious horse.

> "Seeks all foul means Of boisterous and rough jadery, to disseat His lord, that kept it bravely." T. N. K., V, iv, 72.

Jean (probably a corruption of Genoa) was a cheap cotton cloth, hence, as an adjective, weak, worthless.

"You most coarse frize capacities, ye jane judgments,

Have I said 'thus let be,' and 'there let be,'
And 'then let be,' and no man understand
me?"

T. N. K., III, v, 8.

(3) A quarrel, a conflict.

"Cease, cease these jars, and rest your minds in peace." I Hen. VI-I, i, 44.

JAUNCE. O.F. jancer = to work a horse violently: it may be connected with jaunt. Cf. Cotgrave: " Jancer un cheval = to stirre a horse in the stable till hee sweat withall; or to jaunt: (an old word).''

I., vb. To ride hard, to drive hard, to knock about.

"And yet I bear a burden like an ass, Spur-galled and tried, by jauncing Boling-broke." Rich. II-V, v, 94.

II., subs. A jaunt, a hunt, a tiring journey, a wild ramble.

"Fie, how my bones ache! what a jaunce
I have had."

R. and J., II, v, 26.

Vb. JAW. To chaw, to champ, to chew, to devour. "I reck not if the wolves would jaw me, so He had this file." T. N. K., III, ii, 7.

Fig. A loose woman, a harlot

(distinguished from turtles, a chaste and faithful lover).

"Go to, then;—we'll use this unwholesome humility, this gross watery pumpion; we'll teach him to know turtles from jays."

M. W. W., III, iii, 34; v. also Cym., III, iv, 51.

JEALOUS. (1) Suspicious. Galt, Ringan Gilhaize, IV: "The French guards . . . were instructed to be jealous of all untimeous travellers."

(6) A trifling matter. A triffing matter.

"'Tis no jest
That I do hate thee and love Helena."

M. N. D., III, ii, 280.

II., vb. To make a joke. "He must observe their mood on whom he jests."

T. N., III, i, 53.

(2) To provoke mirth, to entertain. "I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner." C. E., I, ii, 62. (3) To laugh.

"Tush, tush, man; never fleer and jest at me; I speak not like a dotard nor a fool."

M. A., V, i, 58.

(4) To act or speak in sport, not to be in earnest.

"'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest.'" V. and A., 997.

(5) To take part in a revel, mask, or interlude. Note.—The noun jest was also used in the sense of a masque, or play. Cf. Spanish Tragedy, quoted by Nares:

"He promis'd us, in honour of our guest,
To grace our banquet with some pompous jest."

"As gentle and as jocund as to jest Go I to fight."

Rich. II-I, iii, 95.

Cym., V, iv, 142; v. also Cym., V, v, 439.

(2) To league together, to band together. "Soon that war had end, and the time's

Made friends of them, jointing their forces against Caesar."

A. and C., I, ii, 86.

JOINTRESS = Jointuress. A woman possessing a jointure (q.v.), a dowager, a joint sovereign. Note.—A jointure is an estate in lands or tenements settled upon a woman in consideration of marriage, and this she is to enjoy after her husband's decease.

"Our sometime sister, now our queen, "Our sometime sister, non the state."
Th' imperial jointress of this warlike state."

Ham., I, ii, 9.

JOINT-RING. A ring jointed so as to consist of two equal parts, a common lover's token in the olden time. For construction, v. Dryden, Sebastian:

"A curious artist wrought them With joints so close as not to be perceiv'd, Yet are they both each other's counterpart Her part had Juan inscrib'd, and his had Zayda (You know these names are theirs), and in the midst

A heart divided in two halves was plac'd. Now, if the rivets of those rings enclos'd But if they join, you must for ever part."

"Marry. I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition." Oth., IV, iii, 70.

JOINT-SERVANT. Colleague.

"(I) made him joint-servant with me." Cor., V, vi, 31.

KITE OF CRESSID'S KIND. What is alluded to by this expression is the punishment of Cressida, a mythical

Cor., V, iii, 75.

character, whose name does not occur in classical literature. In Henryson's Testament of Cresseid (a sequel to Chaucer's Troilus and Creseide), 1475, she is represented as forsaken by her lover Diomede for her unfaithfulness to Troilus. She was afflicted with leprosy and sent to "the spittel hous." Steevens shows that the phrase was a common one about Shakespeare's time, quoting from Gascoign's Dan Bartholomew of Bath (1587): "Nor seldom seene in kites of Cressid's kind," and from Greene, Card of Fancy (1601): "What courtesy is to be found in such kites of Cressid's kind?"

"And from the powdering tub of infamy Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind, Doll Tearsheet she by name."

Hen. V-II, i, 69.

Note.—From the ignoble habits of the bird in feeding on offal, etc., and in preying upon sickly and wounded victims, the word was used as a term of reproach, v. K. L., I, iv, 249: "Detested kite! thou liest"; also, A. C., III, xiii, 89: "Ah, you kite."

KNACK. (1) A trinket, a knick-knack.

v, 8; Cym., II, ii, 23; M. A., III, iv, 18.

LACED MUTTON. A cant expression for a courtesan; the allusion is not easy to understand, unless, as Nares suggests, it is a jocular perversion of lost sheep. But mutton is also used in the sense of a loose woman by Shakespeare and his contemporaries, v. M. M., III, ii, 161. Hence, laced mutton might simply mean a prostitute finely dressed. Cf. Ben Jonson, Masque of Neptune's Triumph:

Cook. "O whom for mutton, or kid?

Child. A fine lac'd mutton
Or two, and either has her frisking husband."

"1, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her a lac'd mutton; and she, a lac'd mutton,

(2) Disabled, or crippled in any way. "Youth is nimble, age is lame." P. P., VI, 6.

(3) Unfit, incapable.

"As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth."

Sonnet XXXVII, 3.

LAMENTING DOINGS. Lamentations.

"How would he hang his slender gilded wings,

And buzz lamenting doings in the air!"
T. A., III, ii, 62.

LAMPASS (or Lampers). F. lampas = the lampasse or swelling in an horse's mouth (Cotgrave). A disease in horses consisting of excrescent flesh in the lower bars of the mouth above the teeth.

"Our impress'd lances."
K. L., V, iii, 50; v. also L. L. L., V, ii, 638.

LAND-DAMN. This word has given occasion for much controversy. It is probably a misprint or a corruption of landan, an English provincial word used in Yorkshire and Gloucestershire and meaning to "abuse with rancour, to rate." In support of this explanation, Ingleby quotes from Notes and Queries: "Forty years ago an old custom was still in use in this district (Buxton). When any slanderer was detected, or any parties discovered in adultery, it was usual to lan-dan them. This was done by the rustics traversing from house to house along the "countryside" blowing trumpets and beating drums or pans and kettles. When an audience was assembled the delinquents' names were proclaimed, and they were thus land-damned." Other guesses more or less satisfactory have been made. Heath conjectured "half-damn," Walker "live-damn," Johnson suggests that it might mean "to rid the country of him, condemn him to quit the land"; Malone, that "land-dam"=kill, bury in earth. Grant White supports "to set breast deep in the earth and thus cause to die of hunger" and quotes T. A., V, iii, 179: "Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him." The least satisfactory conjecture is that made by Farmer "laudanum him" in the sense of poison him.

"Would I knew the villain, I would land-damn him."

W. T., II, i, 139.

LAND-RAKER. A vagabond.

"I am joined with no foot land-rakers." I Hen. IV-II, i, 66.

LANE. (1) A line by the roadside.

"The more and less came in with cap and knee

Met him in boroughs, cities, villages, Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes." 1 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 70.

(2) A way, a passage.

T. and C., I, iii, 346.

(ii) Without restriction. "We shall meet and break our minds at large." I Hen. VI-I, iii, 81.

(iii) In detail, dwelling on particulars. "Ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love affairs."

T. G. V., III, i, 253.

(iv) Expressed fully or at length. "A gentleman of mine I have despatch'd With letters of your love to her at large."

Rich. II-III, i, 41.

LARGELY. (1) Copiously, abundantly. "(I have) not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many."

M. W. W., II, ii, 178.

(2) At length, in full, in detail. "When after that the holy rites are ended, I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death.' M. A., V, iv, 69.

LARUM. Contraction for alarum.

(I) Alarm.

"Dwelling in a continual larum of jealousy."

M. W. W., III, v, 73.

(2) Din, noise.

"Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren, And with loud larums welcome them to Rome." T. A., I, i, 147. T. A., I, i, 147.

LARUM-BELL. A clock contrived to strike loudly at a particular hour, and represented, therefore, as ever on the watch.

"O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leavest the kingly couch A watch-case or a common larum-bell?"

2 Hen. IV-III, i, 17. Note.-Probably by metonymy the figure represents the person on the couch. It is, however, difficult to conceive how a bed can be compared to a bell.

LASS-LORN. Forsaken by one's mistress. "Thy broom groves,
Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
Being lass-lorn." Temp., IV, i, 68.

LAST. Adv. (I) On the last occasion. "Since I saw you last."

"Where is the life that late I led?" T. of S., IV, i, 123.

LATED. (1) Obscured, living in misfortune.

"I am so lated in the world, that I Have lost my way for ever.

A. and C., III, xi, 3. (2) Belated, overtaken by darkness, benighted. "Now spurs the lated traveller apace To gain the timely inn." Mac., III Mac., III, iii, 6.

A soft alloy of copper and LATTEN. calamine (unsuitable for sword-blades): tin-plate.

"I combat challenge of this latten bilbo."
M. W. W., I, i, 145.
Note.—"Latten bilbo" is a bit of sarcasm directed against Slender's cowardice, implying that he had neither courage nor strength.

LATTER. (I) Last.

"I do not think a braver gentleman, More active-valiant or more valiant-young, More daring or more bold, is now alive To grace this latter age with noble deeds."

I Hen. IV-V, i, 92; v. also Hen. V-IV, i, 131; I Hen. VI-II, v, 38; A. and C.,
IV, vi, 39.

(2) Ended.

" Farewell, thou latter spring?" I Hen. IV-I, ii, 145. Note.-The reference is to the gaiety of Falstaff in spite of his age.

LATTER-BORN. Youngest, last born.

Mac., I, ii, 57; v. also 2 Hen. IV-IV, iv, 62; I Hen. VI-II, v, 47.

(2) Profuse.

"Let her have needful, but not lavish means." M. M., II, ii, 24.

LAVOLT. It. la volta = the turn; L. volvere.

An Italian dance, the precursor of the waltz. The man turned the woman round several times, and then assisted her in making a high spring. " I cannot sing, Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk, Nor play at subtle games."

T. and C., IV, iv, 90. A variant of lavolt. LAVOLTA.

"They bid us to the English dancing schools, And teach lavoltas high, and swift corantos.' Hen. V-III, v, 33.

LAW-DAY. The day on which courts sit, a leet or sheriff's court (only once found in Shakespeare).

"Her fallow leas The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory Do root upon."

Hen. V-V, ii, 44; v. also T. of A., IV,

iii, 192.

LEAD APES IN HELL-" The employment jocularly assigned to old maids in the next world. As ape occasionally meant a fool the expression probably signified that those coquettes who made fools of men, and led them about without real intentions of marriage, would have them still to lead against their wills hereafter" (Nares). According to an old superstition this was supposed to be the doom of old maids or of women who refused to bear children. Women who decline to lead children by the hand will, after death, be condemned to lead apes. Similarly, old bachelors were supposed to be doomed to be bearherds. Halliwell quotes Florio's definition of Mammola as "An old maide or sillie virgin that will lead apes in hell": and Churchyardes Chippes (1578):

"Lest virgins shoulde som surfet take When they lead apes in hell.'

Cf. also The London Prodigal: "Women dying maids lead apes in hell."

"I must dance barefoot on her wedding day, And for your love to her lead apes in hell."

M. A., I, i, 258.

LIKE, 2. To be in a certain bodily condition. Cf. liking, L. L. L., V, ii, 269; M. W. W., II, i, 15:

"You like well and bear your years very well." 2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 92.

LIKE AS. Just as if.

"And, like as there were husbandry in war Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, And to the field goes he."

T. and C., I, ii, 7; v. also Ham., I, ii, 217.

LIKELIHOOD. (1) Similitude.

"As, by a lower but loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress,
As in good time he may, from lecland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit,
To welcome him."

Hen. V-V, Prol., 29.

(2) Appearance, sign, indication.

"What if his heart perceive you in his face By any likelihood he showed to-day?" Rick. III-III, iv, 59; v. also A. W., I, iii, 128.

I Hen. IV-III, iii, 6; v. also M. W. W., II, i, 50.

LILY-BEDS. Delicate flower-beds in Elysium.

"Give me swift transportance to those fields Where I may wallow in the lily-beds Propos'd for the deserver."

T. and C., III, ii, 12.

ly, dastardly. Note.—The liver was looked upon as the seat of courage, and a white, bloodless liver indicated want of spirit. Cf. 2 Hen. IV—IV, iii, 113: "The second property of your excellent sherris is the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice."

"Go prick thy face, and over-red thy fear, Thou ltly-liver'd boy."

Mac., V, iii, 15; v. also K. L., II, ii, 15.

LIMB. (1) One of the extremities of the human body, especially the leg.

"Brevity is the soul of wit,

And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes."

Ham., II, ii, 91.

LIMBEC (Limbeck). A contraction of alembic. Ar. al = the, ambik = a still, Gr. $\delta u\beta \iota \xi = a$ cup or cap of a still through which the vapours rise before condensation.

An alembic, a still. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, III, 605: "Drained through a limbec."

"Memory the warder of the brain Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason A limbeck only."

Mac., I, vii, 67.

LIMBER. Adj. Flexible, pliant, easygoing, weak. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, VII, 476:

"Those waved their limber fans For wings."

"You put me off with limber vows."

W. T., I, ii, 47.

LIMB-MEAL. "Historically the adverbs in -meal are datives though they have lost their flexion. In Saxon they ended in -maelum" (Earle, Philology of the English Tongue).

Limb from limb.

"O, that I had her here, to tear her limbmeal." Cym., II, iv, 147.

LIMBO. Properly the ablative of the Latin Limbus=an edge or border. According to scholastic theology Limbus was the abode of souls to whom the merits of Jesus could not be applied, through no fault of their own. Besides hell (infernus damnatorum) the old schoolmen recognized (1) a Limbus Infantium, where the souls of unbaptized infants remained; (2) a Limbus Patrum, the abode of those who died before the coming of Christ. The expression "Abraham's bosom" (Luke xvi, 23) is supposed to designate this place; and some theologians see an allusion to it in the preaching "unto the spirits in prison" (I Peter iii, 19). In Limbo Patrum is jocularly used for in prison or in confinement (Hen. VIII-V, iv, 52); (3) Purgatory, Limbus fatuorum, a fool's Paradise, was afterwards added by popular opinion. To this last Milton refers in Paradise Lost, III, 495:

"A limbo large and broad, since call'd The paradise of fools."

(1) Any place of misery, hell.

"O, what a sympathy of woe is this, As far from help as Limbo is from bliss!"

T. A., III, i, 149; v. also C. E., IV, ii, 32;
A. W., V, iii, 257.

(2) "Limbo Patrum" = a prison, a place of confinement.

Hen. VIII-V, iv, 52.

LIME. I., subs. (1) Bird-lime.

"Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net or lime." Mac., IV, ii, 34.

(2) Anything that deludes, beguiles, entraps.

"You must lay lime to tangle her desires."
T. G. V., III, ii, 68.

- (3) According to Greene lime was used to give strength to liquor or "to make it mightie." This was a common tapster's trick in Shakespeare's time. Rolfe illustrates from Sir Hugh Plat's Jewel House of Art and Nature (1653): "We are grown so nice in tast, that almost no wines unless they be more pleasant than they can be of the grape will content us, nay no colour unless it be perfect fine and bright will satisfie our wanton eyes, whereupon as I have been credibly informed by some that have seen the practice in Spain, they are forced even there to interlace now and then a lay of Lime with the Sack grape in the expression, thereby to bring their Sacks to be of a more white colour into England than is natural unto them. or than the Spaniards themselves will brook or indure, who will drink no other Sacks than such as be of an amber colour."
 - "You rogue, here's lime in this sack too."

 I Hen. IV-II, iv, 114.
- II., vb. (1) To smear with bird-lime.
 "Myself have lim'd a bush for her."
 2 Hen. Vl-I, iii, 91.

" Take my king's defiance from my mouth, The farthest limit of my embassy." K. J., I, i, 22.

(7) Full extent.

"The limit of your lives is out."

Rich. III-III, iii, 8.

(8) "Sometimes used for limb, the limbs being the extremities or limits of the body" (Nares). Halliwell supports this interpretation, and Steevens quotes Titana and Theseus: "Thought it very strange that nature should endow so fair a face with so hard a heart, such comely limits with such perverse conditions." In this quotation by Steevens, however, the word might very well simply mean exterior, contour, outline or defining lines.

" Hurried Here to this place, i' the open air, before I have got strength of limit."

W. T., III, ii, 104.
Note.—Mason suggests that "strength of limit" means "the limited degree of strength which it is customary for women to acquire before they are suffered to go abroad after child-bearing."

II., vb. To assign, to appoint.

"Limit each leader to his several charge."
Rich. III-V, iii, 25.

To spend her living on eternal love."

L. C., 238. (2) Means of sustenance, livelihood.

"It were pity you should get your living by reckoning." L. L. L., V, ii, 509.

(3) Power to continue in life.

"If her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her."

M. A., II, i, 237.

(4) Property, estate, possessions.

"If I gave them all my living, I'ld keep my coxcombs myself."

K. L., I, iv, 101; v. also M. V., III, ii, 158; W. T., IV, iii, 104; R. and J., IV, v, 36.

LIZARD. "It was a current opinion in the time of Shakespeare, and is not yet quite eradicated, that lizards, the most harmless of reptiles, were venomous. The English lizard or eft, and the water-lizard or newt, in many places lie under the same slander, and particularly the latter. An abhorrence of their singular form probably gave rise to this notion, as happened also in the case of the toad. Hence the lizard's leg was thought a fit ingredient in the witches' cauldron" (Nares).

"Their sweetest prospects murdering basilisks!
Their softest touch, as smart as lizards' stings!"

2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 325; v. also 3 Hen. VI-II, ii, 138.

LOADEN. Laden.

"There came
A post from Wales loaden with heavy news,"
I Hen. IV-I, i, 37; v. also I Hen. VI-II, i, 80; Cor., V, iii, 164; T. of A., III,

"You logger-headed and unpolished grooms."
T. of S., IV, i, 108.

LONDON-STONE. An ancient London landmark, still carefully preserved in the masonry of a wall in St. Swithin's Church. Camden supposes it to have been a Roman milliarium, the centre from which all the great Roman roads radiated from London. In this respect it corresponded to the Golden Milestone in the Forum at Rome. It came to be looked upon as a kind of Palladium in the Metropolis, and Cade evidently so regards it in the following quotation (Rolfe).

"Here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign."

2 Hen. VI-IV, i, 2.

LOWMEN. v. Highmen.

LOWN. v. Loon.

LOZEL (Losel, Lossel). A.S. losian = to perish, to be lost.

An idle worthless fellow, a runagate. Reed cites Verstegan's Restitution (1605): "A losel is one that hath lost, neglected, or cast off his owne good and welfare, and so is become lewde and carelesse of credit and honesty." Cf. Warner, Albion's England, XXXIX:

"Provided common beggars, nor disordered lossels, who Men know provided for, or can, but labour none will do."

Cf. also Spenser, Faerie Queene, II, iii, 28:

"The whyles a losell wandring by the way, One that to bountie never cast his mind."

"And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her tongue."

A full-grown pike, a fish used as an armorial bearing.

"They may give the dozen white luces in their coat." M. W. W., I, 1, 14. Note.—Three luces hauriant, argent, figured in the coat of arms of the Lucys of Charlecot, associated with the tradition of the poet's youthful poaching exploits. The equivoque, which Evans makes between luce and louse, signifying love, "because," as Boswell tells us, "it does not desert man in his distress, but rather sticks more close to him in his adversity," occurs in a lampoon on Lucy. This satire, it is said, was the occasion of the removal of the poet from Warwickshire to London.

MALICIOUSLY. (1) Malignantly.

" Nay but speak not maliciously." Cor., I, i, 35.

(2) With the strength of hate and sparing no one. "I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,

And fight maliciously.' A. and C., III, xiii, 179. MALIGNANCY. Unfavourableness, malevolent aspect, unpropitiousness.

"The malignancy of my fate might perhaps distemper yours." T. N., II, i, 4.

MALIGNANT. (1) Full of malice.

"A malignant and a turbaned Turk." Oth., V, ii, 353.

(2) Unfavourable, unpropitious, exercising a pernicious influence.

"O, malignant and ill-boding stars." 1 Hen. VI-IV, v, 6.

MALKIN. "That malkin is a diminutive of Matilda, and not of May, as is commonly supposed, appears from the Promptorium Parvulorum which gives: 'Malkyne, or Mawt, propyr name Matildis''' (Wright). The word, as (Wright). Hanmer says, came to signify a kind of mop made of clouts for the purpose of sweeping ovens; thence, a frightful figure of clouts dressed up; thence, a dirty wench.

(i) A slattern, a scullion, a kitchen wench.

"The kitchen malkin pins Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck." Cor., II, i, 196.

(2) A scarecrow.

"Ours was blurted at and held a malkin Not worth the time of day. Per., IV, iii, 34.

MALMSEY-NOSE. Red-nosed: the redness being due to the quantity of Malmsey wine drunk.

"Yonder he comes; and that arrant malm-sey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him." 2 Hen. IV-II, i, 35.

Note.—Malmsey, from Malvasia, a tomous on the east coast of Lacedaemonia, in the Morea, is a strong, fine-flavoured, sweet, white wine, and is mentioned in L. L. L., V, ii, 233, and Rich. III-I, iv, 161, 277.

I., A MALTHORSE. subs. brewer's horse, a dray-horse: hence, used as a term of reproach for a dull, stupid fellow. Cf. Ben Jonson, Every Man in His Humour, I, 5: "He has no more judgment than a malt-horse."

"Mome, malt-horse, capon, coxcomb, idiot, patch! Either get thee from the door, or sit down at the hatch."

C. E., III, i, 32.

II., adj. Menial, loutish.

"You peasant swain! you whoreson malthorse drudge!

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park?"

T. of S., IV, i, 112.

MALTWORM. One who indulges malt liquor, a tippler, a drunkard.

"Mad mustachio, purple-hued maltworms." I Hen. IV-II, i, 65; v. also 2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 287.

MAMMER. Probably an imitative word, from mam, mam=the first prattlings of infants.

To hesitate, to stand as one muttering and in suspense (only once used by Shakespeare). Steevens quotes comedy of Acolastus (1540): "I stand in doubt, or in a mamorynge between hope and fear," and Malone adds from Lyly, Euphues: "Neither stand in a mamering, whether it be best to depart."

> "I wonder in my soul, What you would ask me, that I should deny, Or stand so mammering on."

Oth., III, iii, 70.

MAMMET. O.F. mahommet = anidol, from Mohammed or Mahomet, from the false idea that Mahommedans were This was almost the only idolaters. non-Christian faith known to ancestors and it was with much injustice made to stand as the type of all false religions, idolatrous as well as non-idolatrous, although one of its distinctive features was its uncompromising hostility to all kinds of idolatry.

A puppet, a doll, a figure dressed up. Stubbs, Anatomie of Abuses, speaks of the fashionable women of the time as follows: "They are not natural but artificial women, not women of flesh and blood, but rather puppets or mammets consisting of ragges or clouts compact together." Holinshed also in his History of England, p. 108, speaks of "mawmets and idols."

"This is no world To play with mammets and to tilt with lips."

I Hen. IV-II, iii, 88; v. also R. and J., III, v. 185.

MAMMOCK. Probably from Gael. mam = a round hill, a handful, with dim. suff. -ock.

Vb. To tear to pieces, to mangle, to maul. Note.—For the subs. mammock = a shapeless piece, v. Drayton, Polvolbion:

"King John he valiantly subdued
The miserable French and there in mammocs hewed."

M. V., III, iv, 25; v. also Temp., I, ii, 70;

K. J., I, i, 37.

(4) Treatment.

"Now for the rebels which stand out in Ireland: Expedient manage must be made, my liege." Rich. II-I, iv, 39.

(5) Course and conduct.

"O noble prince, I can discover all The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl."
R. and J., III, i, 140.

(6) A running in the lists.

"Full merrily Hath this brave manage, this career, been run." L. L. L., V, ii, 484.

MANDRAKE. The English name for the plant mandragora. From the rude resemblance of the bifurcated root to the human figure many superstitious notions have gathered round this plant. An inferior degree of animal life was attributed to it. On being torn from the ground it was represented as uttering groans which had sundry effects. Cf. Webster, Duchess of Malfi: "I have this night digg'd up a mandrake And am grown mad with it."

Also, Cyril Tournour, The Atheist's Tragedy, V, i:

"The cries of mandrakes never touch'd the ear With more sad horror than that voice does mine." Ben Jonson, Sad Shepherd, II, 8:

"The venom'd plants
Wherewith she kills, where the sad mandrake grows
Whose groans are deathful."

Coles, Art of Simpling, says that witches "take likewise the roots of mandrake . . . and make thereof an ugly image, by which they represent the person on whom they intend to exercise their witchcraft." Bulleine, Bulwarke of Defence against Sicknesse, p. 41, tells how the root can be got without danger: "Therefore they did tye some dogge or other lyving beast unto the roote thereof wythe a corde, and digged the earth in compasse round about and in the mean tyme stopped their own eares for feare of the terreble shriek and cry of this Mandrack. In whych cry it doth not only dye it selfe, but the feare thereof kylleth the dogge or beast which pulleth it out of the earth." The ancients also entertained similar fanciful notions with respect this plant: Columella calls it semihomo, and Pliny, Historia Naturalis, XXV, 94, speaks of the precautions with which it was to be plucked up.

(1) Any diminutive or grotesque figure. "Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, than to wait at my heels." 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 14.

(2) A cause of death.

"Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's

I would invent as bltter-searching terms

As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave." 2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 310.

(3) A cause of madness.

" Is it not like that I, So early waking,—what with loathsome smells, And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;—Or, if I wake, shall I not be distraught?"

R. and J., IV, iii, 47.

(4) An emblem of incontinence.

"A' was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake."

2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 291.

> "When we have supp'd, We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story."
> Cym., III, vi, 92; v. also M. A., II, i, 65.

MANNINGTREE-OX. It appears great festivities were held at Manningtree in Essex, where there was a fair at which old Morality plays were often exhibited. It was customary at these festive occasions to roast an ox whole. The allusion to the pudding in the following passage of Shakespeare may be a fancy of the poet. We find it, however, referred to in a later production, Ballad on a New Opera (1658):

"Just as the people stare At an ox in the fair Roasted whole with a pudding in's belly."

The Manningtree oxen were, doubtless, famous for their size, as the neighbourhood was remarkable for the richness of its pastures.

"That roasted Manningtree-ox with the pudding in his belly.

I Hen. IV-II, iv, 417. MANQUELLER. A.S. man; cwellan = to kill. A man-killer, a murderer.

"Thou art a honey-seed (homicide): a manqueller and a woman queller." 2 Hen. IV-II, i, 47.

"Now from head to foot I am marble-constant."

A. and C., V ii, 240.

MARCHPANE. F. massepain. Origin doubtful: perhaps from Marci panis (Berghaus) = bread of Mars. quotes various suggestions as to the derivation of the word. Cf. modern marzipan,

A kind of sweet bread or almond cake, a macaroon; a spice-cake composed sugar nuts, pineapple, almonds, etc. It was an article much esteemed in the desserts of our ancestors. "how to make a marchpane" Nares makes a long quotation from one of the old English receipt-books, Delightes for Ladies (1608). v. also Markham's Countrey Farme: "Marchpanes are made of verie little flower, but with addition of greater quantitie of filberds, pine nuts, pistaces, rosed sugar." almonds,

"Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane." R. and J., I, v, 7.

MARE. A.S. mara = an incubus; Icel. mara = the nightmare.

The nightmare, a kind of torpor which seems to oppress the stomach with a weight which occasions horrible dreams.

Cf. Bacon, Natural History: "Mushrooms cause the incubus, or the mare in the stomach."

"I will ride thee o' nights like the mare."
2 Hen. IV-II, i, 67.

MARGENT. The same word as margin, with an excrescent t, as in tyrant, etc. (1) Margin, edge of a book.

"A sheet of paper Writ on both sides the leaf, margent and all."
L. L., V, ii, 8.

(2) An explanation or comment in the margin of a book.

> "I knew you must be edified by the margent ere you had done." Ham., V, ii, 146.

(3) Light, revelation, interpretation (like illustrations in the margins of books).

"What obscured in this fair volume lies Find written in the margent of his eyes."

R. and J., I, iii, 66; v. also L. L. L., II, i, 246; R. of L., 102.

(4) Shore, bank, strand.

"Never, since the middle summer's spring, Met we on hill, in dale, forest or mead, By paved fountain or by rushy brook, Or in the beached margent of the sea." M. N. D., II, i, 85; v. also L. C., 39.

MARISH. F. marais; Low L. mariscus. A marsh, a swamp. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, XII, 630:

" As evening mist Risen from a river, o'er the marish glides."

Also, Ezek. xlvii. 11: "The miry places thereof, and the marishes thereof shall not be healed."

> "Posterity, await for wretched years, When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,

Our isle be made a marish of salt tears." I Hen. VI-I, i, 50.

MARKET. (1) Public place for buying and selling.

"Search the market." Per., IV, ii, 3, (2) A public sale or fair.

"I run before my horse to market." Rich. 111-I, i, 164.

(3) An occasion for exposing for sale. "Sell when you can: you are not for all markets."

A. Y. L., III, v, 60.

"A right good markman! And she's fair I love." R. and J., I, i, 198. R. and J., I, i, 198.

MARRIED. Concordant, harmoniously Cf. Milton, L'Allegro, 137:

"Lap me in soft Lydian airs, Married to immortal verse.

"Examine every married lineament
And see how one another lends content."
R. and J., I, Iii, G.; v. also 2 Hen. IV-V, i, 6x; T. and C., I, iii, 100; Sonnet i, 61; VIII, 6.

A corruption of "by Mary" MARRY. from the practice of swearing by the Virgin Mary. This form was used to avoid profanation or its penalties.

Truly, indeed, forsooth.

"Marry, sir, be better employed, and be naught a while."

A. Y. L., I, i, 3r; v. also K. L., IV, ii, 68;

M. N. D., I, ii, 9.

TRAP. Nares observes that MARRY this "is apparently a kind of proverbial exclamation, as much as to say 'By Mary' you are caught!' but the phrase wants further illustration." Johnson remarks: "When a man was caught in his own stratagem, I suppose the exclamation of insult was marry trap!"

"Be aviz'd, sir, and pass good humours:
I will say marry trap with you, if you run the nuthook's humour on me."
M. W. W., I, i, 150.

MARSHAL. I., (1) The subs. chief officer of arms who regulates combats in the lists and establishes rank and order at royal feasts and processions.

"Bear this sealed brief With winged haste to the lord marshal."

1 Hen. IV-IV, iv, 2.

(2) A military officer of the highest rank, a field marshal.

"Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword. The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does."

M. M., II, ii, 61.

(3) A director, a guide.

"Reason becomes the marshal to my will." M. N. D., II, ii, 120.

II., vb. To direct, to lead.

> "Thou marshal'st me the way that I was going."
> Mac., II, i, 42; v. also Ham., III, iv, 198.

MART. Contraction for market. I., subs. (1) A place of public sale.

" If any born at Ephesus Be seen at Syracusan marts and fairs He dies.' C. E., I, i, 18.

(2) Trade, purchasing. "Why such daily cast of brazen cannon And foreign mart for implements of war?" Ham., I, i, 74.

(3) A mercantile transaction. "I play a merchant's part,

And venture madly on a desp'rate mart."

T. of S., II, i, 321. II., vb. A., trs. To traffic in, to bargain. Cf. John Marston, Scourge of Villanie (1598), I, 2:

"Once Albion lived in such a cruell age, That men did hold by servile villenage, Poore brats were slaves, of bone-men that were borne

And marted, sold."

"You have let him go And nothing marted with him."

W. T., IV, iii, 341; v. also J. C., IV, iii, 11.

B., intrs. To deal, to traffic.

"If he shall think it fit, A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
As in a Romish stew." Cym., I, vi, 144.

MARTIALIST. A warrior, a fighter, a soldier. Cf. William Browne, Britannia's Pastorals (1513), I, 5:

"He was a swain whom all the graces kist,
A brave, heroick, worthy martialist."
"What strange ruins,

Since first we went to school, may we perceive Walking in Thebes! scars and bare weeds, The gain o' the martialist." T. N. K., I, ii, 13.

MARTLEMAS. A corruption of Martinmas or the feast of St. Martin which falls on November 11. This was the season when meat was pickled and stored for winter use. An ox fattened to be killed and salted or smoked for winter provision is still called in Scotland and the northern counties of England, a mart, a mairt or maert. Northumberland a maint is used figuratively as a derisive term for a bulky person, e.g. "Ye greet muckle mairt." For a similar reason it is probable that, in the following passage, Falstaff was jocularly called Martlemas.

"And how doth the martlemas, your master?" 2 Hen. IV-II, ii, 89.

MARTLET. F. martin, a corruption of dim. martinet by interchange of n and l. A martin.

"This guest of summer,

The temple-haunting martlet, does approve, By his lov'd mansionry, that the heaven's breath

Smells wooingly here." Mac., I, vi, 4; v. also M. V., II, ix, 28.

MARVELLOUS. Adv. Wonderfully, exceedingly, extraordinarily.

> "Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot, Opon my life, she mids, atthough 1 cannot, Myself to be a marvellous proper man."
> Rich. III-1, ii, 255; v. also Temp., III, iii, 19; M.A., IV, ii, 27; Ham., II, i, 3; 2 Hem. IV-II, iv, 22; M. N. D., III, i, 2; IV, i, 23; M. M., IV, iii, 156.

MARY-BUD. The flower of the marigold, which was remarked to open in the morning and shut up in the evening. This property of the flower is further alluded to by Shakespeare in W. T., IV, iv, 104: "The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun, and with him rises weeping.

"Winking Mary-buds begin To ope their golden eyes." Cym., II, iii, 22.

MASK (Masque). I., subs. (1 entertainment, a revel. C. Faerie Queene, III, xii, 45: (1) A festive Cf. Spenser,

"After whom marcht a jolly company,
In a manner of a maske, arranged orderly."
"I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether."
T. N., I, iii, 100.

(2) Mummery. "This harness'd masque and unadvised revel, This unhair'd sauciness and boyish troops, The King doth smile at." K. J., V, ii, 132.

(3) A cover for the face frequently worn in public by ladies in Shakespeare's

"These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows

Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair.' R. and J., I, i, 236; v. also M. M., II, iv, 79.

(4) A cover for the face to preserve the complexion.

> "But since she did neglect her looking-glass, And threw her sun-expelling mask away,
> The air hath starved the roses in her cheeks

MASTER REASON. A chief or principal reason.

"She has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons." Per., IV, vi, 4.

MASTIC. Various readings and interpretations have been given of this word. (1) It has been suggested that it is a misprint for mastiff; (2) it has been associated with the word masticate; (3) it is thought that "his mastix jaws" in the following passage from Shakespeare, has been employed to avoid the cacophony of "his mastix jaws" "Mastix," as Warburton remarks, "was used to mean a whip or scourge, especially of a moral kind." At the same time he quotes a passage from More's Arcadia, in which the term is applied to one of Thersites' type: "And therefore sometimes looking upon an old acquaintance of his called Mastix, one of the repiningst fellowes in the world, and that beheld nobody but with a mind of mislike (saying still the world was amiss, but how it should be amended he knew not)," etc. Nevertheless, after these views are considered, the word masty is still an English Dialect term meaning very large and strong. Shakespeare may have used mastic as a duplicate of masty from an imagined analogy between these forms and (e.g.) lusty, lustic (lustig), q.v. The poet is making obvious allusion to the ugly features of Thersites.

"When rank Thersites opes his mastic jaws, We shall hear music, wit, and oracle."

T. and C., I, iii, 73.

"Mrs. Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature. M. W. W., IV, ii, 117.

MODESTY. (1) Sense of propriety. " I know not by what power I am made bold, Nor how it may concern my modesty, In such a presence here to plead my thoughts." M. N. D., I, i, 60.

(2) Moderation, freedom from excess. "Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me.

With thy religious truth and modesty, Now in his ashes honour."

Wein in a saise soliour.

Wein, VIII-IV, ii, 74; v. also Hen, VIII-V, iii, 64; Ham., III, ii, 21; J. C., III, i, 21; J. T. of S., Ind., I, 67; (in plur.)

T. of S., Ind., I, 92.

(3) Chastity, decency.

"You do impeach your modesty too much, To leave the city and commit yourself Into the hands of one that loves you not."

M. N. D., II, i, 214.

MODULE. (1) A pretender to virtue, a dissembler, a hypocrite.

"Shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier? Come bring forth this counterfeit module." A. W., IV, iii, 90.

(2) Image, outline.

"All this thou see'st is but a clod
And module of confounded royalty."

K. J., V, vii, 58.

MOE, 1. Comp. of many: more is comp. of mickle or much. Moe refers to number, more to size. In A.S. må and mâra are both found corresponding to the later forms. Aldis Wright observes that "moe" is used only with the plural, "more" both with singular and plural.

Additional.

"Keep me company but two years moe."
M. V., I, i, 108; v. also T. of A., I, i, 43;
II, i, 7; II, ii, 102; IV, iii, 378, 412,

MOE (Mow), 2. F. moue-pouting, a wry face.

I., subs. A grimace, a distortion of the face made in ridicule.

Moist it again."
T. G. V., III, ii, 76; v. also A. and C., V, ii, 285.

MOIST-STAR. The moon.

"The moist star Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands

Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse."

Ham., I, i, 118. Cf. "watery moon"

(M. N. D., II, i, 162); "watery star"

(W. T., I, ii, r).

MOLDWARP (Scotch Moudiewart). M.E. molde-earth, werpen-to throw, to cast: Ger. moltwurf.

> A mole (a curtailed form of the original word).

"Sometimes he angers me
With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant."

I Hen. IV-III, i, 153.

MOLLIFICATION. Mitigation, pacification, appeasement.

"I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady."

T. N., I, v, 188.

MOME. L. momus: Gr. $\mu \hat{\omega} \mu os =$ the god of raillery.

A stupid, dull fellow; a blockhead; a buffoon. Cf. Day, Blind Beggar of Bednal Green (1659): "Momes and hoydons, that know not chalk from cheese"; also, Mad Pranks of Tom Tram: "Old, foolish, doating moam."

"Mome, malt-horse, capon, cox-comb, idiot, patch!

Either get thee from the door, or sit down at the hatch."

C. E., III, i, 32.

MOMENTANY. L. Momentaneus.

Lasting a moment, momentary. Cf. Stow, The Mercians: "Howe short and momentane the pleasure of this filthie flesh is." The word is also used by Bacon, Hooker and Crashaw, and is not quite obsolete in Dryden's time.

"If there were a sympathy in choice War, death or sickness did lay siege to it, Making it momentany as a sound, Swift as a shadow."

M. N. D., I, i, 143. Note.—Shakespeare also uses momentary in the same sense. v. Mac., III, iv, 55.

MONARCH. (I) A sovereign ruler.

"It (mercy) becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown."
M. V., IV, i, 182.

(2) A patron.

"Come, thou monarch of the vine, Plumpy Bacchus with pink eyne." A. and C., II, vii, 114.

(3) A fantastic Englishman aping an Italian. v. Monarcho.

Par. "Save you, fair queen! Hel. And you, monarch!"

Note.—This is probably a mere jocular reply like M. V., II, ix, 85: Servant—"Where is my lady?" Portia—"Here, what would my lord?" and, again, Rich. II-V, v, 67: Groom—"Hail, royal prince!" King Richard: "Thanks, noble peer."

MONARCHO. A crack-brained Englishman affecting the airs of an Italian. Cf. Nash, Have with you: "But now he insulting monarch, above Monarcho, the Italian, that ware crownes in his shoes, and quite renounced his natural English accents and gestures, and wrested himself wholly to the Italian punctilios." The same character is also referred to by Meres: "Neither do they gape after any other thing but vaine praise and glorie; as in our age Peter Shakerlye of Paules, and Monarcho that lived about the court."

"A phantasime, a monarcho, and one that makes sport

To the prince and his bookmates." L. L. L., IV, i, 94.

MONSTER. Vb. To exaggerate till a thing seems enormous.

"I had rather have one scratch my head i' the sun.

When the alarm were struck, than idly sit To hear my nothings monster'd."

Cor., II, ii, 75; v. also K. L., I, i, 211.

MONSTROUS. Adv. Exceedingly, enormously.

"Skill infinite or monstrous desperate." A. W., II, i, 184. MONSTRUOSITY. Monstrosity, state of being out of the ordinary course.

'This is the monstruosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd."

T. and C., III, ii, 87.

MONTANT (Montanto). F. monter -to

A fencing term, an upright cut or thrust.

"To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee there; to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant." M. W. W., II, iii, 21. Hence, Beatrice jocularly calls Benedict Signor Montanto, implying that he was a great fencer (M. A., I, i, 26).

MONTH'S MIND. An earnest longing desire; a suggested explanation of the expression makes it allude to the longing of a woman in pregnancy usually commencing in the first month of gestation.

"I see you have a month's mind to them."

"I see you have a month's mind to them."

T. G. V., I, ii, 137.

Note.—The phrase, common in the early dramatists and other writers, was used to signify the commemoration of a person's higher his disease, and the memory one month after his disease, and the periodical celebration of mass for the repose of his soul.

MONUMENT. (1) A memorial, a memento.

"Our bruised arms hung up for monuments."

Rich. III-I, i, 6; v. also M. A., V, ii, 68;

"I have seen him Caper upright, like to a wild morisco, Shaking the bloody darts, as he his bells."

2 Hen. VI-III, i, 365.

Note.—The name was also given to the dance itself. Cf. Marston, What you will:
"Your wit skips a morisco."

ORRIS. Spelled morriske dance by Holland and his contemporaries, as MORRIS. having been introduced into England from the Morriscoes or Moors of Spain: Sp. Morisco = Moorish.

An ancient rustic dance in which the performers were dressed in grotesque costume with bells, etc. There are many records extant to prove the universal popularity of this dance on festive occasions, and particularly on May-day, both in the parish accounts of several dates and in the writings of poets of various periods. Douce his Illustrations of Shakespeare has a long description of the morrisdance, and among other things he points out that the music to which the fandango, the modern form of the Spanish Morisco, is danced, is "undoubtedly Moorish." It was probably brought to England in the time of Edward III, when John of Gaunt returned from Spain.

" As a pancake for Shrove Tuesday, a morris for May-day."

"O fairest mover on this mortal round."
V. and A., 368.

MOW. v. Moe, 2.

MOY. The meaning is uncertain, but the word is apparently considered by Pistol to represent some kind of coin. Johnson thought that the word was an abbreviation of moidore, a Portuguese coin; but moidores were in use only from 1690 to 1722, and consequently, were unknown in Shakespeare's time. It may be that in the following passage Pistol, having demanded "egregious ransom," repeats the "moi" of the French soldier imagining it to be a coin, and ensures his own interest by insisting upon

"forty," which was commonly used by Shakespeare and his contemporaries for "a great many."

"Moy shall not serve: I will have forty moys." Hen. V-IV, iv, 13.

MUCH. I., adj. (1) Great. "His fault is much."

K. L., II, ii, 137; v. also M. M., V, i, 534; T. G. V., III, ii, 72; M. A., IV, i, 100.

(2) No (used ironically). Cf. Ben Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, IV, 4: "Ay, sir, there you shall have him. Yes—invisible! Much wench, or much son!"

"How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? and here much Orlando!"

A. Y. L., IV, iii, 2.

II., adv. (1) A great deal, by far. "Much feater than before." Temp., II, i, 273.

(2) To a great degree.

"Nor needst thou much importune me."
T. G. V., I, iii, 17.

(3) Very.
"I confess me much guilty."

A. Y. L., I, ii, 196.

(4) Nearly, almost.

"Much like a press of people at a door."

R. of L., 1301.

III., subs. (1) A great quantity.

"A little

More than a little is by much too much."

r Hen. IV-III, ii, 73.

> "This my hand will rather The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green one red.'

Mac. II, ii, 61.

MUMBLE-NEWS. Mum - imitative, excrescent, -le freq. suffix.

A tale-bearer.

"Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight." L. L. L., V, ii, 474.

MUM-BUDGET. An expression impressing silence and secrecy. Cf. Cotgrave, French Dictionary: "Avoir le bec gelé—to play mum-budget, to be tongue-tyed, to say never a word." Also, Butler, Hudibras, I, 3:

"Nor did I ever winch or grudge it

For thy dear sake. Quoth she, mum-budget."

"I come to her in white, and cry 'mum';
she cries 'budget,' and by that we know one another."

M. W. W., V, ii, 6.

(2) The flesh of sheep.

"I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge." L. L., I, i, 299.

(3) A prostitute, a woman of easy virtue, (v. Laced Mutton). Cf. Webster, Appius and Virginia, III:

" Mutton's mutton now.

V. Why, was it not so ever?
C. No, madam, the sinners 'i the suburbs had almost ta'en the name quite away from it, 'twas so cheap and common; but now 'tis at a sweet reckoning; the term time is the mutton-monger (= the debauched man) in the whole calendar."

"The duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays. He's not past it yet, and I say to thee he would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt brown bread and garlic." M. M., III, ii, 161.

MUTUAL. (1) Common to two, belonging to both sides.

"That blood we desire to shed is mutual." T. N. K., III, vi, 96,

"The near in blood The nearer bloody.' Mac., II, iii, 146; v. also Rich. II-III, ii, 64; V, i, 88.

Note.—For phrase "ne'er the near" = never the nearer, cf. Chaucer, The Chanouns "Your time is lost, and you are never the near."

"And of his science am I never the neer."

Also Ben Jonson, Tale of a Tub, Epil.:

"Wherein the poets' fortune is, I fear,
Still to be early up, but ne'er the neer."

Cf. also Churchyard, Legend of Shore's Wije:

"Your time is lost, and you are never the NEAR-LEGGED. Knock-kneed, bandy.

Note.—According to Grant-White this is the reading of the original. The folio has "neere leg'd before"—foundered in the fore-feet: having as the Jockeys term it "never a fore-leg to stand on" (Malone followed by Dyce).

NEARLY. (1) Closely, intimately, pressingly.

"What most nearly appertains to us both." K. L., I, i, 275.

(2) In a manner approaching to what is proposed.

"As nearly as I may,

I'll play the penitent to you.'

A. and C., II, ii, 91.

NEAT, 1. A.S. neat—cattle, from neotan -to use, to employ. Scotch, nolt or nowt -oxen.

(1) Cattle collectively.

"Methought he bore him in the thickest troop

As doth a lion in a herd of neat."

3 Hen. VI-II, i, 14; v. also W. T., I, ii, 125.

(2) A single head of cattle, a cow or ox. "Silence is only commendable in a neat's tongue dried and a maid not vendible."

M. V., I, i, 112; v. also Temp. II, ii, 73;
J. C., I, i, 28; r. Hen. IV-II, iv, 227.

NEAT, 2. F. net; L. nitidus.

(4) Essential, indispensably requisite.
"'Tis necessary he should die."

T. of A., III, v, 2.

NECESSITIED TO. In need of.

"This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen, I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood necessitied to help, that by this token I would relieve her."

A. W., V, iii, 85.

Note the anacoluthon in this passage, or change in the logical sequence of ideas, a figure very common in Shakespeare. For other examples v. M. V., I, iii, 128; A. Y. L., IV, i, 40; Hen. V-IV, iii, 35. The sense here obviously is—"I bade her, if she needed help (to ask for it, assured) that I would give it."

NECK (In the, of). Immediately after, on the heels of, following closely on.

"And in the neck of that tasked the whole state."

Note.—Cf. Sonnet CXXXI, II: "A thousand groans... One on another's neck"; also Paynter, Palace of Pleasure (1566): 'Great mischiefes succeedying one in another's necke."

NECK (To lay on the). To impute to, to lay on the shoulders.

"You have done well,
That men must lay their murthers on your neck." Oth., V, ii, 169.

NEEDLESS. (1) Unnecessary, superfluous.

"O, bravely came we off, When with a volley of our needless shot, After such bloody toil, we bid good-night." $K.\ J.,\ V,\ v,\ 5.$

(2) Groundless, without sufficient cause.
"Pray God I prove a needless coward."
Rich. III-III, ii, 90.

(3) Having enough, not needing, well supplied.

"Weeping into the needless stream."
A. Y. L., II, i, 46.

NEEDLY. Necessarily, of necessity (used only once by Shakespeare).

"And needly will be rank'd with other griefs."

R. and J., III, ii, 117.

Note: Clarks remarks: "Shelvespears has

Note.—Clarke remarks—"Shakespeare has here coined an excellent word . . . which it would be well to adopt into our language as good English." But the word had been previously in use; examples of it are to be met with in the works of Chaucer and Lodge.

NICHOLAS (St.). The patron of scholars (v. note on St. Nicholas' Clerks).

Speed. "Come, fool, come; try me in thy paper.

mce. There; and Saint Nicholas be thy

T. G. V., III, i, 292. NICHOLAS' CLERKS (St.). Thieves, highwaymen. Knight remarks: "There is a story in Douce how the saint attained this distinction, by discovering that a wicked host had murdered three scholars on their way to school, and by his prayers restored their souls to their bodies. This legend is told in the life of St. Nicholas, composed in French verse by Maitre Wace, chaplain to Henry II, (and) which remains in manuscript. By the Statutes of St. Paul's, the scholars are required to attend divine service at the cathedral on the anniversary of this saint. . why are thieves called St. Nicholas' clerks (scholars) in Henry IV? Warburton says by a quibble between Nicholas and old Nick. This we doubt. Scholars appear, from the ancient statutes against vagrancy, to have been great travellers about the country. These statutes generally recognize the right of poor scholars to beg; but they were also liable to the penalties of the gaol and the stocks, unless they could produce letters testimonial from the chancellor of their respective universities. It is not unlikely that in the journeys of these hundreds of poor scholars they should have occasionally 'taken a purse' as well as begged 'an almesse,' and that some of "Saint Nicholas' Clerks" should have become as celebrated for the accomplishments which distinguished Bardolph and Pots at Gadshill, as for the learned poverty which entitled them to travel with a chancellor's license." The phrase was a common one, and Steevens quotes among other examples A Christian Turn'd Turk, "St. Nicholas' (1612): clerks are stepp'd up before us "; also, Glapthorne, The Hollander: "Divers rooks and St. Nicholas' clerks."

"If they meet not with St. Nicholas' Clerks, I'll give thee this neck."

1 Hen. IV-II, i, 54.

NICK. A modified form of nock, the older form of notch.

I., subs. A score on a tally from the old practice of keeping reckoning by notches on sticks, hence, a reckoning.

"I tell you what. Launce, his man told me he loved her out of all nick."

T. G. V., IV, ii, 73.

II., vb. (1) To notch, to cut notches in, to indent.

"His man with scissors nicks him like a fool."
C. E., V, i, 175.

Note.—Malone observes that professional fools were shaved and had their hair nicked or notched in a particular manner. He cites The Choice of Change (1598), in which it is said of monks that "they are shaven and notched on the head, like fooles."

(2) To mar, to disfigure.

"The itch of his affection should not then Have nick'd his captainship."

A. and C., III, xiii, 8.

NIECE. (1) The daughter of a brother or sister.

"What is he that you ask for, niece?"

M. A., I, i, 30.

(2) Originally not so limited in meaning as now, but loosely used like cousin and nephew (q.v.) for different relations, a relative in general.

"Myself was from Verona banished
For practising to steal away a lady,
An heir and niece allied unto the duke."
T. G. V., IV, i, 49.

(3) Grand-daughter. Cf. Philemon Holland, Translation of Suetonius: "He lost by death first his mother, then his daughter Juba, and, not long after, his niece, by the said daughter."

"Who meets us here? my niece Plantagenet Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?" Rich. III-IV, i, 1.

NIGGARD. Vb. A., trs. To stint, to begrudge, to put off with short allowance.

"Nature must obey necessity;
Which we will niggard with a little rest."

J. C., IV, iii, 226.

B., intrs. To be stingy, to be sparing.

"And (thou), tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding."

Sonnet I, 12.

NIGH. Adv. (1) Near.

"Grapple with him ere he comes so nigh."

K. J., V, i, 6r.

(2) Feelingly, so as to be sensibly felt, in a manner coming home to the heart.

"Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky, Thou dost not bite so nigh As benefits forgot."

A. Y. L., II, vii, 184.

(3) Almost, nearly.

"Well nigh worn to pieces with age."
M. W. W., II, i, 18.

"I nightly lodge her in an upper tower."

T. G. V., III, i, 35.

(2) Every night, night after night.

"He's drunk nightly in your company."

T. N., I, iii, 33.

NIGHT OF DEW. Dew of night (by a strange transposition of the attributive genitive and the substantive qualified), nightly tears.

"So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not To those fresh morning drops upon the rose, As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote

The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows."

Note.—For an analogous example of this species of Hypallage or Figure of change, v. Virgil, Aeneid, III, 61, "Dare classibus austros" (to give the winds to the fleet), instead of "Dare classes austris" (to give the ffleet [to the winds). v. "Oats have eaten the horses."

NIGHT-RAVEN. Probably the same as "night-crow" (q.v.). Cf. Milton, L'Allegro, 7: "And the night-raven sings"; also, Ben Jonson, Poetaster: "The dismall night-raven, and tragicke owle."

"I had as lief have heard the night-raven, Come what plague could have come after it."

M. A., II, iii, 76.

NIGHT-RULE. Night-revel (reuel). Rule—tumultuous frolicsome conduct, a rough or lively sport. "Now I will go see what rule they keep—nunc in tumultum ibo" (Coles). Halliwell cites the old statutes of London, as given by Stowe: "No man shall, after the hour of nine at the night, keep any rule whereby any such sudden outcry be made in the still of the night, as making any affray, etc."

"What night-rule now about this haunted grove?" M. N. D., III, ii, 5.

NILL. A.S. nillan, ne—not, and willan—to will, to wish.

"He met the nightmare and her nine-fold."

K. L., III, iv, 116.

NINE MEN'S MORRIS. A kind of game in which a figure of squares was made on the ground by cutting out the turf Two persons into holes at the angles. took nine stones which they placed by turns in the holes, and then moved alternately as in draughts. The player who succeeded in placing three of his stones in a straight line, removed any of his adversary's from any point he pleased and the game ended by one of the players losing all his men. It was also a table-game played with counters. The French gave it the name "merelles" (counters), from which it was at first called in England "merrils," afterwards corrupted into morris. "The nine men's morris is filled up with mud." M. N. D., II, i, 98.

NINE-WORTHIES. Famous personages often alluded to in Elizabethan literature. They were commonly said to be three Gentiles—Hector, son of Priam, Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar; three Jews—Joshua, conqueror of Canaan, David, king of Israel, Judas Maccabaeus; and three Christians—Arthur, King of Britain, Charles the Great or Charlemagne, Godfrey of Bouillon. Pompey and Hercules are included by Shakespeare among the nine, v. L. L. L., V, i, 125 et seq., also V., ii, 286 et seq.

"Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine worthies."

2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 184.

NINNY. Ital. ninno—a child, Sp. nino—a child, an infant; of imitative origin. Cf. Ital. ninna—a lullaby from the repetition of the syllables ni, ni, na, na, in humming or singing children to sleep (Skeat).

NOOK-SHOTTEN Indented with bays and creeks.

"That nook-shotten isle of Albion."

I nat noor-snoten isie of Albion."

Hem. V-III, v, 14.

Note.—Knight and White think it more probably means "thrust into a corner apart from the rest of the world," this interpretation suggesting the scorn with which the Dauphin spoke of England. Staunton, "an isle spawned in a corner." The form shotten occurs frequently in Elizabethan literature and is spawned in a corner." In form shotten occurs frequently in Elizabethan literature and is retained in some of the dialects of the present day, Marlowe uses "blood-shotten" (still retained as blood-shot); Marston, "a shotten herring," a herring that has recently spawned and is consequently in poor condition;

Beaumont and Fletcher, Wit without Money, II, iv, 2: "You shotten-soul'd slight fellows." Nook-shotten is still retained in the dialect of Shropshire in the sense of inferior, faulty, e.g. "Sich a neuk-shotten thing inna wuth 'er saut." In the same dialect we find the same word meaning having nuny sharp turns and angles, crooked: e.g. 'The way was very neuk-shotten' (v. English Dialect Dictionary).

NOONTIDE-PRICK. The point of noon. "Now Phaethon hath tumbled from his car, And made an evening at the noontide-prick. Note.—v. prick, subs. (1).

NO OTHER. Nothing else.
"We hope no other from your majesty."
2 Hen. IV-V, ii, 62; v. also Mac., V, iv, 8.

NO POINT. A play upon the French negative point; hence, used as an emphatic negative by no means. Steevens quotes, The Shoemaker's Holiday (1600): "No point. Shall I betray my brother ?"

Biron. "Will you prick 't with your eye? Rosaline. No point. With my knife."
L. L. L., II, i, 189; v. also L. L. L., V, ii, 278.

NORTH. (1) A district situated more northerly than another.

NOT-PATED (Nott-pated). A.S. hnotshorn.

A head with the hair cut close. Cf. not-heed in Chaucer, Prologue, 109: "A not-heed had he with a brown visage."

"Wilt thou rob this leathern jerkin, crystalbutton, not-pated, agate-ring . . . ?"
I Hen. IV-II, iv, 66.

Note.—By some the word is taken to mean stupid, thick-headed, dull-brained as in "Knotty-pated" (I Hen. IV-II, iv, 211). v. Chapman, The Widow's Tears, I, I: "Only your block-headly tradesman, your honest meaning citizen, your not-headed country-gentleman, your unapprehending stinckard, is blest, etc."

NOUGHT TO DO. Nothing to do with, no concern in.

> "Day hath nought to do what's done by R. of L., 1092. night.'

NOURISH. Subs. A nurse (instead of nourice as it is found in Chaucer).

"Our isle be made a nourish of salt tears And none but women left to wail the dead." 1 Hen. VI-I, i, 50.

NOUSLE (Noursle). A diminutive, or frequentative form from nurse.

To nurse, to cherish, to rear, to bring Cf. Spenser, Faeri: Queene, I, vi, up. 206:

"Whom, till to ryper years he gan aspyre, He nousled up in life and manners wilde, Amongst wild beasts and woods."

Also Faerie Queene, V, i, 53:

"In which she noursled him till yeares he raught." "Those mothers who, to nousle up their babes, Thought nought too curious, are ready now To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd." Per., I, iv, 42.

NOVICE. A youth.

"'Tis thou Hast sold me to this novice." A. and C., IV, xii, 14; v. also Rich. III-I, iv, 216.

NOVUM (Novem). L. novem-nine.

A game at dice properly called novem quinque (nine five), played by five or six persons, in which the principal throws were nine and five. Cf. Decker, Bellman (1640): "The principal use of langrets (a kind of false dice) is at novum.

"The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy:

Abate a throw at novum, and the whole world again Cannot pick out five such, take each one in his vein."

L. L. L., V, ii, 542.

NOYANCE (Noiance). Harm, mischief, annovance. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, i, 205:

"A cloud of cumbrous gnats do him molest, All striving to infix their feeble stings,

That from their noyance he no where can rest." Cf. also Tusser, A Hundreth Good Pointes of Husbandrie, XVI, 8:

"To borrow to-day, and to-morrow to miss,

For lender and borrower noisence it is."

"The single and peculiar life is bound,
With all the strength and armour of the mind,
To keen itself from noisence." To keep itself from noyance.

Ham., II, iii, 13.

NUMBERED. Numerous with, dantly provided with (something)—used in a pregnant sense like multitudinous (2), q.v.

"The twinn'd stones Upon the number'd beach" (=numerous, Cym., I, vi, 36. with stones).

NUNCIO. A messenger, an ambassador, especially a papal ambassador.

"She will attend it better in thy youth Than in a nuncio's of more grave aspect."

T. N., I, iv, 27.

Note.—By NUNCLE. For mine uncle. prothesis an initial n is in several cases found prefixed to a word which properly begins with a vowel; this is due to the final n of mine (min) or an. Nuncle was a customary appellation of licensed fools when addressing their superiors. v. Beaumont and Fletcher, Pilgrim, IV, I: Alinda, who has assumed the character of a fool, meets Alphonso, and calls him nuncle, and, by a similar contraction, is addressed by him as naunt. Aldis Wright refers to the same principle the formation of Noll, Ned, Nan, Nell, Numps from Oliver, Edward, Anne, Ellen, and Humphrey.

"How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!"

K. L., I, iv, 98.

NUPTIAL. A wedding, a marriage. Note.—The word is generally used by Shakespeare in the singular; in those passages where the plural form is found the readings are doubtful. It is now only used in the plural. On the other hand Shakespeare uses "funerals" where the practice now is to employ the singular form.

"I will bid the Duke to the nuptial."

A. Y. L., V, ii, 38; v. also M. M., III, i, 228; M. A., IV, i, 65; M. N. D., I, i, 125; Oth., II, ii, 6; Per., V, iii, 96.

OWL WAS A BAKER'S DAUGHTER, The. An allusion to a legendary tale respecting a baker's daughter being transformed into an owl for impiety or niggardliness. Douce has recovered the story and relates it as follows: "Our Saviour went into a baker's shop where they were baking, and asked for some bread to eat. The mistress of the shop immediately put a piece of dough into the oven to bake for Him, but was reprimanded by her daughter, who, insisting that the piece of dough was too large, reduced it to a very small size. The dough, however, immediately began to swell, and presently became of an enormous size. Whereupon the baker's daughter cried out "Heugh, heugh, heugh," which owl-like noise probably induced our Saviour to transform her into that bird."

"They say the owl was a baker's daughter." Ham., IV, v, 41.

ii, 167.

PASSAGE. (1) The act of passing, motion, entrance or exit.

"The wind imprison'd in the ground Struggling for passage." V. and A., 1047.

(2) A channel.

"I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat."

T. N., I, iii, 37.

(3) A passer-by, a person passing. "What ho! no watch? no passage?" Oth., V, i, 37; v. also C. E., III, i, 98.

(4) A departure from life, death, decease.

"Am I then revenged,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?"

Ham., III, iii, 86.

(5) Movement. "The sullen passage of thy weary steps Esteem a foil." Rich. II-I, iii, 265.

 To foreign passages?" Rich. II-I, iii, 272.
 (7) An approach.

"You ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business, never Desir'd it to be stirr'd, but oft have hinder'd, oft,
The passages made toward it."

Hen. VIII-II, iv, 164.

(8) An incident, an event, an occurrence.
"It is no act of common passage, but A strain of rareness."

Cym., III, iv, 91; v. also A. W., I, i, 17; Ham., IV, vii, 111. (9) Fighting.

"There is gallant and most grave passage."

Hen. V-III, vi, 87.

(10) Plu. Acts, proceedings.

"Thou dost in thy passages of life
Make me believe that thou art only mark'd

Make me believe that thou art only mark'd For the hot vengeance and the rod of heav'n To punish my mistreadings."

Then. IV-III, ii, 8.

(II) An imposition. v. pass upon.

"There is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness."

T. N., III, ii, 66.

(12) Administration, course.

"Thou
Shalt feel our justice, in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death."

W. T., III, ii, 88.

(13) A trace, a step (in a claim).

"There was not time enough to hear,
As I perceived his grace would fain have done,
The severals, and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms."
Hen. V-I, i, 86.
Note.—"The passages of his titles are the lines of succession by which his claims descend" (Johnson).

PASSENGER. A passer-by, a wayfarer, a traveller. Cf. Dryden, Dufresnoy: "Apelles, when he had finished any work, exposed it to the sight of all passengers, and concealed himself to hear the censure of his faults."

"Henry my lord is cold in great affairs, Too full of foolish pity, and Gloster's show Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile with sorrow snares relenting passengers."

2 Hen. VI-III, i, 227; v. also T. G. V.,
IV, i, 1, 72; V, iv, 15; V. and A., 91.

PASSING. I., vb. pres. part. (1) Going. " All that lives must die Passing through nature to eternity." Ham., I, ii, 73.

(5) A violent rage.

"Some bloody passion shakes your very frame." Oth., V, ii, 444.

(6) A passionate outcry.

"I never heard a passion so confused." M. V., II, viii, 12; v. also T. and C., V, ii, 181.

(7) The nature of one's feelings.

"If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise." M. A., I, i, 185.

(8) Plu. Amorous desire, ardent affection.

> "Master-mistress of my passions." Sonnet XX, 2.

II., vb. To feel pain or sorrow, to grieve.

"Madam, 'twas Ariadne passioning
For Theseus' perjury and unjust flight."
T. G. V., IV, iv, 160; v. also Temp., V, i, 24; L.L.L., I, i, 249; V. and A., 1059.

PASSIONATE. I., adj. (1) Eager, vehement.

"This passionate humour of mine." Rich. III-I, iv, 117.

To express passionately or feelingly.

"Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,

And cannot passionate our tenfold grief With folded arms."

T. A., III. T. A., III, ii, 6. Note.—The word in Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, 12, 137, means to impassion, to affect with passion:

"Great pleasure, mix'd with pitiful regard,
That godly king and queen did passionate."

PASS UPON. (1) To impose on, to poke fun at, to play the fool with.

"Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee.'

T. N., III, i, 36; v. also T. N., V, i, 341. (2) To pass judgment, to pronounce upon.

"We may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice."

K. L. III, vii, 26. PASSY-MEASURE. Ital. passamezzo, the Italian name of a dance fashionable in the time of Shakespeare. In rhythm and measure it was slow, and differed little from the action of walking. The old English writers call it passa measure, passy measure, passing measure or simply measure. The word as an adjective in the following passage seems to mean solemn and slow, if a meaning is to be looked for in what a drunken man says.

"Then he's a rogue, and a passy-measures pavin."

T. N., V, i, 193.

PAST-CURE. Adj. Incurable.

"We must not So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope, To prostitute our past-cure malady To empirics."

A. W., A. W., II, i, 121.

PAST-PROPORTION. Subs. Immensity, a magnitude beyond comparison with any measure.

"Will you with counters sum The past-proportion of his infinite'?

T. and C., II, ii, 29. ASTRY. The place where pastry is made. Note.—The word is formed in PASTRY. the same way as pantry, buttery, spicery: cf. Howell, Letters: "He missed his way, and so struck into the pastry."

"They call for dates and quinces in the pastry." R. and J., IV, iv, 2.

PAST-SAVING. Beyond redemption, hopeless, abandoned.

> "What a past-saving slave is this!" A. W., IV, iii, 128.

"This can hardly be other than the same word as pat = a tap. But the sense is clearly due to an extraordinary confusion with Du. pas, pat, fit, convenient, in time" (Skeat).

Conveniently, in the nick of time. "Now might I do it pat, now he is praying."

Ham., III, iii, 73; v. also Hen. VIII-II, iii, 84; K. L., I, ii, 118; M. N. D., III, i, 2.

PATCH. Etymology doubtful. Skeat supposes that l has been lost and that the true form is platch from Low German plakke, plakk = (1) A spot; (2) a piece, either torn off or put on; (3) a piece of ground: plakken-to patch. Note.—Platch is found in some of the dialects of Scotland in the sense of to patch.

I., subs. (1) A piece of cloth sewed on to cover a tear.

> " Patches, set upon a little breach, Discredit more in hiding of the fault, Than did the fault before it was so patch'd."
> K. J., IV, ii, 32.

(2) A piece of silk or velvet used to cover a defect on the face.

"Yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face." A. W., IV, v, 82.

(3) A plot (of ground). "A little patch of ground."

Ham., IV, iv, 18.

45; Mac., V, iii, 15; A. Y. L., II, vii,
13; C. E., III, i, 32.

(5) A low, common fellow.

"A crew of patches, rude mechanicals, That work for bread upon Athenian stalls, Were met together to rehearse a play."

M. N. D., III, ii, 9.

II., vb. (1) To mend by inserting a piece of cloth. "This must be patch'd With cloth of any colour."

Cor., III, i, 252.

(2) To repair clumsily.

"O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw." Ham., V, i, 202.

(3) To ameliorate.

" If such a one will smile and stroke his beard, Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune

With candle-wasters; bring him yet to me."

M. A., V, i, 17.

M. N. D., I, i, 80; v. also LXXXVII, 8. v. also Sonnet

(3) Formal permission.

"If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend." Oth., IV, i, 185. Oth., IV, i, 185.

PATH. Vb. To walk about.

> "For if thou path, thy native semblance on, Not Erebus itself were dim enough To hide thee from prevention."

J. C., II, i, 83. Note.—It has been suggested to substitute for path as a verb, march, pass, walk, parle, and put, omitting the comma immediately following. But its use as a verb is sufficiently ronowing. But its use as a vero is suntentity authenticated. Cf. Drayton, England's Historical Epistles, Duke Humphrey to Elinor Cotham, I, 91: "Pathing young Henries unadvised waies"; also Drayton, Polyolbion, II, 55; "Where from the neighbouring hills her passage Wey doth path." In both of these instances the verb is used transitively with an object coward in meaning. with an object cognate in meaning.

PATHETICAL. (1) Pretending passion, persuasive, passionate. Cf. Fuller, Pisgah Sight, Book II, chap. 12: "He mistook Joshua's curse rather for a pathetical expression than prophetical prediction."

"I will think you the most pathetical breakpromise, and the most hollow lover."

A. Y. L., IV, i, 166.

(2) Exciting feelings of commiseration, pitiable.

"And his page o' t'other side, that handful of wit

Ah heavens, it is a most pathetical nit." L. L. L., III, i, 135.

(1) Endurance without mur-PATIENCE. muring and fretting.

> "That, which in mean men we entitle patience, Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts."
> Rich. II-I, ii, 33.

(2) Freedom from discontent.

" Patience! The statue is but newly fixed." W. T., V, iii 54. (3) Leave, permission.

By your patience, I needs must rest me." Temp., III, iii, 3; v. also A. Y. L., V, iv, 172; Ham., III, ii, 100; Oth., I, iii, 89.

- (4) Perseverance in action or exertion. "Have patience and endure." M. A., IV, i, 256.
- (5) Power to endure.

"I thank God I have as little patience as another man." L. L. L., I, ii, 159.

(6) Indulgence, long-suffering, forbearance.

> "Do you find Your patience so predominant in your nature That you can let this go?" Mac., III, i, 86; v. also M. V., II, vi, 21.

(7) Calmness, composure.

"With what strict patience have I sat!" L. L. L., IV, iii, 160.

PATIENT. Vb. To compose, to calm, to tranquillise (only once used by Shakespeare as a verb). Cf. Sackville, Ferrex and Porrex, I, 147: "Patient, your grace, perhaps he liveth yet." Stevens quotes Arden of Feversham (1592): "Patient yourself, we cannot help it now." Also Warner, Albion's England (1602): "Her, weeping ripe, he laughing bids to patient her awhile."

"Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me." T. A., I, i, 121.

PATINE (Paten). L. patena - wide shallow basin. Gr. πατανή = a kind of flat dish, πετάννυμι - I open.

"Being done there is no pause. Oth., V, ii, 82. (2) An interval for consideration.

"A night is but small breath and little pause To answer matters of this consequence."

Hen. V-II, iv, 145. (3) Suspense, doubt, hesitation.

"Like a man to double business bound, I stand in pause where I shall first begin." Ham., III, iii, 42.

II., vb. (1) To discontinue acting or speaking for a time.

"I pause for a reply." J. C., III, ii, 32.

(2) To be quiescent. "Patience unmov'd! no marvel though she pause." C. E., II, i, 32.

(3) To wait. "Pause a day or two Before you hazard." M. M. V., III, ii, 2.

(4) To take time to consider, question, or examine.

"Other offenders we will pause upon."

I Hen. IV-V, v, 15.

(5) To hesitate, to delay, to dilly-dally. "Why doth the Jew pause? Take thy forfeiture." M. V., IV, i, 327.

(6) To rest, to repose.

"We want a little personal strength, And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot, Come underneath the yoke of government."

2 Hen. IV-IV, iv, 9.

PAUSER. One who deliberates much. "The expedition of my violent love Outruns the pauser, reason."

Mac., II, iii, 117. With pauses, deliberately. PAUSINGLY. "With demure confidence This pausingly ensued.'

Hen. VIII-I, ii, 168.

PAVED. Pebbly.

> "And never, since the middle summer's spring, Met we on hill, in dale, forest and mead,

By paved fountain or by rushy brook,

To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind." $M.\ N.\ D.,\ II,\ i,\ 84.$

PAVIN (Pavan). A grave, stately dance, deriving its name, according to Italian authors, from Padua (Paduana), where it is said to have originated; or, according to Sir J. Hawkins in his History of Music, from L. pavo — a peacock, because it was danced with "such circumstance of dignity and stateliness." Cf. Ben Jonson, The Alchemist, IV, ii, 12: "Your Spanish pavin the best dance." Sempill (Ballads) has "Ze plesand paun (=peacock)."

A grave solemn coxcombe (Malone), or one who struts like a peacock.

"Then he's a rogue and a passy measures pavin." T. N., V, i, 192. Note.-Probably Sir Toby contemptuously called the surgeon a pavin either on account of his dignified strut or from the name of the dance for which he had no

PAWN. L. pannus = a cloth, a rag (a piece of cloth being the readiest article to leave in pledge).

I., subs. (1) A thing pledged.

"To lie like pawns lock'd up in chests and trunks." K. J., V, ii, 141.

(2) Something to be pledged, if neces-

"My life I never held but as a pawn To wage against thy enemies.

K. L., I, i, 145.

(3) The state of being pledged. "Redeem from broking pawn the blemish'd crown." Rich. II-II, i, 292.

(4) Phrase: "At pawn" -- pledged, given as security.

K. J., III, i, 98; v. also 2 Hen. IV-IV, ii, 113; Rich. III-IV, ii, 88.

(2) To risk, to wage.

"Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make Pawning his honour to obtain his lust."

R. of L., 156.

PAX. A symbol of peace, called also osculatorium; at first probably a crucifix, then a plate of metal adorned with a figure of Christ crucified or some other pious emblem, passed among all the congregation to be kissed, to signify the peace, unity, and amity of all the faithful. This was the origin of "the kiss of peace." Some authorities, following Holinshed, suggest Pix (the shrine in which the consecrated wafers were kept) instead of Pax in the passages in which it occurs in Hen. V. Steevens shows, however, by two quotations that the words were different and used in juxtaposition. Cf. Stowe's Chronicle: "Palmes, Chalices, crosses, vestments, pixes, paxes, and such like"; again, Our Lady of Loretto: "A cup, and a sprinkle for holy water, a pix, and a pax, all of excellent crystal, gold and amber."

" Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on

For he hath stol'n a pax, and hang'd must be. Hen. V-III, vi, 38; v. also Hen. V-III, vi, 43. PAY. Vb. A., trs. (1) to satisfy or quit an obligation.

"One sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt." V. and A., 84.

(2) To give as an equivalent. "I paid nothing for it."

M. W. W., IV, v, 62. (3) To render, to offer.

" Pay that duty." (4) To requite.

"All my services you have paid home."

W. T., V, iii, 4. (5) To give in requital. " More nor less to others paying "More nor less to others properly."
Than by self-offences weighing."
M. M., III, ii, 238.

(6) To settle scores with a person, to punish, to dispatch.

"Two, I am sure, I have paid."

1 Hen. IV-II, iv, 213.

(7) To beat, to thrash, to chastise.

"Here's that (=a rope), I warrant you will pay them all" (with a quibble).

C. E., IV, iv, 10.

Note.—The word with this meaning is common in Scotland, e.g. "I'll pay your bide." hide."

B., intrs. (1) To give as an equivalent. "He shall pay for him." Temp., II, ii, 81.

(2) To have requital. "He shall pay for this."

M. V., II, viii, 26.

K. J., II, i, 247,

PEACE. Vb. A., trs. To silence, to hush, to keep still.

" Peace-a your tongue."

M. W. W., I, iv, 71. B., intrs. To be still or quiet, to keep silent.

"I will not peace." Rich. II-V, ii, 81.

PEACE-PARTED. Departed from the world in peace.

"We should profane the service of the dead To sing a requiem and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls."

Ham., V, i, 226.

Vb. A., intrs. PEACH. To turn informer or king's evidence.

"If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this." 1 Hen. IV-II, ii, 41. B., trs. To impeach, to stigmatize.

"Then is there here one Master Caper, at the suit of Master Three-pile the mercer, for some four suits of peach-coloured satin, which now peaches him a beggar." M. M., IV, iii, 10.

PEAK. Vb. (1) To grow sharp-featured, thin, sickly.

"Weary se'nnights, nine times nine, Shall he dwindle, peak and pine." Mac., I, iii, 23.

(2) To mope, to brood.

"Yet I, A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause."

Ham., II, ii, 539.

PEAKING. Sneaking.

"The peaking Cornuto her husband comes me in the instant of our encounter."

M. W. W., III, v, 63.

Adj. Rural, provincial. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, VI, iii, 277:

"Perdy, thou peasant knight mightst rightly reed Me then to be full base and evil born. "This have I rumoured through the peasant towns." 2 Hen. IV-Ind., 33.

PEASCOD. (1) The husk containing the peas.

"As a squash is before 'tis a peaseod."

T. N., I, v, 167; v. also K. L., I, iv, 219.

Note.—"Our ancestors were frequently accustomed in their love affairs to employ the divination of a peascod, by selecting one growing on the stem, snatching it away quickly, and, if the good omen of the peas remaining in the husk were preserved, then presenting it to the lady of their choice." Cf. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, Bk. II, Song

3, 93-96:—
"The peascod greene oft with no little toyle Hee'd seeke for in the fattest fertil'st soile, And rend it from the stalke to bring it to her, And in her bosome for acceptance wooe her."

Cf. also, Gay, Fourth Pastoral:
"As peascods once I pluck'd, I chanc'd to see
One that was closely filled with three times three, Which when I cropp'd I safely home convey'd, And o'er my door the spell in secret laid."

(2) A peascod branch.

"I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and, giving her them again said with weeping tears, 'Wear these for my sake.''

A. Y. L., II, iv, 50.

PEAT. F. petit.

"A delicate person: usually applied to a young female, but often ironically, as meaning a spoiled pampered favourite" (Nares), a little pet (only once found in Shakespeare). Cf. Massinger, The Maid of Honour, II, 2:

"Of a little thing, You are a pretty peat, indifferent fair too.

Also, the same author's The City Madam, II, 2: "You are pretty peats." Halliwell quotes England's Helicon (1614):

"And God send every petty peate, Heigh ho, the pretty peate, That feares to die of this conceit So kinde a friende to helpe at last."

V. also Scott, Heart of Midlothian, XVIII: "Ye are baith a pair o' the devil's peats, I trow."

"A pretty peat! it is best Put finger in the eye,—an she knew why."
T. of S., I, i, 78.

PECULIAR. (1) Private, personal, one's own.

> " Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty, But seeming so, for my peculiar end." Oth., I, i, 60; v. also Oth., III, iii, 79; IV, i, 62.

(2) Individual, particular. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, XII, 111:

"One peculiar nation to select

From all the rest."

"The single and peculiar life is bound.

With all the strength and armour of the mind, To keep itself from noyance.'

Ham., III, iii, 11.

PEDANT. Gr. $\pi \alpha \hat{i}s$ —a boy, connected with pedagogue.

(1) A pedagogue, a schoolmaster: Florio defines $_{
m the}$ Italian pedante as "a pedante or a schoolemaster.''

"Like a pedant that keeps a school i' the church." T. N., III, ii, 66; v. also T. of S., IV, ii, 63; L. L. L., III, i, 174.

(2) One who makes a pretence.

"But wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony." T. of S., III, i, 4; v. also T. of S., III, i, 46, 85.

PEDANTICAL. Using far-fetched words, awkwardly ostentatious of learning.

Temp., IV, 1, 64.

Note.—A writer in the Edinburgh Review (Cot. 1872, pp. 66). Observes the Aponic in Note.—A writer in the Landaugh Review (Oct. 1872, p. 363) observes that peony is the provincial name in Warwickshire for the "marsh marigold" which "in general growth and shape, especially in the early stage, when the full-formed bud is ripe for blowing," it closely resembles. This flower "haunts the watery margins as the constant associate with reeds and rushes, blooms in 'spongy April,' and in common with other water flowers is twined with sedge 'to make cold nymphs chaste crowns.'" He further says nymphs chaste crowns." He further says that Shakespeare writes the word as it was pronounced. Some editors explain "pioned and twilled" as "dug and ridged," and Steevens exemplifies from Spenser, who, he says, has pioning=digging. But this gives a somewhat prosaic look to the picture that Shakespeare wishes to present.

PIONER. O.F. peon; Sp. peon; Low Lat. pedo -a foot-soldier.

One who goes before to prepare the way and remove obstructions for an army. In old times soldiers were set to this work as a punishment for misbehaviour, hence, a degraded sol-dier, the vilest of the camp. Cf. Davies, TheArt of War (1619): "Such a one is to be dismissed with punishment, or to be made some abject pioner.'

"I had been happy, if the general camp, Pioners and all, had tasted her vile body, So I had nothing known.

Oth., III, iii, 346. Note.—The word is used in its modern sense in Hen. V-III, ii, 76.

A corruption of pick from O.F.

pique, picque.

A spot or mark on a playing-card, hence (in an adverbial sense), to small extent, to some gree. Cf. Massinger, Fatal Dowry, II, 2: "You think, because you served my lady's mother (you) are thirty-two years old, which is a pip out you know."

"Was it for a servant to use his master so; being, perhaps (for aught I see) two-and-thirty,—a pip out."

Note.—"An expression derived from the old game of Bone-ace or One-and-thirty; to be two-and-thirty, a pip out was an old cant phrase applied to a person who was intoxicated" (Halliwell).

I., Subs

a prissing-unite.

"He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs, under the duke's table; he had not been there (bless the mark) a pissing-while, but all the chamber smelt him."

T. G. V., IV, iv, 17.

Vb. To shoot with a pistol. PISTOL. Cf. Howell, Familiar Letters (1650): "Captain Remish, who was the main instrument for discovery of the myne, pistol'd himself in a desperate mood of discontent in his cabin, in the convertine."

" Pistol him, pistol him."

T. N., II, v, 33.

PITCH. A weakened form of pick.

I., subs. (1) fig., A point of elevation, height, degree.

"I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe." R. and J., I, iv, 21; v. also Rich. II-I, i, 109; J. C., I, i, 78; T. A., II, i, 14; T. N., I, i, 12.

- (2) fig., Significance, importance. "Enterprises of great pitch and moment With this regard their currents turn awry." Ham., III, i, 86.
- (3) fig., Loftiness, sublimity. "The pitch and height of all his thoughts."
 Rich. III-III, vii, 187.
- (4) State, condition pass, form, fashion. Cf. North, Plutarch: "Now Bacchus . . . brought himself to that pitch."

" All men's honours Lie in one lump before him, to be fashion'd Into what pitch he please." Hen. VIII-II, ii, 48.

(5) A technical term for the highest point to which a hawk or falcon reaches before stooping on her prey.

"Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch."

I Hen. VI-II, iv, II; v. also 2 Hen. VI-II, i, 6.

"Sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedges They pitched in the ground confusedly. I Hen. VI-I, i, 118.

(2) To surround with sharp stake firmly fixed in the ground. Note.-Before a battle it was customary for archers and other footmen to encompass themselves with sharp stakes firmly pitched, or stuck, in the ground, to prevent their being overpowered by the cavalry.

"The very parings of our nails Shall pitch a field when we are dead."

1 Hen. VI-III, i, 103.

(3) To set.

"They have pitched a toil."

L. L. L., IV, iii, 2. "Pitched a toil "=set a snare.

(4) To fix (as a value or price).

"Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high." V. and A., 551.

(5) To throw, to cast.

"They'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin-shows, pitch me i' the mire." Temp., II, ii, 5.

PITCH AND PAY. A proverbial expression, meaning pay down at once, cash Steevens quotes Middleton, down. Blurt Master Constable (1602), i, 2: "Will you pitch and pay, or will your worship run?"

"Let senses rule; the word is 'Pitch and Pay.'" Hen. V-II, iii, 41. Note.—As Nares observes, Farmer suggests that the expression originated from pitching (=setting out for sale) goods in amarket, and paying immediately for their standing.

PRAY FOR THE QUEEN. It was the custom in Shakespeare's time at the end of each play for one of the performers to offer a solemn prayer on the stage for the sovereign or other patron of the theatre. Steevens quotes the form of one of these prayers in Preston's Cambyses:

" As duty binds us, for our noble queene let us pray And for her honourable counsel, the truth that they may use,

To practice justice, and defend her grace eche day;
To maintaine God's word they may not refuse, To correct all those that would her grace and grace's laws abuse:

Beseeching God over us she may reign long,

Beseeching God over us she may reign long,
To be guided by trueth and defended from wrong.
Amen, q. Thomas Preston."

"My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night; and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen."

2 Hen. IV, Epil., 30. Note.—This is the only one of Shakespeare's plays where the practice is alluded to, but that might be owing to the loss of the epilogues, as in the older interludes, moralities, and plays it frequently occurs.

PRAY IN AID. "A term used in a court for calling in the support of another who has an interest in the cause in question" (Hanmer); to be ready to take suggestions. Cf. PRUNE (Stewed). v. Stewed Prunes.

PUBLICAN. A rascal or scoundrel; a term expressive of contempt.

> "How like a fawning publican he looks!" M. V., I, iii, 36.
> Note.—The epithet "fawning" would be inapplicable to the publicani or collectors of revenue in the Roman provinces, so much detested by the Jews in the time of Christ.

PUDDING. (1) An intestine.

"As sure as his guts were made of puddings."

M. W. W., II, i, 26.

(2) A carcass.
"He'll yield a crow a pudding one of these Hen. V-II, i, 83.

"Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks." Per., II, 1, 74.

PUDENCY. Modesty, shamefacedness. "A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on 't Might well have warm'd old Saturn."

Cym., II, v, 11.

PUGGING. Etymology doubtful. Thieving. Cf. "puggard" in Dekker's Roaring Girl:

" And know more laws Of cheaters, lifters, nips, foists, puggards, curbers, With all the devil's black guard, than is fit Should be discovered to a noble wit."
"The white sheet bleaching on the hedge Doth set my pugging tooth on edge."

W. T., IV, ii, 7.

PUISNY. Same word as puny: F. post puis-né-after-born. L. Petty, inferior, unskilful.

"As a puisny tilter, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose."

A. Y. L., III, iv, 37.

PUISSANCE. (1) Strength, might. "Not arriv'd to pith and puissance."
Hen. V., Prol., 21.

(2) An armed force (concrete). "Draw our puissance together.

K. J., III, i, 339. PUKE, 1. (For spuke or spewk an extension of spew); to vomit, to spew. "Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms."

A. Y. L., II, vii, 143.

PUKE, 2. Etymology doubtful. Of a dark colour, said to be between black and russet (Baret, Alvearie).

" Chiaro-Florio, World of Words: scuro -a darke puke colour."

" Puke-stocking, caddis garter."

Note.—Puke-stocking was one of the ridiculous epithets flung at Falstaff, dark-coloured stockings being considered reproachful. Cf. the term blackleg in modern times.

PULING. F. piauler-to cheep like a young bird; L. pipilo -a freq. of pipo -I chirp.

I., adj. Whining, whimpering. Cf. Milton, Tenure of Kings: "The unmasculine rhetoric of any puling priest or chaplain."

"A wretched puling fool." R. and J., III, v, 185.

II., subs. Whining, whimpering.

"Leave this faint puling." Cor., IV, ii, 52.

III., adv. In a whining manner. "Speak puling like a beggar at Hallowmas."

Speak puring line a beggat at Handwhas.

T. G. V., II, i, 22.

Note.—Tollet observes—" (On All-Hallows, Hallowmas, or All Saints' Day, November 1), the poor people in Staffordshire, and perhaps in other country places, go from parish to parish a-souling as they call it; that is begging and puling (= singing small) for soul-cakes, or any good thing to make them merry."

PULL. Subs. A mishap.

"Two pulls at once,—
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off."
2 Hen. VI-II, iii, 41.
Note.—Cf. the later and opposite use of the substantive with the meaning of advantage, e.g. "He has the pull of me."

PULLET-SPERM. Treadle, $_{
m the}$ albuminous cords which unite the yolk of the egg to the white (so called because formerly believed to be the sperm of the cock).

"I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage."
M. W. W., III, v, 27.

PULPIT. A stand from which disputants pronounced their dissertations, and recited their works: rostrum (therostra).

"Some to the common pulpits, and cry out Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!" J. C., III, i, 80.

PULSIDGE. The pulse (an intentional blunder put into the mouth of Mrs. Quickly, to mark her illiteracy).

"You are in an excellent temperality: your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart 2 Hen. IV .- II, iv, 19. would desire."

PUMP. F. pompe = pomp.

A light shoe or slipper, with a single unwelted sole, without a heel, a courtshoe ornamented with ribbons in the shape of flowers-so called, because worn for pomp or ornament by persons in full dress.

"Good strings to your beards, new ribbons to your pumps."

M. N. D., IV, ii, 32; v. also R. and J., II, iv, 56.

PUMPION. F. pompon; L. peponem acc. of pepo.

A pumpkin (the modern name is a corruption of the old one).

"We'll use this unwholesome humility, this gross watery pumpion."

M. W. W., III, iii, 33.

A.S. punian — to pound, to bruise: hence, to pun - to bruise words or beat them into new senses.

Vb. To pound, to bruise.

"He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.'

T. and C., II, i, 37. PUNISH BY THE HEELS. To imprison. Cf. "To lay by the heels" -the technical term for committing to prison.

"To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears."

2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 116.

Note.—Falstaff's reply suggests imprisonment for the meaning of this phrase; otherwise, as Knight suggests, there might be allusion to the baffing of a knight by hanging him or his likeness up head downwards.

PUNK. Etymology doubtful.

(1) A prostitute. Cf. Dekker, Knights' Conjuring: "Seated cheek by jowle with a punke."

"My lord she may be a punk."

M. M., V, i, 182. (2) Sometimes written for pink (q.v.), a vessel with a very narrow stern.

"This punk is one of Cupid's carriers."

M. W. W., II, ii, 120.

Note.—There is possibly here a play upon the word and an allusion to the meaning in (1).

PUNTO. It., Sp., L., punctum = a point. A thrust or pass in fencing. "To see thee pass thy punto."

M. W. W., II, iii, 23.

PUNTO REVERSO. A back-handed Cf. Lodge, Wit's Miserie: "His ungartered, his rapier punto reverso."

"Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay."

R. and J., II, iv, 24.

> " His pupilage man-entered thus." Cor., II, ii, 96; v. also 1 Hen. IV-II, iv, 89.

PURCHASE. I., vb. (1) To obtain deservedly.

> "And never gives to truth and virtue that Which sinfulness and merit purchaseth."
> M. A., III, i, 70. Cf. "true purchasing"
> (=honourable acquisition) in Cor., II, i, 132.

(2) To acquire by one's own act, to win. " For what in me was purchased, Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort."

2 Hen. IV-IV, v, 200; v. also Rich. II-I, iii, 282; Rich. III-II, i, 63; A. and C., I, iv, 14; A.Y. L., III, ii, 360; T. N. K., II, v, 26,

(3) To obtain, to acquire, to procure. Cf. Psalm (metrical) lxxxiv, 3:

"The swallow also for herself Hath purchased a nest."
"His silver hairs will purchase us a good opinion."
J. C., II, i, 145.

- (4) To acquire by giving an equivalent, to buy.
 - "That I have purchased at an infinite rate."

 M. W., II, ii, 184.
- (5) To expiate, to pay for, to redeem. "Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses." R. and I., III, i. 180. R. and J., III, i, 189.
- II., subs. (1) Acquisition.

"The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue." Oth., II, iii, 10; v. also K. J., III, i, 205.

(2) Profit, gain.

"The purchase is to make men glorious." Per., I, Prol., 9.

(3) The proceeds of robbery, pillage. Cf. Chaucer, Prologue, 256: "His purchas (-proceeds of begging) was well better than his rente. Cf. also the same author's Romaunt of the Rose, 6840: "Thy purchace is better than my rente."

"Thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man.'

I Hen. IV-II, i, 83.

(4) The proceeds of cheating.

"They will steal anything and call it purchase." Hen. V-III, ii, 39.

PURCHASE, After fourteen years'-fig., at an excessively high rate. In Shakespeare's time the current price of land in England was twelve years' purchase, i.e. the price paid for the fee simple was twelve times the annual rent. Fourteen years' purchase was considered a high price to give for land.

T. N., IV, i, 22.

PURGATION. (1) Exculpation, proof of innocence.

> " If their purgation did consist in words They are as innocent as grace itself. A. Y. L., I, iii, 50; v. also W. T., III, ii, 7; Ham., III, ii, 102.

(2) Trial.

To curl, to run in circles, to wind or eddy (as in a stream).

> " From his lips did fly Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky." R. of L., 1407.
> Note.—"Purling stream" is used with reference to motion and means dimpled or reddying; but Lord Bacon speaks of "purling sound," which would suggest a connexion with Sw. porla=to bubble as a stream.

PURLIEU. F. pur, aller; L. per, ambulatio.

Plu. Borders, outskirts, land lying adjacent to a forest; originally a technical term for the forest itself. Note.—Manwood, Treatise on the Forest Laws, C. 20: "Purlieu . . . is a certaine territorie of ground adjoyning unto the forest, meared and bounded with immoveable marks, meeres, and boundaries." Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, IV, 404:

"Then as a tiger, who by chance hath spied

In some purlieu two gentle fawns at play."
"Pray you, if you know,
Where in the purlieus of this forest stands A sheep-cote fenced about with olive trees?"

B., intrs. To intend, to have intention. to design.

"Yet did I purpose as they do entreat."
2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 282.

PURSUIVANT. A state messenger or herald, a forerunner, properly attendant on a herald.

"And these grey locks, the pursuivants of death.' I Hen. VI-II, v, 5; v. also 2 Hen. VI-I, iii, 32; Rich. III-III, ii, after 93.

PURSY. F. pousif, pousser-to push.

Puffy, shortwinded.

" Now breathless wrong Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease, And pursy insolence shall break his wind With fear and horrid flight.

T. of A., V, iv, 12.

(2) Puffed up with pride and prosperity, swollen with pampering. " In the fatness of these pursy times Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg."

Ham., III, iv, 151.

PUSH. I., subs. (1) Assault, attack. "Sudden push gives them the overthrow." J. C., V, ii, 5.

PUTTING ON. Urging, incitement.

"You ne'er had done 't . . . but by our putting on. Cor., II, iii, 260; v. also M. M., IV, ii, 111.

PUTTER ON. Instigator.

"They vent reproaches

Most bitterly on you, as putter on

Of these exactions."

Hen. VIII. Hen. VIII-I, ii, 24; v. also W. T., II, i, 141. PUTTER OUT. One who deposited money, when going abroad, on condition of receiving a larger sum on returning, the amount deposited being forfeited in the event of non-return. On dangerous expeditions and on hazardous foreign travel, the premium was sometimes as much as five pounds for each one deposited, that is, five hundred per cent. This kind of mixture of investment and insurance was common in the times of Elizabeth and James. Cf. Jonson, Every Man Out of his Humour, II, 3: " I do intend, this year of jubilee coming on, to travel; and because I will not altogether go upon expense, I am determined to put forth some five thousand pounds, to be paid me five for one, upon the return of my wife, myself, and my dog from the Turk's Court at Constantinople. If all, or either of us, miscarry in the journey, 'tis gone; if we be successful, why there will be five and twenty thousand pound to entertain time with."

" (Who would believe that) there were such men

Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find

Each putter-out of five for one will bring us Good warrant of." Temp., III, iii, 48.

JTTOCK. For pout-hawk or poot-hawk, M.E. pout, poult—pullet: F. pullet: PUTTOCK. hence-pullet hawk or chicken-hawk.

A kite, a glead, a buzzard, an inferior hawk, hence, sometimes used as a term of reproach for a base, contemptible person.

"Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest, But may imagine how the bird was dead Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak."

2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 191; v. also Cym., I, i, 140; T. and C., V, i, 58.

PUZZEL. Ital. puzzolente; F. pucelle - a maid.

A dirty slattern, a drab, a hussy, one who affects to represent pucelle or a real maid. Cf. Stubbes, Anatomy of Abuses: "No nor yet any droyle (—drudge) or puzzel in the county, but will carry a nosegay in her hand."

"Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish."

I Hen. VI-I, iv, 107.

PYRAMID (Pyramis). (1) An Egyptian monument consisting of a solid figure on a triangular square, or polygonal base with triangular sides meeting in a point. These monuments probably served as the burial places of kings who had caused them to be constructed.

"A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear Than Rhodope's of Memphis ever was."

I Hen. VI-I, vi, 21; v. also A. and C.,
II, vii, 18.

Note.—The form "pyramides" is found in A. and C., V, ii, 61. Drayton in his Polyolion makes byramides both singular and plural. Marlowe makes it plural, v. Tamburlaine: "Like to the shadows of pyramides"; also, Dr. Faustus: "Besides the gates and high pyramides." "Pyramises" is also found as a plural, v. A. and C., II, viii, 34. Nares suggests that this is probably intended as a touch of drunken enunciation on the part of Lepidus. But this explanation seems unnecessary when it is considered that the singular is used as in I Hen. VI, above.

(2) A pillar.

"And each, within this month, accompanied With three fair knights, appear again in this place.

place,
In which I'll plant a pyramid."
T. N. K., III, vi, 295; v. also T. N. K.,
V, iii, 80.

With orange-tawny bill,
The throstle with his note so true,
The wren with little quill."

M. N. D., III, i, 131.

(5) Phrase: "In the quill": various interpretations of this expression have been given :--

(i) In writing; Cf. "to be under the quill "-to be written about, as in Hacket, Life of Williams, II, 28: "The subject now under the quill is the Bishop of Lincoln."

(ii) All together, in a body, (from F. accueil), quill (-a pleat or gather) being from the same root. A Devonshire Damsel's Frolic, a ballad in the Roxburghe collection, is quoted in support, where a bevy of girls are described as swimming together:

"Thus those females were all in a quill
And following on their pastime still."

"My Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill."

2 Hen. VI-I, iii, 3.

QUILLET. Probably from quidlibet what do you choose, although quodlibet was the invariable term of the schools; quibblet has been suggested, a diminutive of quibble.

A sly trick in argument, a frivolous distinction, a quirk, a quibble, a subtlety, chicanery.

"Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks?"

Ham., V, 1, 94; v. also I Hen. VI-II, iv, 17; 2 Hen. VI-III, i, 26; 70th., III, 1, 20; T. of A., IV, iii, 170; L. L. L., IV, iii iii, 283.

QUINTAIN. F. quintaine; Low Lat. quintana; L. quintana - a street in a camp so intersecting the tents of the two legions as to separate the fifth maniple from the sixth, and the fifth turma from the sixth, hence, a public place of exercise.

A figure or object to be tilted at, a favourite English sport in the middle ages. The quintain had various forms. According to Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, Book III, chap. i: it "was nothing more than the trunk of a tree or post set up for the practice of tyros in chivalry. Afterwards a staff or spear was fixed in the earth, and a shield, being hung upon it, was the mark to strike at: the dexterity of the performer consisted in smiting the shield in such a manner as to break the ligatures and bear it to the ground. In process of time this diversion was improved, and instead of the staff and the shield, the resemblance of a human figure carved in wood was introduced. To render the appearance of this figure more formidable, it was generally made in the likeness of a Turk or a Saracen armed at all points, bearing a shield upon his left arm, and brandishing a club or sabre with his right." construction may have been more common. It consisted of an upright post, on the top of which a cross post turned upon a pivot; at one end of the cross post was a broad board and at the other a heavy sand-bag; the play was to ride against the broad end with a lance, and pass by before the sand-bag, coming round, should strike the tilter. And again, Chaucer, in Prologue to Manciple's Tale has "joust atte fan," which would suggest another construc-In all cases the object seems to have been to test the accuracy of the rider and the agility of the horse. Cf. Ben Jonson, Love's Welcome at Welbeck:

"At quintain he Hath challenged either wide countie."
"My better parts
Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up Is but a quintain." A. Y. L., I, ii, 220.

QUINTESSENCE. The fifth, last, highest essence, called also by the mediaeval philosophers the spirit or soul of the world, the best and purest part of a thing. Cf. P. Holland, Plutarch: "Aristoteles hath put down ... for elements, foure; and for a fifth, quintessence, the heavenly body which is immutable." Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, III, 716:

" Earth, Flood, Air, Fire; And this ethereal quintessence of Heaven Flew upward" (i.e. Light, a fifth essence and higher than earth, water, air or fire).
"Teaching all that read to know

The quintessence of every sprite Heaven would in little show."

A. Y. L., III, ii, 118; v. also Ham., II, ii, 297. QUIP. Wel. chwip -a quick flirt, or turn: Gael. cuip -to whip. A sharp stroke of wit, a sarcastic saying. Cf. Milton, L'Allegro, 27: "Quips, and cranks, and wanton wiles."

"And notwithstanding all her sudden quips, The least whereof would quell a lover's hope, Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,

The more it grows, and fawneth on her still."

T. G. V., IV. ii, 12; v. also M. A., II, iii,
218; A. Y. L., V, iv, 76.

QUIRE. L. chorus = band of singers; Gr. $\chi \acute{o} \rho os$ —a dance in a ring.

I., subs. (1) A company, an assembly. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, VI, viii, 427:

To roost, to perch, to cower, to squat; Collier quotes The Fardle of Fashions (1555): "After a mooste comely sorte she rucketh downe upon the grounde, not muche unlike the sitting of our gentlewomen oftentimes here in England." Cf. also Golding, Ovid, Metamorphosis:

"On the house did rucke A cursed owle, the messenger of ill successe and lucke."
"The raven rook'd her on the chimney-top."

3 Hen. VI-V, vi, 47.

ROOKY. Abounding in rooks. "Light thickens and the crow Makes wing to the rooky wood." Mac., III, ii, 51.

ROOT, 1. A.S. wyrt, Eng. wort. I., subs. (1) The radix or descending axis of a plant.

"Under an oak whose antique root peeps out Upon the brook."

A. Y. L., II, i, 31.

(2) A plant whose root is esculent. " Have we eaten on the insane root That takes the reason prisoner?

Mac., I, iii, 84. (3) Anything resembling a root in position or function. " Each false

Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue, Consuming it with speaking!"

T. of A., V, i, 126.

(4) A progenitor. "The root and father Of many kings." Mac., III, i, 5. (5) Basis, foundation.

" Remove The root of his foundation, which is rotten."
W. T., II, iii, 89.

(6) Fig. Tenacity. "This avarice Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root." Mac., IV, iii, 85.

II., vb. A., trs. To fix by the root. "The fat weed That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf." Ham., I, v, 33.

ROPERY. Roguery, deserving a rope. Cf. The Three Ladies of London (1584): "Thou art very pleasant and full of thy roperye." Also Beaumont and Fletcher, Chances, III, 1: "You ll leave this ropery,

When you come to my years.

What saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?" R. and J., II, iv, 116.

ROPES IN SUCH A SCARRE,-Men make: Note.—Scar, scaur, scarre, skerre, scuir - a precipitous cliff; e.g. The Scuir of Eigg is a steep, columnar rock in the island of that name. The word may hence, figuratively, be used for a difficulty to be overcome as Knight suggests, and ropes would be regarded as the means of overcoming it. Many interpretations have been suggested to this dark passage which, if not corrupt, is perplexing.

A. W., IV, ii, 38.

ROPE-TRICK. A rogue's trick, a trick deserving the halter.

"An he begin once, he'll rail in his ropetricks. T. of S., I, ii, 1.08.
Note.—It is thought by some critics that Grumio either confounds rope-tricks with rhetoric or plays on the semblance of the words (Dyce).

ROSE. Vb. To make of a rose colour, to redden.

"A crimson river of warm blood, Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind, Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips."

T. A., II, iv, 24; v. also Hen. V-V, ii, 323.

ROTE. (I) "F. route -a road, beaten track. Hence by rote-along a beaten track, or with constant repetition" (Skeat); (2) "L. rota -a wheel. To con by rote is to commit to memory by an operation of the mind similar to the turning of a wheel or by frequent repetition ' (Craik, English of Shakespeare).

I., subs. Memory resulting repetition without intelligence.

> "All his faults observed, Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,

To cast into my teeth."

J. C., IV, iii, 97; v. also Hen. V-III, vi, 69.
Note.—"To get by heart" and "to get by rote" now-a-days both refer to the same parrot-like repetition of words. Formerly the two expressions were contrasted. Dekker has:

"Th' ast found A master who more villainy has by heart Than thou by rote."

vb. Trs. To learn by unintelligent repetition. Cf. Drayton, Muse's Elysium (1630):

" And if by chance a tune you rote,

Twill foot it finely to your note."

"Words that are but roted in Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables—

Of no allowance to your bosom's truth." Cor., III, ii, 55.

W. T., II, i, 16.

ROUND (Roun), 2. A.S. runian —to whisper (d is excrescent).

Rún-a rune, a secret colloquy, a whisper. "This word Run signified mystery or secret; and a verb of this root was in use down to a comparatively recent date in English literature as an equivalent for the verb to whisper. . . . In Chaucer's Friar's Tale, 7132, the Sompnour is described as drawing near to his travelling companion, 'Ful prively and rounded in his ere,' i.e. quite confidentially and whispered in his ear. . . . It was used also of any kind of discourse, but mostly of private or privileged communication in council or conference. . . This rown became rownd and round, on the principle of N attracting a D to follow it. As in the Fairy Queene, III, x, 30: "And in his eare him rownded close behinde' "(Earle, The Philology of the English Tongue, §§ 93, 94). Cf. also, Sempill, Ballads:

"He had a man, That with his maister roundit than."

To whisper.

"France, whose armour conscience buckled on, Whom zeal and charity brought to the field As God's own soldier, rounded in the ear With that same purpose-changer."

K. J., II, i, 566; v. also W. T., I, ii, 217; P. P., IX, 51.

"Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight." 1 Hen. VI-II, iii, 7.

RUMP-FED. (1) Fed on rumps or scrapsthe perquisites of the kitchen (Steevens); (2) fat-rumped (Nares); (3) fed on the best joints, pampered (Clark and best joints, Wright).

''Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fed ronyon cries.' Mac., I, iii, 6.

RUNAGATE. L. renego - I deny again, I abjure my religion, hence, renegade. Skeat shows that the form is due to a confusion between run and gate (a way), the M.E. renegat being popularly supposed to stand for renne a gate, i.e. to run on the way.

A vagabond, a scoundrel, primarily, an apostate, a deserter.

"I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure, More noble than that runagate to your bed."

Cym., I, vi, 130; v. also Rich. III-IV, iv,
479; R. and J., III, v, 89.

RUNAWAY. Run + away; away -(1) off, (2) incessantly, e.g. to talk away to talk incessantly.

(1) A fugitive.

" For the close night doth play the runaway." M. V., II, vi, 47.

(2) One incessantly running a Paul Pry, a prying busybody. "Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night. That runaways' eyes may wink."
R. and J., III, ii, 6; v. also Rich. III-V, iii, 315.

A. W., IV, iii, 197.

F. sec -dry; Sp. seco; L. siccus -SACK.

dry.

A Spanish wine generally of a dry character, the generic name for Spanish and Canary wines. It is possibly the same as sherry. Falstaff expressly calls it Sherris sach (2 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 88), or sack from Xeres (Sherry). Ben Jonson makes sack synonymous with sherry, v. New Inn, I, 2:

" 'Sack says my bush:

Be merry and drink Sherry,' that's my poesie." One half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack." I Hen. IV-II, Iv, 497.

(I) The military oath SACRAMENT. taken by every Roman soldier, pledging him to obey his commander, and not to desert his standard: hence, an oath or ceremony involving an obligation.

"Do: I'll take the sacrament on't how and bo; I it take the sacrament on t how and which way you will."

A. W., IV, iii, 126; v. also Rich. II-IV, i, 326; K. J., V, ii, 6.

(2) The Eucharist.

"Ere I last received the Sacrament I did confess it." Rich. II-I, i, Rich. II-I, i, 139.

"Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her." T. of S., I, i, 172.

(3) Devoted or dedicated in a bad sense, hence, accursed, baleful, destructive (a Latinism). "Come, come, our Empress, with her sacred wit

To villany and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend."

T. A., II, i, 120.

(4) Illustrious, honoured, great, august, noble. "Justice, mo abbess!" most sacred duke, against the

C. E., V, i, 133; v. also W. T., I, ii, 76; K. J., III, i, 148; Sonnet VII, 4.

Godlike, superhuman, extraordinary, excellent-a Grecism for giving uncle the title of $\theta \epsilon \hat{\imath}$ os (patruus avunculus — $\hat{o} \pi \rho \hat{o}$ s $\pi \alpha \tau \rho \hat{o}$ s $\theta \epsilon \hat{\imath}$ os), hence, also applied to aunt.

> " My sacred aunt." T. and C., IV, v, 134.

ACRIFICIAL. Obsequious, fawning (as a sycophant worshipping his patron). SACRIFICIAL. "All those which were his fellows but of late, Some better than his value, on the moment Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tend-Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear."

T. of A., I, i, 83.

SACRING BELL. The little bell rung at mass to give notice that the elements are consecrated and that the Host is approaching when carried in procession.

"I'll startle you Worse than the sacring bell." Hen. VIII-III, ii, 350.

SAD. (1) Grave, weighty.

ance,

"Things now That bear a weighty and a serious brow. Sud, high, and working, full of state and woe, Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow, We now present."

Hen. VIII, Prol., 3.

(2) Sedate, serious, sober (as often in Shakespeare). Cf. Bacon, Essays: Of Fame: "To speak now in a sad and serious manner."

"Speak you this with a sad brow?" Jean you tills with a saw blow f M.A., I, i, 162; v. also M.A., I, iii, 48; II, i, 307; T. N., III, iv, 5; M. N. D., IV, i, 92; M. V., II, ii, 205; T. G. V., I, iii, r; J. C., I, ii, 214; 2 Hen. IV-V, i, 73; R. of L., 277.

(3) Gloomy, sombre, dull, melancholy. "When I was in France, Young gentlemen would be as sad as night Only for wantonness."

K. J., IV. i.

K. J., IV, i, 15. Only for wantonness." R. J., IV, I, 15.
Note.—Melancholy seems to have been one of the affectations of the court about Shakespeare's time. Cf. Lyly, Midas (1592):
"Melancholy! is melancholy a word for a barber's mouth? Thou shouldst say heavy, dull, and doltish; melancholy is the crest of courtiers, and now every base companion . . . says he is melancholy."

(4) Dejected, downcast, exhibiting the external appearance of grief.

"The death of a dear friend would go near to make a man look sad." M. N. D., V, i, 287.

SAD-EYED. Sober-looking, having grave countenance.

"Who, busied in his majesty, surveys

The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum, Delivering o'er to executors pale The lazy yawning drone." Hen. V-I, ii, 202.

SADLY. (1) Seriously, soberly.

"The conference was sadly borne."
M. A., II, iii, 202. (2) Wearily.

"And with his spirit sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the world."

2 Hen. IV-V, ii, 125.

(3) Sorrowfully. "Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?" K. J., III, i, 20. SADNESS. (1) Seriousness, earnestness.

"This merry inclination Accords not with the sadness of my suit." 3 Hen. VI-III, ii, 77; v. also R. and J., I, i, 191; M. W. W., III, v, 107; A. W., IV, iii, 184; T. of S., V, ii, 63; V. and A., 807.

(2) A state of being melancholy, dejection of mind.

"When he was here He did incline to sadness." Cym., I, vi, 61.

(3) Pain, vexation, annoyance. "Which are oft the sadness of parting."
Cym., V, iv, 159.

(4) Adversity, wrong, grievance.

" (He) charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well; and there begins my sadness."

A. Y. L., I, i, 4.

"That which most with you should safe my going, Is Fulvia's death." A. and C., I, iii, 55.

(2) To give safe conduct to.

"Best you saf'd the bringer Out of the host." A. and C., IV A. and C., IV, vi, 26.

SAFEGUARD. Subs. (1) Defence, protection.

" If you do fight in safeguard of your wives, Your wives shall welcome home the con-querors."

Rich. III-V, iii, 260; v. also 3 Hen. VI-II, ii, 18.

(2) Convoy, safe-conduct.

"On safeguard he came to me." Cor., III, i, 9.

SAFETY. (1) Quality of being free from danger, security.

"I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot."

T. N., IV, ii, 67.

(2) Safe custody, safe keeping. "Deliver him to safety." K. J., IV, ii, 158.

(3) A sense of safety. "Be wary then; best safety lies in fear."

Ham., I, iii, 43.

(4) Affording protection.

"Thou dost sit Like a rich armour worn in heat of day That scalds with safety." 2 Hen. IV-IV, v, 31.

(5) Harmlessness.

"I speak of peace, while covert enmity Under the smile of safety wounds the world." 2 Hen. IV-Ind., 10.

(6) Well-being, success.

"My life I never held but as a pawn To wage against thy enemies; nor fear to lose it, Thy safety being the motive."

K. L., I, i, 147; v. also Rich. II-I, i, 32.

Sw. saka — to settle, to sink down;

SAG. Ger. sacken-to sink. Probably an unnasalized form of sink.

To droop, to flag, to yield under Cf. Fuller, Holy War: difficulties. "States, though bound with the straitest laws, often sagge aside into schisms and factions."

"The mind I swear by, and the heart I bear, Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear." Mac., V, iii, 10.
Note.—When wood sags it yields to pressure.

L. sagittarius—an archer. SAGITTARY.

(1) A centaur represented in classical mythology as coming to the aid of the Trojans. Caxton describes the monster as "a mervayllouse beste that was called sagittayre, that behynde the myddes was an horse, and to fore, a man; this beste was heery like an horse, and had his eyen rede as a cole, and shotte well with a bowe: this beste made the Grekes sore aferde, and slewe many of them with his bowe." Guido de Colonna, writer of fables, says, "King Epistrophus brings from the land beyond the Amazons, a thousand knights; among whom is a terrible archer, half man and half beast, who neighs like a horse, whose eyes sparkle like fire, and strike dead like lightning."

"The dreadful sagittary Appals our numbers." T. and C., V, v, 15.

(2) The residence at Venice of the naval and military commanders, so called from the figure of an archer over the gate.

"That you shall surely find him, Lead to the sagittary the raised search."

Oth., I, i, 146. Note.—It is argued that the Sagittary in the above passage could not have been the Arsenal but probably an inn in Venice. Othello says to Iago, "Conduct them; you best know the place" (I, iii, 121), and, the Arsenal being by far the most prominent building in Venice no one in the employment of the Government would require the help of Iago to find the place. It has to be remembered, however, that Othello is not in his usual quarters. V, I, ii, 44.

"You have been hotly call for; When being not at very ledging to be found."

When, being not at your lodgings to be found, The senate hath sent about three several quests To search you out."

(1) The canvas sheet spread to catch the wind and carry the vessel on.

"(They) bore us some leagues to sea, where they prepar'd
A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast." Temp., I, ii, 147.

(2) A ship (by metonymy).

"I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' the haven

And question'dst every sail."

Cym., I, iii, 2.

(3) A voyage by sea, a sailing.

"Here is my butt, And very sea-mark of my utmost sail." Oth., V, ii, 267.

(4) Fleet, squadron.

"We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore, A portly sail of ships make hitherward."

Per., I, iv, 61.

SAIN. Past participle of say = said.

"It is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain Some obscure precedence that hath before been sain." L. L. L., III, i, 77. Note.—The verb is found in Spenser, but Armado here uses it affectedly.

L. sal -salt; F. salade -SALAD-DAYS. a salad of herbs, a dish of certain vegetables prepared and served so as to be eaten raw.

Unripe days, days of inexperience.

" My salad-days When I was green in judgment.

"The coulter rests,
That should deracinate such savagery."

Hen. V-V, ii, 47.

(2) Atrocity, savage conduct, barbarity.
 "This is bloodiest shame,
 The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke,
 That ever wall-eyed wrath or staring rage
 Presented to the tears of soft remorse."
 K. J., IV, iii, 48.

SAVE THE MARK (Bless the mark). An ejaculation or parenthetical expression indicative of irony, scorn, deprecation, or surprise. The expression is of uncertain origin, but it might have some reference to birth blemishes or tokens (which were considered ominous), and the influence of the evil eye.

"I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,—God save the mark!—here on his manly breast."

R. and J., III, ii, 44; v. also 1 Hen. IV-I, iii, 56; Oth., I, i, 33; M. V., II, ii, 25; T. G. V., IV, iv, 21.

Note.—V. note to 'S death.

SCAFFOLD. (1) A temporary platform or stage.

"But pardon, gentles all,
The flat unraised spirits that have dared
On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth
So great an object." Hen. V-1, Prol., 10.

(2) A structure erected for the execution of criminals.

"Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads." Rich. III-IV, iv, 243.

SCAFFOLDAGE. The floor of the stage. "Whose conceit Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich To hear the wooden dialogue and sound 'Twixthis stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage." T. and C., I, iii, 156.

SCALD, 1. Icel. skali—a bare head; Sw. skala-to peel; skal-a husk or scale. Eng. scald (subs.) -scall scurf on the head.

Adj. Scabby, scurvy, mean, paltry, contemptible. Cf. Marlowe, I Tamburlaine, II, 2:

"Would it not grieve a king to have his diadem Sought for by such scald knaves as love him not?"

Cf. also Scott, Woodstock, XXVII: "I am tired of the scald hat . . . with which my friend has bedizzened me."

"Saucy lictors Will catch at us, like strumpets, and scald Ballad us out o' tune."

rhymers

" And if now

"And if now,
At this downright game, I may but hold your cards,
I'll not pull down the side."

"Hardly shall I carry out my side
Her husband being alive." K. L., V, i, 56.
Note.—To set up a side was to become partners in a game; to pull or pluck down a side was to occasion its loss by ignorance or treachery; and to carry out a side was to carry out the game with success.

SIDES O' THE WORLD. (1) Immensity. " Caesar's ambition,

Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch

SNEAK-CUP. One who shirks his fair share of the liquor drunk at a festive gathering, a mean fellow (opposed to a boon companion).

"The prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup."

I Hen. IV-III, iii, 83.

SNEAP. Associated with snib and snub. O.N. snaypa = to disgrace (Vigfusson). I., vb. (1) To snub, hence, to nip, to pinch, to bite. Cf. Mrs. Hutchinson, Life of Colonel Hutchinson (1659): "Made the poor man retire sneaped to his colonel." "That may blow

No sneaping winds at home, to make us say, This is put forth too truly."

W. T., I, ii, 15; v. also L. L. L., I, i, 100.

(2) To chill, to benumb, to starve. "Like little frosts that sometimes threat the spring, To add a more rejoicing to the prime,

And give the sneaped birds more cause to sing."

R. of L., 333.

II., subs. A reprimand, a snub, a rebuke.

"My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply." 2 Hen. IV-II, i, 122.

Probably a contraction for SNECK-UP. "his neck up" (Nares). A contemptuous expression of dismissal, equivalent to begone, away with you, go hang, or go and be hanged. Cf. Chapman, II, 4: "That's true, sir, but for a paltry disguise, being a magnifico, she shall go snicke-up." Cf. also Beaumont and Fletcher, Knight of the Burning Pestle, II, 2: "No, Michael, let thy father go snick up," and III, 2: "Give him money, George, and let him go snick up." Taylor, In Praise of Hempseed, illustrates the meaning of the former passage from Beaumont and Fletcher as follows:

"To end this matter, thus much I assure you, A Tiburne Hempen-candell well will cure you. It can cure Traytors, but I hold it fit
T' apply 't ere they the treason doe commit;
Wherefore in Sparta it ycleped was,
Snick up, which is in English Gallow-grasse."

From this there is some justification in the notion that the word is almost identical with "go hang."

"We did keep time, sir, in our catches, Sneck-up." T. N., II, iii, 86.

SNIPE. A blockhead, a fool, a simpleton. "I mine own gained knowledge should profane

If I would time expend with such a snipe." Oth., I, iii, 376. SNIPT-TAFFETA. Wearing snippings of taffeta.

"Your son was misled with a snipt-taffeta fellow." A. W., IV, v. 2.
Note.—Clarke observes that it is a fellow dressed in "slashed silk," alluding to "the 'scarfs' and fluttering ribbons that Parolles was which have been several times referred wears, which have been several times referred to in the course of the play."

SNORTING. Present part.

(1) Forcing the air violently through the nose so as to make a loud, rough voice. "Fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse." I Hen. IV-II, iv, 484.

(2) Snoring.

"Awake the snorting citizens with the bell."

Oth., I, i, 87. SNUFF, 1. A variant of sniff.

C. E., III, i, 89; v. also Ham., III, iv, 182. SOBER-BLOODED. Cool-blooded, from passion, considerate.

'This same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me! nor man cannot make him laugh." 2 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 82.

SOD. Past participle of seethe, of which it should more correctly be the preterite tense. Cf. Genesis xxv. 29: "And Jacob sod pottage."

(1) To boil.

" Women That have sod their infants in-and after eat them-

The brine they wept at killing 'em."

T. N. K., I, iii, 21.

Note.—"Twice-sod simplicity" (L. L. L., IV, ii, 21)=twice-boiled down, hence, concentrated.

(2) To bathe, to steep.

"Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw.' R. of L., 1592.

(2) Delicate, fine.

"Thou dost fear the soft and tender fork Of a poor worm."

M. M., III, i, 16.

(3) Frail.

"Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth.

Unapt to toil and trouble?" T. of S., V, ii, 165.

(4) Facile, impressible.

"The wise and fool, the artist and unread, The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin." T. and C., I, iii, 25.

(5) Refined, well-bred, gentle.

"Full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing. Ham., V, ii, 104; v. also T. of S., V, ii, 167. (6) Sweet, dulcet, melodious, soothing. "Her voice was ever soft, Gentle and low." K. L., V, iii, 271.

(7) Quiet, tranquil, untroubled. "Soft stillness and the night Become the touches of sweet harmony."

M. V., V, i, 56.

(8) Pliant, readily yielding. "As sweet as balm, as soft as air." A. and C., V, ii, 310.

II., interj. Hold! stop! "Soft you, let me be."

(3) To cheer.

"Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease." 2 Hen. VI-II, iii, 21.

SOLD HIM A BARGAIN. Knight observes: "This comedy (L. L. L.,) is running over with allusions to country sports—one of the many proofs that, in its original shape, it may be assigned to the author's greenest years. The sport which so delights Costard, about the fox, the ape, and the humble-bee, has been explained by Capell, whose lumbering and obscure comments upon Shakespeare have been pillaged and sneered at by other commentators. In this instance they take no notice of him. It seems, according to Capell, that "selling a bargain" consisted in drawing a person in, by some stratagem, to proclaim himself fool, by his own lips; and thus, when Moth makes his master repeat the l'envoy, ending in the goose, he proclaims himself a goose, according to the rustic wit, which Costard calls "selling a bargain well."

"The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat."

L. L. L., III, i, 95.

SOLDIERESS. A female soldier. "Soldieress,

That equally canst poise sternness with pity."

T. N. K., I, i, 85.

SOW'D COCKLE REAPED NO CORN-A proverbial expression equivalent to "As you sow, you must reap." Warburton explains it "beginning with perjury they can expect to reap nothing but falsehood."

L. L. L., IV, iii, 378.

SOWL. Vb. Etymology doubtful. connected with subs. sow, l cannot be well explained. Cf. Prov. Ger. zaneln -to tug, to drag.

To pull by the ears (as dogs pull Cf. Heywood, Love's Mistress, swine). IV, I: "Venus will sowle me by the ears for this." The word is found in various English dialects, and is used as late as 1793 in an Edinburgh publication, Carlop Green or Equality Realized: "Clishmaclavers, bites, and taunts, Till they each other sowl."

Note.—In Suffolk "Wool 'a sowle a hog?'' is a frequent enquiry into the qualifications of a dog (English Dialect Dictionary).

"He'll go, he says, and sowl the porter of Rome gates by the ears." Cor., IV, v, 197.

SOYLED (Soiled). F. souler - to glut, to cloy, to fill, to satiate.

Pampered, high-fed (applied to a horse).

"The fitchew, nor the soyled horse, goes to',

With a more riotous appetite.

Note,—To soil=to feed, as cattle or horses, in the stalls or stables, with fresh grass daily mowed, instead of putting out to pasture—which mode of feeding tends to keep the howels lay, hence to sure to sure. keep the bowels lax; hence, to purge by feeding upon green food.

> "What wicked and dissembling glass of mine Made me compare with Hermia's sphery eyne?" M. N. D., II, ii, 99.

SPIAL. Originally espial as used by Chaucer. Shakespeare himself also uses the longer form.

A scout, a spy. Cf. Fairfax, Tasso,

I, 67

"For he by faithful spial was assured, That Egypt's king was forward on his way."

Also, Marlowe, 1 Tamburlaine, II, 2:

"Caesar (as our spials say, And as we know) remains with Tamburlaine."
"The prince's spials have informed me How the English, in the suburbs close intrench'd, Went, through a secret grate of iron bars In yonder town, to overpeer the city."

I Hen. VI-I, iv, 8.

SPICE. I., subs. (1) A sample, a tincture, a taste.

> "But one of these (As he hath spices of them all, not all, For I dare so far free him) made him fear'd, So hated and so banish'd."

Cor., IV, vii, 46; v. also W. T., III, ii, 185; Hen. VIII-II, iii, 26.

(2) A condiment, a seasoning, a relish, hence, anything that gives liking. not . . . gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?" T. and C., I, il, 242.

II., vb. To impregnate with a spicy odour (hence, adj., scented with spices).

"And, in the spiced Indian air, by night, Full often hath she gossip'd by my side."

M. N. D., II, i, 124.

SPILL. For spild, from A.S. spildan - to destroy; spild -destruction, properly a cleaving; Ger. spalten - to cleave; Icel. spilda - a slice. Cf. Hall, Satires, IV, iii, 15:

"What to reserve their relicks many yeares, Their silver spurs or spuls of broken speares."

Note.—A spill is a thin splinter of wood used in kindling fires.

Cf. Scott, Lady of the (1) To destroy. Lake, Canto 5:

With drunken spilth of wine."
T. of A., II, ii, 177.

SPINSTER. Spin + A.S. fem. suff. -estre, -ster.

A male spinner (properly a woman who spins).

"Upon these taxations
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers."
Hen. VIII-I, ii, 33.

SPIRIT. (1) Breath, vital power.
"Now my spirit is going; I can no more."
A. and C., IV, xv, 58.

(2) The intelligent, immaterial part of man.

"Spirits are not finely touched But to fine issues." M. M., I, i, 35.

(3) A disembodied soul.

"This sensible warm motion to become A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit To bathe in fiery floods."

M. M., III, i, 120.

(4) A spectre, a ghost, an apparition.

"I am thy father's spirit,

Doomed for a certain term to walk the night."

Ham., I, v, 9.

(5) A demon.
"What spirit, what devil, suggests this imagination?" M.W.W., III, iii, 188.

(6) A person. Cf. I Peter, iii, 19:

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear."
Mac., I, v, 22.

(11) Manliness.

"O, I could weep My spirit from mine eyes." J.C., IV, iii,99.

(12) Disposition, temper.

"The man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit."

M. A., II, iii, 165.

(13) That which pervades and tempers the whole nature of a thing, essence, actuating principle.

"Do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness."
Sonnet LVI, 8.

(14) Endowment, gift, faculty, power. "The spirit of deep prophecy she hath."

1 Hen. VI-1, ii, 55.

(15) Mental impression, speculation, surmise.

"Your spirit is too true, your fears uncertain."
2 Hen. IV-I, i, 92.

SPIRIT OF SENSE. (1) Utmost refinement of sensation.

"O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,

In whose comparison all whites are ink, Writing their own reproach, to whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh and spirit of sense

Hard as the palm of ploughman."

T. and C., I, i, 56.

(2) Special or typical organ of sensation.

"Nor doth the eye itself,

That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself, Not going from itself."

T. and C., III, iii, 106.

"We of the spiritually Will raise your highness such a mighty sum As never did the clergy at one time Bring in to any of your ancestors."

Hen. V-1, ii, 132.

SPITAL. A hospital. Cf. Spitalfields in London.

"To the spital go, And from the powdering tub of intamy Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind."
Hen. V-II, i, 7i; v. also Hen. V-V, i, 73.
Note.—Gifford in his edition of Massinger makes a distinction between spital and spittle: "Our old writers carefully distinguish between the two words: with them a hospital or spital signified a charitable institution for the advantage of the poor, infirm, and aged persons, an almshouse, in short; while spittles were mere lazar-houses, receptacles for wretches in the leprosy, and other loathsome diseases, the consequences of debauchery and vice." Beaumont and Fletcher also make the distinction, v. Nice Valour, IV, 1: "The very vomit, Sirs, of hospitals, Bridewells, and spittle-houses."

SPITAL-HOUSE. A hospital, a lazarhouse. Cf. Promptorium Parvulorum sive Clericorum (1440): leprosorium=spytylle howse. (v. Spital—Note.)

"She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores sores

Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices
To the April day again."

T. of A., IV, iii, 39.
SPITE. (1) Malice.

"The more my wrong, the more his spite appears."
T. of S., IV, iii, 2; v. also R. and J., I, v, 60.

(2) Vexation, mortification.

"This is the deadly spite that angers me; My wife can speak no English, I no French."
I Hen. IV-III, i, 190; V. also R. and J.,
II, i, 25; C. E., II, ii, 188; IV, ii, 8.

(3) Chagrin, disappointment.

"The time is out of joint—O cursed spite!

That ever I was born to set it right."

Ham., I, v, 189.

(4) A manifestation of ill-will.

"I may conquer fortune's spite By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me." 3 Hen. VI-IV, vi, 19.

(5) Defiance.

"Old Montague is come, And flourishes his blade in spite of me."
R. and J., I, i, 70.

SPIT WHITE. A puzzling expression. Nares observes on the quotation from Shakespeare: "May I never again have wine enough to produce this effect; or rather, perhaps, may I never have a debauch overnight, to make me thirsty in the morning. . . . Spungius says, in Massinger, The Virgin Martyr III, 3: 'Had I been a pagan still, I should not have spit white for want of drink,' that is for want of more drink to remedy the effect of what he had taken before. It was noticed also as a consequence of habitual intemperance. The unlucky pages in Lyly's Mother Bombie say that their masters had sodden their livers in sack for forty years, and, 'That makes them spit white breath, as they do,' Act III, Sc. i." Furnivall quotes Batman uppon Bartholome: "If the spettle be white viscus, the sicknesse cometh of fleame; if black, of melancholy. . . . The white spettle not knottie, signifieth health." This is perhaps the best explanation of the expression in the passage quoted.

"If it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but a bottle, I would I might never spit white again." 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 198.

SPLAY. v. Spay.

SPLEEN. (1) Anger, malice, rage, passion.

"Ladies' faces and fierce dragons' spleens."

K. J., II, i, 68.

(3) Ardour, fire, impetuosity.

" A brook where Adon used to cool his spleen." P. P., II, 6; v. also 1 Hen. VI-IV, vi, 13; 3 Hen. VI-II, i, 124.

(4) A fit of passion. "Hair-brain'd Hotspur, governed by a spleen." I Hen. IV-V, ii, 19.

(5) Tumultuous speed, violent haste. "Brief as the lightning in the collied night, That in a spleen unfolds both heav'n and earth."

M. N. D., I, i, 147; v. also K. J., II, i, 448. Note.—Shakespeare very frequently uses the word in the sense of anger, ardour, passion, or anything that produces hasty movement, and, hence, hasty action itself.

(6) A feeling of revenge. "Patience; Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, And nothing of a man." Oth., IV, i Oth., IV, i, 81.

Cf. Beaumont (7) A whim, a caprice. and Fletcher, Woman Pleased, I, 2:

" And live sequestered to yourself and me, Not wandring after every toy comes cross you Nor struck with every spleen."

"I must, forsooth, be forc'd

To give my hand oppos'd against my heart Unto a mad-brain rudesby full of spleen,
Who woo'd in haste and means to wed at leisure."

T. of S., III, ii, 10; v. also I Hen. IV-II, iii, 74; III, ii, 125; V. and A., 907.

(8) A fit of laughter, violent mirth. "With that, they all did tumble on the ground, With such a zealous laughter— so profound,

That in this spleen ridiculous appears, To check their folly, passion's solemn tears."

L. L. L., V, ii, 117; v. also T. of S., Ind.,
I, 135; T. and C., I, iii, 178; T. N., I, 135; T III, ii, 60.

(9) The seat of mirth.

" Man Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven As makes the angels weep: who, with our spleens, Would all themselves laugh mortal."

M. M., II, ii, 122. Note.—According to the belief of former times the spleen was supposed to be the seat of passions of various kinds.

SPLEENFUL. Full of passion, impetuous, hot, eager.

"Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny." 2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 128; v. also T. A., II, iii, 191.

SPLEENY. Morose, peevish.

"I know her for A spleeny Lutheran, and not wholesome to Our cause." Hen. VIII-III, ii, 99.

"I shall split all T. and C., I, iii, 177.

B., intrs. To be dashed to pieces. "The ship splits on the rock."

3 Hen. VI-V, iv, 10. SPLITTED. One of the forms of the past part, found in Shakespeare. That self hand

Which writ his honour in the acts it did Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it, Splitted the heart."

A. and C., V, i, 24; v. also C. E., I, i, 104; V, i, 308; 2 Hen. VI-III, ii, 411.

Note.—For the ordinary form of the p.p. v. Temp., V, i, 223.

- SPOIL. I., vb. (1) To seize by violence. "Not his that spoils her young before her face." 3 Hen. VI-II, ii, 14.
 - (2) To plunder, to strip by violence. "Spoil the city and your royal court." 2 Hen. VI-IV, iv, 53.
 - (3) To ruin, to damage. "Spoil his coat with scanting A little cloth." Her Hen. V-II, iv, 47.

 - (5) Prey. "Sluttish spoils of opportunity." T. and C., IV, v, 62.
- SPONGY. (1) Sponge-like, soft and full of cavities.
 - "O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'd." L. C., 326.
 - (2) Having the quality of sucking up like a sponge, absorbent, receptive. " No lady of more softer bowels, More spongy to suck in the sense of fear." T. and C., II, ii, 12.
 - (3) Rainy, wet. "Thy banks with pioned and twilled brims, Which spongy April at thy hest betrims."

 Temp., IV, i, 65; v. also Cym., IV, ii, 349.
- Probably from spume-foam. To make to move swiftly before the wind. Cf. Dryden, Hind and Panther, iii, 96:

"When virtue spooms before a prosperous gale, My heaving wishes help to fill the sail.' "Spoom her before the wind, you'll lose all else!" T. N. K., III, iv, 9.

SPOONS. A common present made by sponsors at a christening. The better sort were of silver, the handle of each terminating in the figure of an apostle (hence, Apostle Spoons). Allusions to these are frequent in the old writers. When Cranmer professes himself to be unworthy to become sponsor to the young princess, the King replies-

'Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons." Hen. VIII-V, iii, 166.

SPORT. (1) Games, merrymaking, diversion.

> "I prithee, do, to make sport withal." A. Y. L., I, ii, 22.

- (2) Out of door recreation.
 - "Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook, I saw not better sport, these seven years' day." 2 Hen. VI-II, i, 2.
- (3) Amusement.

"I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane If I would time expend with such a snipe,

But for my sport and profit." Oth., I, iii, 377.

SPY O' THE TIME. The result of observation.

"(I will) acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time." Mac., III, i, 130.

Note.—No thoroughly satisfactory explanation of this passage has been given by the commentators. Johnson suggests "A perfect spy," and thinks that the third murderer who afterwards joins them is referred to. Clarke explains "perfect spy of the time" by "the precise time when you may espy him coming"—i.e. the exact time when you may look out for him. Mason time when you may look out for him. Mason makes the expression mean "I will let you know by the person best informed, of the exact moment in which the business is to Steevens understands "acquaint you" as an imperative and makes the expression mean "Acquaint yourselves with the exact time most favourable to your purposes." Boswell makes it "The very moment you are to look for or expect Banquo."

To disperse, to scatter. "Other ventures he hath squandered abroad." M. V., I, iii, 22.

SQUANDERING. Random, aimless, undirected.

"The squandering glances of the fool." A. Y. L., II, vii, 57. Note.—Cf. the use of "scattering" in much the same sense in Oth., III, iii, 151.

"I have not kept my square but that to come shall all be done by the rule." A. and C., II, iii, 6.

(4) Used as a term in the popular psychology of the time (for explanation v. note).

> "I profess Myself an enemy to all other joys Which the most precious square of sense possesses,

And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love." K.L., I, i, 65.
Note.—Various emendations have been proposed for square of sense: e.g. Singer reads "sphere of sense"; Grant White interprets it as "the entire domain of sense"; Wright by the "most delicately sensitive part of my nature"; Moberly by "the choicest estimate of sense," while Capell explains it by "the entire domain of sensation." But what seems by far the most satisfactory explanation of all is that by Professor Dowden in an admirable article in the Atlantic Monthly in an admirable article in the Atlantic Monthly for September, 1907, entitled Elizabethan Psychology: Inter alia, the writer says: "To return from Bacon to the more generally accepted doctrine of the tripartite division into body, soul, and spirit, the operation, life, or activity of the soul in man was held to be threefold—vegetable, sensible, and rational. These three modes of activity are, indeed, often spoken of as if they were three separate kinds of soul; but it seems more correct to speak of them in man as three forms of one life or energy. The vegetable soul is found apart from the other two in plants; they live and increase in size, and multiply themselves by virtue of this soul. The vegetable and sensible souls are found The vegetable and sensible souls are found co-operating in animals; they not only live and grow and multiply, they also feel. In man alone are the three souls—vegetable, sensible, and rational—found working together.... Before proceeding to say something of the sensible and something of the rational soul, it will be worth while to call attention to a passage of Shakespeare and a passage of Spenser, each of which has personnel to the sensible souls are successful to the sensible souls are successful to the sensible souls are found to the sensible souls are found to the sensible souls are found to sensible souls are found to sensible souls are found to sensible souls are found to sensible souls—sensible attention to a passage of Shakespeare and a passage of Spenser, each of which has perplexed and even baffled the commentators, yet which in truth present no difficulty to one acquainted with the popular psychology of the time, and the fanciful ingenuities based upon that psychology. In the first scene of King Lear, Regan, making declaration of her love for her father, says—{v. passage above}. How shall we explain

'the most precious square of sense'?... Let us for a moment leave it unexplained, Let us for a moment leave it unexplained, and pass on to a passage of Spenser's Faerie Queene. In the ninth canto of the second Book the House of Temperance in which Alma dwells is described. Alma is the soul; her house or castle is the body. The twenty-second stanza presents the singular architecture of this castle:

"The frame thereof seemed partly circulare, And part triangulare; O worke divine! These two the first and last proportions are; The one imperfect, mortall, feminine; Th' other immortall, perfect, masculine; And 'twist them both a quadrate was the base,

Proportioned equally by seven and nine; Nine was the circle sett in heaven's place; All which compacted made a goodly diapase."

What of the architecture triangular, quadrate and circular? . . . It needs no long commentary to explain the architecture of the castle of Alma; it needs no more than reference to a passage of Bartholomew Anglicus, a passage which at the same time gives, we can hardly doubt, the true explanation of Shakespeare's 'precious square of sense.' Following elder authority, Bartholomew declares that the vegetable soul, with its three virtues of self-sustainment, growth, and reproduction, is 'like to a triangle in Geometrie.' The sensible soul is 'like to a quadrangle, square and four cornerde. For in a quadrangle is a lyne drawen from one corner to another corner, afore it maketh two tryangles; and the soul sensible maketh two tryangles of vertues. For wherever the soule sensible is, there is also the soul vegeta-bilis.' Finally the rational soul is likened to a circle, because a circle is the most perfect of figures, having a greater power of containing than any other. The triangle of the Castle of Alma is the vegetative soul; the quadrate — identical with Shakespeare's 'square of sense'—is the sensible soul; the circle is the rational soul. . . . The functions of the vegetative soul are, as we have seen, self-maintenance, growth, and reproduction... From the vegetable we pass to the sensible soul. Its seat is the brain; on its operation depend sensation on the one hand, and motion on the other."

(5) The embroidered part of a lady's dress near the bosom, hence, the bosom. Cf. Fairfax, Tasso, Geru-salemme, XII, 64: "Between her breasts the cruel weapon rives Her curious square, emboss'd with swelling gold." He so chants to the sleeve-hand and the STALE, 2. A.S. stalu -a theft, stelan to steal: hence, stealth -deceit.

(1) A bait, a decoy, a lure. Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, III, 2: "Stales to catch kites," also Sydney, Arcadia: "But rather one bird caught served as a stale to bring in more."

"The trumpery in my house, go bring it

For stale to catch these thieves."

Temp., IV, i, 187; v. also T. of S., III,

Note.—A stale "was a stuffed bird of the species the fowler wished to decoy, which was set up in as natural a position as possible, either before a net or in the midst of several 'springes.' By imitating the call of the 'springes.' By imitating the call of the passing birds, the fowler would draw their attention to the 'stale,' and as soon as they alighted near it either the net was pulled over them, or they were caught in the snares" (Hasting, Ornithology of Shakespeare).

(2) Something to be ridiculed, a dupe, a laughing-stock, a butt.

" To make a stale of me amongst these mates."

T. of S., I, i, 88; v. also 3 Hen. VI-III, iii, 260; T. A., I, i, 304. Note.—In the passage from T. of S., there is perhaps a quibbling allusion to stale-mate, an expression associated with the game of

(3) To walk in a pompous manner. "He stalks up and down like a peacock."

T. and C., III, iii, 266.

STALKING-HORSE. A horse or a figure like a horse, behind which a fowler concealed himself from the sight of the game he was following, hence, fig., anything put forward to conceal some other important move.

> "He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, And under the presentation of that he shoots his wit." A. Y. L., V, iv, 98.
> Note.—In Strutt's Sports and Pastimes,
> I, ii, § 15, the stalking-horse is thus described:
> "The Stalking Horse originally, was a horse "The Stalking Horse ongunary, was a sur-trained for the purpose and covered with trappings, so as to conceal the sportsman from the game he intended to shoot. It from the game he intended to shoot. It was particularly useful to the archer, by affording him an opportunity of approaching the birds unseen by them, so near that his arrows might easily reach them; but as this method was frequently inconvenient, and often impracticable, the fowler had recourse to art, and caused a canvas figure to be stuffed, and painted like a horse grazing, but sufficiently light, that it might be moved at pleasure with one hand."

STALL. Vb. (1) To instal, to A., trs. invest (only one instance of this sense in Shakespeare).

II., subs. (1) The act of stamping. "At our stamp here o'er and o'er one falls." M. N. D., III, ii, 25.

Note.-It has been suggested that "stamp Note.—It has been suggested that "stamp" here is written for some other word, e.g. stump (=touring or itinerating through the country), since fairies are not represented as stamping, or as big enough to stamp with much force. Steevens, however, refers to what Oberon says in M. N. D., IV, i, 82. "Sound, music! Come, my queen, take hands with me hands with me, And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be." Scott, also (Discoverie of Witcherali, 1584), represents Robin Goodfellow, when offended, as crying, "What have we here? Hemton, hamten, here will I never more tread nor stampen."

Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist?"
L. L. L., IV, iii, 180.

(2) Condition determined by circum-

"Acquaint her with the danger of my state." M. M., I, iii, 65. (3) Rank, standing.

"Had he matched according to his state."
3 Hen. VI-II, ii, 152.

(4) Dignity of deportment, courtly manners. Cf. Milton, Il Penseroso,

37:
"Come; but keep thy wonted state,
With even step and musing gait."
"An affection'd ass, that cons state without book and utters it by great swarths."
T. N., II, iii, 134; v. also M. A., II, i, 67;
Hen. V-II, iv, 32.

A chair of state. Cf. Milton, Arcades, 81:

"I will assay, her worth to celebrate,
And so attend ye toward her glittering state."

"He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander.

Alexander.

Cor., V, iv, 19; v. also Mac., III, iv, 5;

T. N., II, v, 50; I Hen. IV-II, iv, 395;

Hen. VIII-I, ii, 9.

Note.—The "state" was originally the canopy over the chair of state or throne.

Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, X, 445:

"His high throne which under state

Of richest tayture spread at the upper end

Of richest texture spread, at th' upper end Was plac'd in regal lustre."

Again, Bacon, New Atlantis:
"Over the chair is a state, made round or oval, and it is of ivy."

(6) A person of high rank. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, II, 387:

"The bold design

Pleased highly those Infernal States, and joy
Sparkled in all their eyes."

"Kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters."

Cym., III, v, 36. (7) Array, pomp, appearance of greatness, stateliness. "How many gazers mightst thou lead away,

If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!" Sonnet XCVI, 12.

(8) Plu.—Estate, possessions, interests. "The base o' the mount Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures, That labour on the bosom of this sphere To propagate their states."

T. of A., I, i, 69; v. also T. of A., I, ii, 181; L. L. L., V, ii, 427; T. N. K., IV, iii, 50.

(9) Settled order.

" You read These accusations and these grievous crimes Committed by your person and your followers Against the state and profit of this land." Rich. II-IV, i, 224.

(10) The body politic, a self-governing community.

"They nourished disobedience, fed The ruin of the state." Cor., III, i Cor., III, i, 117.

(II) Empire, sovereignty, authority. "The state of man,

Like to a little kingdom, suffers then The nature of an insurrection."

Cf. "this little world of man" (K. L., III, i, 10); "this little kingdom, man" (K. L., III, i, 10); "this little kingdom, man" (2 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 100); "storming her world" (L. C., 7).

(12) The senate.

"Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another." Cor., II, i, 101.

(13) Matters of state.

"They'd talk of state; for every one doth so Against a change." Rich. II-III, iv, 27.

(14) Majestic dignity.

"Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea, Where it shall mingle with the state of floods." 2 Hen. IV-V, ii, 132.

STATION. (1) Posture in standing, pose, attitude.

"A station like the herald Mercury New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill." Ham., III, iv, 58.

(2) Standing, abstinence from movement, state of rest.

"Her motion and her station are as one."

A. and C., III, iii, 22.

Note.—Cf. "A gait a state." v. state (1).

(3) Social position, status.

"Now, if you have a station in the pile, Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say 't."

Mac., III, i, 101.

(4) A post assigned, a place where a person or thing habitually stands. "Poor gentleman, take up some other station: here is no place for you." Cor., IV, v, 3.

STATIST. A politician, a statesman.

Cf. Marmion (1603-39), The Antiquary: "Adorned with that even mixture of fluency and grace as are requested both in a statist and a courtier."

"I once did hold it, as our statists do, a baseness to write fair."

Ham., V, ii, 33; v. also Cym., II, iv, 16. Note.—With respect to the allusion in the passage from Hamlet it has been observed by Blackstone that most of the great men of Shakspeare's time whose autographs have been preserved, wrote very bad hands; their secretaries very neat ones.

STATUTE. (1) An enactment of the legislature of a state, a law of a corporation.

"We have strict statutes and most biting laws." M. M., I, iii, 19.

(2) Security or obligation for money (its legal signification—Malone). "The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take, Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use." Sonnet CXXXIV, 9.

STATUTE-CAP. A woollen cap enjoined by statute in 1571 to be worn on holidays.

"Better wits have worn plain statute-caps."

Note.—As the clergy and nobility were exempt from the injunction to wear the caps the meaning of the passage evidently is that more intelligence may be found among common folks. With respect to the statute, Strype (Annals of the Reformation) observes: "(The statute) was for continuance of making and wearing woollen caps in behalf of the trade of cappers; providing that all above the age of six years (except the nobility and some others) should on Sabbath days and holy-days wear caps of wool, knit, thicked, and drest in England, upon penalty of ten groats." This protective enactment has been referred to as an instance of Queen Elizabeth's interest in her poor subjects.

STAY. I., verb. A., trs. (1) To prop, to support, to hold.

"He that stands upon a slippery place
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up."

K. J., III, iv, 138.

II., subs. (1) Continuance in a place.
"Be merry, for our time of stay is short."
Rich. II-II, i, 223.

(2) Tarrying, delay.

"Till I come again,
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay."

M. V., III, ii, 321.

(3) Continuance in a state.

"The conceit of this inconstant stay,
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight."

Sonnet XV, 9.

(4) A support, a prop.

"God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet."
2 Hen. VI-II, iii, 25.

(5) An obstacle, an interruption, check.

> " Here's a stay That shakes the rotten carcass of old Death Out of his rags."
> K. J., II, i, 455. Out of his rags." K. J., II, i, 455
> Note.—Schmidt suggests "the word of command, stay=stand! hold! stop!"

STEAD. Vb. To benefit, to be of use to, to help.

> "I could never better stead thee than now." To only never better steak thee than now."
> Oth., I, iii, 355; v. also M. V., I, iii, 7;
>
> M. M., I, iv, 17; R. and J., II, iii, 54;
>
> Temp., I, ii, 165; A. W., III, vii, 41;
>
> T. of S., I, ii, 261; T. G. V., II, i, 102;
> Per., III, Prol., 21.

STEAD UP. To replace, to supply the place of.

"We shall advise this wronged maid to stead up your appointment. M. M., III, i, 237.

STEAL. A., trs. (1) To take feloniously, without right or leave; to purloin.

> "Who steals my purse steals trash." Oth., III, iii, 157.

(2) To take, to extract without any idea of felonious intent.

> "(They may) steal immortal blessing from her lips. R. and J., III, iii, 37.

(3) To gain, to win stealthily.

" I would not change this hue Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen."

M. V., II, i, 12.

(4) To assume hypocritically.

"Oh, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes!"

Rich. III-II, ii, 27; v. also 2 Hen. VI-III, i, 79.

(5) To effect secretly, to accomplish clandestinely. Cf. Bacon, Essays: Of Great Place: "Profess it plainly and declare it, together with the reasons that move thee to change, and do not think to steal it."

"'Twere good to steal our marriage." T. of S., III, ii, 134.

Note.—Cf. the expression "their stolen marriage-day" R. and J., V, iii, 233.

(6) To abduct.

"The gentleman That lately stole his daughter. M. V., IV, i, 377.

B., intrs. (1) To thieve, to practise thieving.

"It was a mad fantastical trick of him to steal from the state." M.M., III, ii, 84.

(2) To slip away furtively (used with persons and things).

"I cannot think it, That he would steal away so guilty-like." Oth., III, iii, 39; v. also Ham., III, iv, 131; Rich. III-V, iii, 85.

C., reflex. To insinuate, to creep, to slink furtively.

"He will steal himself into a man's favour." A. W., III, vi, 81.

STEALTH. (1) Something stolen. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, iii, 143:

" For on his back a heavy load he bare Of nightly stealths, and pillage several."
"Why brand they us with base? Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take More composition." K. L., I, ii, 11.

(2) Clandestine or furtive motion, steal-

"I told him of your steath into this wood."
M. N. D., III, ii, 310; v. also M. N. D., IV, i, 157.

(3) Cunning, subtlety.

" Fox in stealth." K. L., III, iv, 86.

(4) Furtive action or procedure.

"The stealth of our most mutual entertain-M. M., I, ii, 158.

TEELY. (1) Made of steel which is capable of taking on the qualities of STEELY. sharpness, polish, smoothness, etc., hence, sharp-pointed.

"Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk, Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance." 3 Hen. VI-II, iii, 16.

(2) Unbending, unyielding.

"Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire." Oth., V, ii, 279.

STEEP-UP. Precipitous (applied to objects looked at from below).

"Having climbed the steep-up heavenly hill."
Sonnet VII, 5; v. also P. P., III, 5. Note.—In the passage from The Passionate Pilgrim the position is evidently regarded from Adonis' point of view.

STEEPY. (Primarily) steep, precipitous. Cf. Scott, Marmion, vi, 2:

"The steepy rock, and frantic tide, Approach of human step denied." "When his youthful morn Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night."

Note.—"Steepy" applied to youth—steep-up (q.v.) looking to noontide, applied to age-steep-down looking to night. Cf. Sonnet VII.

STELLED. A.S. stellan—to set, to place. Fixed, placed. Cf. Scott, Border Minstrelsy, Battle of Bothwell Bridge: "They stell'd their cannons on the height."

"The sea, with such a storm as his bare head In hell-black night endured, would have buoy'd up,
And quench'd the stelled fires (= the fixed stars)."

K. L., III, vii, 62; v. also Sonnet XXIV, I;

K. L., 111, VII, 02; V. also Sonner AAIV, 1; R. of L., 1444.

Note.—Stelled in the passage from King Lear is sometimes explained as one of Shakespeare's coinages, being a contraction for stellated (L. Stella). With the other two examples of Shakespeare's employment of the word this interpretation seems unprecessary. necessary.

STERN. Subs. A.S. steoran-to steer. A rudder, a helm, hence, a post of management or direction. Cf. Holinshed, Chronicles of Scotland: "Have sometime possessed the sterne of Scotland."

> "The king from Eltham I intend to steal And sit at chiefest stern of public weal. 1 Hen. VI-I, i, 177.

STRAPPADO. Ital. strappata—a pulling, a wringing, strappare—to pull with violence.

A kind of military punishment formerly practised. The offender was drawn up to a beam and then suddenly let fall half way with a jerk. The consequence was dislocation of the limbs.

"Were I at the strappado or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion." I Hen. IV-II, iv, 219.

STRATAGEM. (1) A trick, an artifice.

"Alack that heaven should practise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself."

R. and J., III, v, 210; v. also K. L., IV, vi, 159.

(2) An artifice in war, a trick to deceive the enemy.

"Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem, And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen." I Hen. VI-III, ii, 18; v. also Hen. V-IV, viii, 104.

(3) A cabal, a combination for the commission of an unlawful act. "The man that hath no music in himself, Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils." M. V., V, I, 85.

(4) Atrocity, anything appalling. "What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly, Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural, This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!" 3 Hen. VI-11, v, 89; v. also 2 Hen. IV-1, i. 8.

STRAWBERRY GROWS UNDERNEATH THE NETTLE, The. Rolfe has the following note: "It was a common opinion in the time of Shakespeare, that plants growing together imbibed each other's qualities. Sweet flowers were planted near fruit trees with the idea of improving the flavour of the fruit, while ill-smelling plants were carefully cleared away lest the fruit should be tainted by them. But the strawberry was supposed to be an exception to the rule, and not to be corrupted by the 'evil communications' of its neighbours. St. Francis de Sales says: 'In tilling our garden we cannot but admire the fresh innocence and purity of the strawberry, because although it creeps along the ground, and is continually crushed by serpents, lizards, and other venomous reptiles, yet it does not imbibe the slightest impression of poison or the smallest malignant quality, a true sign that it has no affinity with poison."

"The strawberry grows underneath the nettle."

Hen. V-I, i, 60.

STRAWY. Strawlike, no better than straw.

"There the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him." T. and C., V, v, 24.

"The cry is still 'They come;' our castle's Will laugh a siege to scorn." Mac., V, v, 2.

(5) Force measured by figures, number. "To descry The strength of the enemy." K. L., IV, v, 14.

(6) An armed force, a body of troops. "Bid him levy straight The greatest strength and power he can make." Rich. III-IV, iv, 448; v. also K. J., II, i, 388; 2 Hen. VI-II, i, 380.

(7) Effective power, influence, weight. "Coupled and linked together With all religious strength of sacred yows." K. J., III, i, 229.

(8) Vehemence, force, high degree. "You would abate the strength of your displeasure." M. V., V, i, 198.

(9) Strong men (abstract for concrete). "'Tis our fast intent To shake all cares and business from our age;

Conferring them on younger strengths."

K. L., I, i, 29.

STRENGTH OF LIMIT. v. Limit (subs. 8). STRENGTHLESS. Wanting in strength, efficacy, or the like; weak.

"And as the wretch whose fever-weaken'd joints,

Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief, Are thrice themselves."

2 Hen. IV-I, i, 141; v. also V. and A., 153; R. of L., 709.

STRETCH-MOUTHED. Open - mouthed, licentiously spoken.

"She may strew Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds."

Ham., IV, v, 14.

(3) To cover by scattering. "I thought thy bride-bed to have decked, sweet maid. And not have strewed thy grave."

Ham., V, i, 232. (4) To make easier by having something spread.

"It shall strew the footsteps of my rising." K. J., I, i, 193.

(5) To disseminate, to give currency to. "So I have strewed it in the common ear, And so it is received." M. M., I, iii M. M., I, iii, 15.

(1) What is strewed. STREWINGS.

"The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night Are strewings fitt'st for graves."

Cym., IV, ii, 285. (2) Rushes for the floor.

"These strewings are for their chamber."
T. N. K., II, i, 20.

STREWMENTS. The scattering of flowers on a bier or on the grave, as was common at the funeral of a young girl. v. Cym., IV, 4, 218-220.

"Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants, Her maiden strewments." Ham., V, i, 21 Ham., V, i, 219.

STRICKEN. (1) Dashed, thrown.

Venice

Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.''

M. V., IV. i. 197. M. V., IV, i, 197.

(4) Precise, stringent.

" If we conclude a peace, It shall be with such strict and severe covenants As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby."

I Hen. VI-V, iv, 114.

(5) Hard, cruel.

"That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,

To have bless'd mine eyes with her!" Per., III, iii, 8.

STRICTURE. Strictness (used only once by Shakespeare).

> "A man of stricture and firm abstinence." M. M., I, iii, 12.

STRIDE. Vb., trs. (1) To step over, to pass, to overpass.

"A prison for a debtor that dares not To stride a limit." Cym., III, Cym., III, iii, 35.

(2) To bestride, to ride on.

"I mean to stride your steed.' Cor., I, ix, 71.

(1) Striving, endeavour. STRIFE.

"Which we will pay,
With strife to please you, day exceeding day."

A. W., V, iii, 332.

(2) An endeavour to excel, emulation. " Artificial strife

Lives in these touches, livelier than life." Note.—"Artificial strife"=striving to out-do nature. v. also V. and A., 291; R. of L., 1791.

(3) Contention.

"I will compound this strife."

T. of S., II, i, 335.

(4) A brawl, an uproar, a disturbance, quarrelling.

To have their balmy slumbers waked with strife."

Oth., II, iii, 237.

(2) To give, to inflict, to deal.

"He that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts."

Hen. V-II, i, 57.

(3) To knock, to dash (the instrument being object, hence, with a causative force—to cause to strike). "He struck his hand upon his breast." R. of L., 1842.

(4) To call forth, to arouse, to stir up.

"I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire."
J. C., I, ii, 177.

(5) To produce by blows.
"From the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire."
I Hen. VI-IV, vi, 10.

(6) To sound, to begin to play.

"Strike a free march to Troy."

T. and C., V, x, 30.

(7) To blast, to confound.

"Aidless came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli like a planet."

Cor., II, ii, 111; v. also Ham., I, i, 162.

(8) To affect in a particular manner by some sudden impression.

"It strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room."

A. Y. L., III, iii, 11.

(9) To affect sensibly with strong emotion.

"My rage is gone; And I am struck with sorrow."

Cor., V, vi, 148.

(10) To produce by a sudden action, to effect at once.

"It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp Should strike such terror to his enemies."

I Hen. VI-II, iii, 24.

(11) To broach, to tap. Note.—Weber compares Fletcher, Monsieur Thomas, V, x, 42: "Home, Launce, and strike a fresh piece of wine."

"Strike the vessels ho!
Here is to Caesar." A. and C., II, vii, 95.
Note.—Most of the editors adopt this explanation. Some, however, make strike the vessels—strike their goblets together, and Ritson quotes Oth., II, iii, 71: "And let me the cannakin clink, clink!" Clarke who adopts this latter interpretation, objects to the other on the ground that Antony would hardly give an order for tapping fresh casks when Pounpey was the entertainer. Rolfe, however, suggests that the carousal had now reached a point where none of the company would stand overmuch upon etiquette.

But see Prior's Alma (C. iii) quoted in Littledale's Dyce:

"L'Avare, not using half his store, Still grumbles that he has no more; Strikes not the present tun, for fear The vintage should be bad next year."

B., intrs. (1) To use one's weapons. "Strike, fellows, strike."

T. and C., V, viii, 10.

(2) To act by force and not by fair means. "There speak, and strike, brave boys."

(3) To make a quick blow or thrust, to hit.

"I'll cuff you if you strike again."
T. of S., II, i, 221.

(4) To aim.
"Myself would strike at thy life."
M. A., IV, i, 129.

(5) To cause something to give out a sound by percussion.

"She strikes upon the bell." Mac., II, i, 32.

(6) To give out a sound, to begin to play.
"Music, awake her, strike." W. T., V, iii, 98.

(7) To lower, to let down sails (a naval term).

"And yet we strike not, but securely perish."

Rich. II-II, i, 266.

(8) To blast, to destroy.

"Then no planets strike." Ham., I, i, 162.

II., subs. A bushel: a measure varying from half a bushel to four bushels (v. English Dialect Dictionary) and still in use as a term in different localities.

Gaoler. "What dowry has she?
Daughter. Some two hundred bottles,
And twenty strike of oats."

T. N. K., V, ii, 60.

Note.—"Strike" is properly the straight piece of wood with which the surplus grain is struck off, to level it with the rim of the measure; hence, the term struck measure (=exact measure) as distinguished from heaped measure.

STRIKER. A robber, one ready to use force (a technical term in the slang of thieves). Cf. Cotgrave's French Dictionary, Haut à la main—a striker, one with whom there is but a word and a blow. Cf. also Greene, Art of Coneycatching: "The cutting a pocket or picking a purse is called striking."

"No foot land-rakers, no long-staff sixpenny strikers."

I Hen. IV-II, i, 66.
Note.—" Long-staff sixpenny strikers"= fellows that infested the roads with longstaffs and knocked men down for sixpence (Johnson).

STRIP. (1) To pluck off, to tear off. "She stripp'd it from her arm."

Cym., II, iv, 101.

(2) To take away.

"All the temporal lands . . . would they strip from us." Hen. V-I, i, 11.

(3) To unsheath, to uncover. "Strip your sword stark naked."

T. N., III, iv, 228.

(4) To separate, to put away, deprive.

> " His unkindness That stript her from his benediction." K. L., IV, iii, 43.

STROKE. (1) A knock, a blow.

"Many strokes, though with a little axe, Hew down and fell the hardest-timbered oak." 3 Hen. VI-II, i, 54.

(2) The sound of a clock striking the hours.

Hast. "What is 't o'clock? Mess. Upon the stroke of four." Rich. III-III, ii, 5.

The touch of a pen.

"His life is parallel'd
Even with the stroke and line of his great justice." M. M., IV, ii, 83.

(4) An occurrence, actual conflict.

"In the stroke Of this yet scarce-cold battle."

Cym., V, v, 467. (5) A calamity, a mishap. "I often did beguile her of her tears,

When I did speak of some distressful stroke That my youth suffer'd." Oth., I, iii, 157.

STROND. A strand, a shore.

"Breathe short-winded accents of new broils To be commenc'd on stronds afar remote."

I Hen. IV-I, i, 4; v. also T. of S., I, i, 175.

STRONG. (1) Vigorous, robust.

"Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty."

A. Y. L., II, iii, 47.

(2) Firm, compact.

"Though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell." Temp., I, i, 46. Temp., I, i, 46.

(3) Violent.

" If by strong hand you offer to break in." C. E., III, i, 104.

(4) Powerful, mighty.

"The fiend is strong within him."

C. E., IV, iv, 107. (5) Powerful (relatively, measured by figures).

"Seven thousand strong."

I Hen. IV-IV, i, 92. (6) Powerful intellectually.

"Divert strong minds to the course of altering things." Sonnet CXV, 8.

(7) Forcible, cogent.

"This is not strong enough to be believed." Cym., II, iv, 131.

(8) Cordial, enthusiastic, sincere, constant, fine.

> " But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him? I think he will stand very strong with us.' J. C., II, i, 142.

(9) Intense, earnest.

"Is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?" A. Y. L., I, iii, 27.

(10) Important.

I Lord. "How is this justified?

I Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters."

A. W., IV, iii, 51.

(II) Effected by violent or strong measures.

> " Anon, I wot not by what strong escape, He broke from those that had the guard of him."
> C. E., V, i, 148.
>
> Note.—An example of Hypallage.

(12) Well-established, valid, not easily overthrown.

> " I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief.' Cym., III, iv, 24.

(13) Rank, offensive, noisome.

"They say poor suitors have strong breaths." Cor., I, i, 54.

(14) Obdurate, reckless.

"O heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy." Rich. II-V, iii, 59.

(15) Determined.

"Strong, and fasten'd villain!"

K. L., II, i, 77.

"We do lock

Our former scruple in our strong-barred gates. K. J., II, i, 370.

STRONG-BASED. Standing upon a firm foundation.

"The strong-based promontory Have I made shake. Temp., V, i, 46.

STRONG-BESIEGED. Besieged by a strong force.

"From the walls of strong-besieged Troy,
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field. Stood many Trojan mothers."

R. of L., 1429. STRONG-JOINTED. Having strong limbs. "O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson,

I do excel thee in my rapier. L. L. L., I, ii, 70.

STRONG-KNIT. Firmly joined.

" I thought I should have seen some Hercules, "I thought I should have seen some recount, A second Hector, for his grim aspect, And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs." I Hen. VI-II, iii, 21.

STROSSERS. Close drawers, tight trousers.

> " You rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your straight strossers."
> Hen. V-III, vii, 50.

Note.—"Strosser" is a corruption of trosser which is evidently the same as trouser. Theobald thought that strait strossers meant naked skin: "By strait Trossers, our Poet humorously means, femorius denudatis; for the kernes of Ireland wear no Breeches, any more than the Scotch Highlanders do." Steevess supports this fancy: "The kernes of Ireland streight in the strain of Ireland streight." of Ireland anciently rode without breeches; and therefore strait trossers, I believe, means only in their naked skin, which sits close to them."

STROY. To destroy (not a contraction). "What I have left behind Stroy'd in dishonour." A. and C., III, xi, 54.

STRUCK. Advanced.

"Myself am struck in years, I must confess." T. of S., II, i, 354; v. also Rich. III-I, i, 92.

Doth limp behind the substance."

M. V., III, ii, 130.

(4) A body, a being.

"Aught within that little seeming substance.

K. L., I, i, 189.

(5) Material means, property, goods, wealth.

"I ken the wight: he is of substance good."

M. W., I, iii, 36.

(6) Import, essential features.

"New-dated letters from Northumberland, Their cold intent, tenour, and substance thus." 2 Hen. IV-IV, i, 9.

SUBSTITUTE. Vb. (1) To put in the place of another.

"(Their child shall be) substituted in the place of mine."

T. A., IV, ii, 159.

(2) To invest with delegated power, to act as deputy.

"But who is substituted 'gainst the French I have no certain note." 2 Hen. IV-I, iii, 84.

SUBSTITUTION. Position of deputy, delegated authority. v. Substitute.

"He did believe
He was indeed the duke, out o' the substi-

And executing the outward face of royalty With all prerogative." Temp., I, ii, 103.

"They are scoundrels and subtractors that say so of him." T. N., I, iii, 31.

SUBTILE. Sly, crafty, deceitful, treacherous.

"Think you this York
Was not incensed by his subtile mother
To taunt and scorn you?"
Rich. III-III, i, 152.

SUBTLE. (1) Fine-spun (its etymological sense), hence, fine, thin, delicate.

"A point as subtle as Arachne's broken woof."

T. and C., V, ii, 150.

(2) Cunning, artful, crafty.

"We are beastly, subtle as the fox for prey." Cym., III, iii, 40.

(3) Treacherous, deceitful.

"Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man!"
T. G. V., IV, ii, 91.

(4) Smooth and level. Cf. Ben Jonson, Chloridia (quoted by Steevens): "Upon Tityus' breast, that, for six of the nine acres, is counted the subtlest bowling ground in all Tartary."

"Nay, sometimes, Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground, I have tumbled past the throw."

Cor., V, ii, 20.
Note.—The idea is that the ground is so smooth and level that it leads to an error in judgment.

SUBTLETY (Subtilty). (1) Sophistry.

"That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtleties"

Unlearned in the world's false subtleties."

Sonnet CXXXVIII, 4.

(2) A dish contrived to appear unlike what it really was (a term adopted from ancient cookery and confectionery). Note.—" Dragons, castles, trees, etc., made out of sugar had the same denomination" (Steevens). Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, The Double Marriage, V, 1:

"Where are the marchpanes, The custards double-royal and the subtilties?" "You do yet taste Some subtleties o' the isle." Temp., V, i, 124.

Hen. V-I, ii, 39.

(2) To descend.

"A ring the county wears
That downward hath succeeded in his house
From son to son, some four or five descents." A. W., III, vii, 26.

(3) To turn out.

"I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily." K. L., I, ii, 127.

(4) To follow.

"After summer evermore succeeds barren winter. 2 Hen. VI-II, iv, 2.

SUCCEEDER. One who succeeds, successor.

> "O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth, The true succeeders of each royal house, By God's fair ordinance conjoin together." Rich. III-V, iv, 43.

SUCCEEDING. Subs. A consequence, a result.

> Laf. "Is it not a language I speak? Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding."
> A. W., II, iii, 191.

SUCCESS. (1) Sequel, issue, result. Milton, Paradise Lost, II, 9:

" And, by success untaught,

His proud imaginations thus displayed." "I know not what the success will be, my "I know not what the success will be, my lord; but the attempt I vow."

A. W., III, vi, 75; v. also Rich. III-IV, iv, 236; Oth., III, iii, 222; A. and C., II, iv, 9; Cor., I, i, 254; T. and C., I, iii, 340; 3 Hen. VI-II, ii, 46; T.N. K., IV, iii, 80.

Note.—In Shakespeare's time "success" was frequently a colourless or neutral word, qualified by good, bad, ill, adverse, etc.

(2) Good fortune, prosperous issue.

"Go, to our tent; Where, ere we do repose us, we will write To Rome of our success." Cor., I, ix, 75; v. also Mac., I, iii, 90; I, v, 1.

"Our parents' noble names, In whose success we are gentle." W. T., I, ii, 382; v. also 2 Hen. IV-IV, ii, 47.

SUCCESSANTLY. Close after another, at the heels of another.

"Then go successantly, and plead to him."

T. A., IV, iv, 113.

Note.—As this word is found nowhere else various other emendations have been suggested, e.g. "successfully," "incessantly,"
"instantly," "Then go immediately after (Aemilius)" would be a rendering satisfactory to etymological requirements.

SUCCESSION. (1) A following of the example of others.

"The misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession." A. W., III, v, 21.

(2) Futurity, the future.

"Their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession"

Ham., II, ii, 334. Ham., II, ii, 334.

(3) The right of succeeding.

"Cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually."

A. W., IV, iii, 257

(4) Successors, heirs, descendants.

"Cassibilan . . . for him
And his succession granted Rome a tribute."

Cym., III, i, 8.

SUCCESSIVE. (1) Following by order of succession.

> "If he were not privy to those faults, Yet, by reputing of his high descent, As next the king he was successive heir."
> 2 Hen. VI-III, i, 49; v. also Sonnet CXXVII, 3.

(2) Following by right of succession, hereditary, legitimate.

" Countrymen, Plead my successive title with your swords."

R. of L. (Argument).

(2) Quick, rapid, speedy.

"You were good at sudden commendations."

Hen. VIII-V, ii, 187; v. also Rich. II-V, ii, 17; K. J., IV, i, 27; J. C., III, i, 19.

(3) Hasty, precipitate, rash.

"Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel."

A. Y. L., II, vii, 151; v. also Cor., II, iii, 243; Mac., IV, iii, 59; Oth., II, i, 260; 2 Hen. IV-IV, iv, 34; 3 Hen. VI-V, v, 86.

(4) Sharp, stinging.

"And notwithstanding all her sudden griefs,
The least whereof shall quell a lover's hope,
Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,
The more it grows and fawneth on her still."
T. G. V., IV, ii, 12.

SUFFICIENT.

(5) Impetuous, passionate.

"He is rash and very sudden in eholer."
Oth., II, i, 260.

(7) Clemency, forbearance, indulgence, toleration.

"Call her before us; for We have been too slight in sufferance." Cym., III, v, 35; v. also Hen. V-II, ii, 46.

SUFFICIENCY. (1) Competence.

"Then no more remains
But that to your sufficiency—as your worth is able—

And let them work." M. M., I, I, 8.

Note.—This passage has troubled the commentators. Some conjecture an omission, others a corruption of the text. Rolfe observes: "The pointing in the text is due to Warburton, who takes that to be the demonstrative referring to science, and remains = is wanting. The meaning then is—"Then, as your worth is able (that is, your high character rendering you competent), no more is wanting to complete your capacity for the fulfiment of your trust but that that is, that knowledge of government of which I have just spoken); and let them (that is, that knowledge and your worth) work together."

(2) Ability. Cf. Bacon, Essays: Of Counsel: "The wisest princes need not think it any derogation to their sufficiency to rely upon counsel."

"We have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency." Oth., I, iii, 224.

(1) Equal to any end or purpose proposed, adequate to meet any demands.

"A wall sufficient to defend

Our inland from the pilfering borderers."

Hen. V-I, ii, 141.

(2) Competent, qualified, capable.

"You'll never meet a more sufficient man."
Oth., III, iv, 87.

(3) Solvent, capable of paying one's debts."Saying he is a good man is to have you

"Saying he is a good man is to have you understand me that he is sufficient."

M. V., I, iii, 15.

SUGGEST. (1) To insinuate.

"What devil suggests this imagination?"
M. W. W., III, iii, 230.

(2) To inform secretly, to whisper to.

"We must suggest the people, in what hatred He still hath held them." Cor., II, i, 233.

(3) To incite in a secret or underhand manner. "Further I say and further will maintain Upon his bad life to make all this good,

That he did plot the Duke of Gloucester's death,

Suggest his soon-believing adversaries."
Rich. II-I, i, 101.

(4) To tempt, to seduce.

"When devils will the blackest sins put on, They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, As I do now."

S I do now."

0th., II, iii, 324; v. also Hen. V-II, ii,
114; Rich. II-III, iv, 75; Hen. VIII-I, i, 164; A. W., IV, v, 38; L. L. L., V, ii, 760; T. G. V., III, i, 34; R. of L.,
37; Sonnet CXLIV, 2.

SUGGESTION. (1) Intimation, insinuation.

"Who, like a king perplexed in his throne, By their suggestion gives a deadly groan." V. and A., 1044.

(2) A temptation, a prompting.

"Then arm thy constant and thy nobler parts Against these giddy loose suggestions."

K. J., II, i, 292; v. also Mac., I, iii, 134;
Temp., IV, i, 26; A. W., III, v, 16.
L. L. L., I, i, 156; 1 Hen. IV-IV, iii, 51.

(6) Plu.—The game of backgammon, or draughts, a game of chance. Cf. Harrington, Epigrams, I, 79:

" If tales are told of Leda be not fables, Thou with thy husband dost play false at tables."
"This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice,
That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice
In honourable terms."
L. L. L., V, ii, 328.

(7) The collection of lines on the palm of the hand (the language of palmistry or chiromancy). Cf. Ben Jonson, Masque of Gipsies:

" Mistress of a fairer table

"Mistress of a fairer table

Hath not history nor fable."

"Well, if any man in Italy have a fairer table, which doth offer to swear upon a book I shall have good fortune."

M. V.. II. ii, 144. M. V., II, ii, 144.

II., vb. To note, to tabulate.

"If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him."

I. C., I, iii, 257. J. C., I, iii, 257.

TAILOR, 1. Proud Tailor, according to Nares, is the Warwickshire name for a goldfinch.

Lady Percy. "I will not sing.

Hotspur. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or red-breast teacher" (= to turn teachers of goldfinches or red-breasts).

I Hen. IV-III, i, 256. Note.—The chief editions read "'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher"; and Malone remarks. "he who makes a common practice of singing, reduces himself to the condition either of a tailor or a teacher of musick to birds," and he compares T. N., II, iii, 97, "Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house that ye squeak out your coxier's catches (i.e., tailors' songs) without any mitigation or remorse?" Steevens quotes Resuperate and Eletaber. without any mitigation or remorse?" Steevens quotes Beaumont and Fletcher, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, II, 8, to show that tailors were much given to singing: "Never trust a tailor that does not sing at his work; his mind is on nothing but filching."

TAILOR, 2. Used as an exclamation.

"The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale, Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me; Then slip I from her bum, down topples she, And 'tailor' cries, and falls into a cough." M. N. D., II, i, 54.

Note.—Johnson observes: "The custom of crying tailor at a sudden fall backwards, I think I remember to have observed. He that slips beside his chair, falls as a tailor squats upon his board." This explanation does not appear satisfactory, inasmuch as, the old woman would apply the derisive epithet to herself. The term tailor is locally employed for a bungler, a botcher, or a clumsy fellow, and these meanings have been sug-gested in the passage quoted. But as, according to the old saying, it takes nine tailors to make a man, might there not be some allusion to Puck's size? Hence the expression may be equivalent to mannikin! dwart! mite! urchin! elt!

TAINT. I., vb. A., trs. (1) To stain, to contaminate.

" Many more there are, Which, since they are of you, and odious, I will not taint my mouth with." Hen. VIII-III, ii, 392.

TATTERING. Tattered (active for passive).

"Wound our tattering colours clearly up."

K. J., V, v, 7.

Note.—" Tawdry" is TAWDRY-LACE. a corruption of St. Audrey, which again is a corruption of St. Ethelrida. It implies that the things so called had been bought at the fair of St. Audrey, where gay toys of all sorts were sold. The fair was held in the Isle of Ely on the day of the saint (October 17). Nicholas Harpsfield in his Historia Ecclesiae Anglicanae makes St. Audrey die of a swelling in her throat which she considered as a particular judgment, for having been in her youth much addicted to wearing fine necklaces. He particularly describes the tawdry "Solent Angliae nostrae necklace: mulieres torquem quendam, ex tenui et subtili serica confectum, collo gestare; quam Ethelredae torquem apellamus (tawdry lace) forsan in ejus quod diximus memoriam." The word at first was not associated with shabby or showy splendour, but with a necklace of a certain rural fashion worn by country wenches. Cf. Spenser, Shep-herd's Calendar, April:

" Bind your fillets fast And gird in your waist

For more fineness, with a tawdry lace."

Faithful Fletcher, The also Shepherd, IV, 1:

"The primrose chaplet, tawdry lace, and ring."

Again, Drayton, Polyolbion, II: "Of which the Naiads and the blue Nereids make Them taudries for their necks."

"Come, you promised me a tawdry lace and a pair of sweet gloves."

THREAD. (1) A compound cord of two or more single yarns twisted.

"Beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread." T. of S., IV, iii, 137.

(2) A fine filament spun by a spider, etc. "The smallest thread That ever spider twisted from her womb Will serve to strangle thee.

K. J., IV, iii, 127.

(3) An emblem of life, with an allusion to the thread of life being spun and cut by the Fates.

"Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread in twain." Oth., V, ii, 205; v. also Hen. V-III, vi, 45; M. N. D., V, i, 327.

(4) A constituent, part and parcel.

Have given you here a thread of mine own life." Temp., IV, i, 3.

(5) Phrase: "Thread and thrum" -the meritorious and the bad; expression borrowed from weaving, the thread being the substance of the warp, and the thrum the small tuft beyond, by which it is fastened to the loom. Cf. Herrick, Poems:

"Thou who wilt not love, doe this, Learne of me what woman is, Something made of thred and thrumme, A meere botch of all and some.

"O Fates, come, come,
Cut thread and thrum;
Quail, crush, conclude and quell."

M. N. D., V, i, 274.

> Rich. II-III, iii, 90; v. also Cym., IV, ii,
> 127; V. and A., 620.

THREE, The picture of we. According to "Shakespeare had in his thought a common sign, in which two wooden heads are exhibited, with this inscription under it : 'We three loggerheads be.'" Halliwell quotes from Taylor, the Water Poet's Farewell to the Tower Bottles:

"Plaine home-spun stuffe shall now proceed from me Much like unto the picture of We Three.' of 'we "Did you never see the picture of we three'?" T. N., II, iii, 16. THREE-FARTHINGS GOES! An allusion to the threefarthing piece of silver current in Shakespeare's time, and frequently referred to for its thinness. It had a profile of the sovereign with the emblematical rose of England at the back of the head. "My face so thin That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose, Lest men should say 'Look! where three-jarthings goes'!" K.J., I, i, 126. Note.—Sticking roses in the ear was a court-fashion. Cf. Burton, Anatomy of Melancholy: "It was once the fashion to stick real flowers in the ear.'

something THREE-MAN. Applied to requiring three men for its use or performance.

(a) "If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle." 2 Hen. IV-I, ii, 204.

Note.—A three-man beetle was a rammer managed by three men.

(b) "Three-man songmen all and very good ones." W. T., IV, iii, 40.

Note.—Three-man songmen are persons who take part in a song for three voices; cf. Harrington, Epigrams, III, 35:
"When these triumvirs set that three-man song, Which stablished in Rome that hellish trinity,

That all the town and all the world did wrong. Cf. also Coryat, Crudities (1611): "Tha looks asquint upon a three-man song."

THREE-NOOKED. Having three corners or angles. Cf. Scott, Antiquary, XXXVI. "The Captain says a three-nookit hankercher is the maist-fashionable overlay." "The three-nook'd world Shall bear the olive freely.' A. and C., IV, vi, 6; cf. K. J., V, vii, 116: "Come the three corners of the world in THREE-PENCE BOW'D WOULD HIRE "An allusion to the old custom of ratifying an agreement by a bent coin: but there were no threepences so early as the reign of Henry VIII" (Fairholt). Note.—It was currently believed that a bent coin brought good luck. A common name for a sixpence was crookie from the fact, as Jamieson observes, that this coin was usually crooked before the introduction of the new coinage.

Hen. VIII-II, iii, 36. THREE-PILE. An old name for the finest and most costly kind of velvet. Note.—Those who wore it were persons of wealth and consequence.

"I have served Prince Florizel and in my time wore three-pile." W. T., IV, ii, 13.

THREE-PILED. (1) Refined, superfined, approaching perfection, of first-rate quality.

Thou art a three-pil'd piece, I'll warrant M. M., I, ii, 33.

(2) Exaggerated, high-flown, piled up. "Three-piled hyperboles; spruce affectation." L. L. L., V, ii, 409.

THREE-SUITED. A word of doubtful meaning, used only by Shakespeare. (1) Steevens supposes that it is used in contempt to signify poor, beggarly, peasant-like, and that the term is applied to one who has only three suits of raiment. He supports the view by a quotation from Ben Jonson, Silent Woman, IV, 2: "Thou wert a pitiful poor fellow . . . and hadst nothing but three suits of apparel." Again, the same annotator suggests that "it might signify a fellow thrice-sued at law, who had three suits for debt standing out against him." (2) Delius objects that the expression can refer to poverty; he rather thinks it denotes the folly and foppery of Oswald, and refers to Edgar's words, III, iv, 126, where, speaking of his own former wealth, he describes himself as having had "three suits to his back." Aldis Wright says that it is probable that three suits of clothes a year were part of a servant's allowance, and quotes Ben Jonson, Silent Woman, III, i: "Who gives you your maintenance, I pray you? Who allows you your horse-meat, and man's-meat, your three suits of apparel a year? Your four pair of stockings, one silk, three worsted?"

"A base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave." K. L., II, ii, 14.

THRENE. Gr. $\theta \rho \hat{\eta} \nu o s$ —a lamentation, θρέομαι —I cry aloud.

A lamentation, a threnody, a funeral song. Cf. Kendal, Poems (1577)—quoted by Malone:

"Of verses, threnes, and epitaphs, Full fraught with tears of teene." "Whereupon it made this threne To the phoenix and the dove, Co-supremes and stars of love, As chorus to their tragic scene." Phoenix and Turtle, 49.

THRICE-CROWNED QUEEN OF NIGHT. The Moon. "Alluding to her triple character of Proserpine, Cynthia, Diana " (Johnson): Proserpine, queen of the lower regions; Luna or Cynthia, queen of heaven; Diana, queen of the Cf. "By the triple M. N. D., V, i, 391. A. Y. L., III, ii, 2. chase on earth. Hecate's team ":

THRICE-DRIVEN. Very soft.

> "The tyrant custom, most grave senators, Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down."

Oth., I, iii, 230. Note.—By hypallage the qualifying force of the word is transferred from down, to which it properly belongs, to bed. There is an allusion here to the separation of light and heavy feathers by the driving of a fan.

THRIFT. (1) Gain, success, prosperity in any way, thriving.

> " Crook the pregnant hinges of the knee Where thrift may follow fawning."
> Ham., III, ii, 57; v. also M. V., I, i, 175;
> W. T., I, ii, 311.

(2) Economy, frugality.

"Thrift, thrift, Horatio, the funeral baked meats Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables." Ham., I, ii, 180.

THRIFTLESS. (1) Prodigal, improvident, wasteful.

"He shall spend mine honour with his shame, As thriftless sons their scraping father's gold." Rich II-V, iii, 69.

(2) Useless, unprofitable.

"What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe!" T. N., II, ii, 36.

651

THRIFTY. (I) Well-husbanded.
"I have five hundred crowns,

"I have five hundred crowns,
The thrifty hire I saved under your father."

A. Y. L., II, iii, 39.

Note.—For similar proteptic uses of the adjective v. A. Y. L., I, 1, 34: "What prodigal portion have I spent?" A. Y. L.,
II, vii, 132: "Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger"; Mac., III, iv, 76:
"Ere humane statute purged the gentle weal"; K. J., V, v, 18: "It estumbling night did part our weary powers"; Oth., III, iii, 331: "Not poppy, nor mandragora, Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, Shall ever medicine thee," etc., etc.

Provident thoughtful far-seeing

(2) Provident, thoughtful, far-seeing.
"Fast bind, fast find:

A proverb never stale in thrifty mind."

M. V., II, v, 54. (3) Frugal, economical, careful.
"Nature never lends The smallest scruple of her excellence

But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Herself the glory of a creditor, Both thanks and use." M. M., I, i, i M. M., I, i, 38.

THROE. Vb. trs. To put in agony, to pain, to agonize. " A birth, indeed, Which throes thee much to yield."

M. N. D., II, i, 158.

B., intrs. To sit in state as a king.

"He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in." Cor., V, iv, 24.

THRONG. Vb. A., intrs. To crowd, to press.

"I have seen the dumb men throng to see him."

Cor., II, i, 241.

Cor., II, i, 241. B., trs. (1) To fill (with a crowd), to crowd. "Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,

And not our streets with war!"

Cor., III, iii, 36; v. also, R. of L., 1417.

(2) To close, to stop, to stuff. "A man thronged up with cold."

Per., II, i, 66. THROSTLE. A variant of throshel (according to Skeat), a diminutive of thrush.

A song-thrush.

"He is every man in no man: if a throstle sing, he falls straight a-capering." M. V., I, ii, 53; v. also M. N. D., III, i, 130.

THROTTLE. To utter with a choking noise, as one half suffocated. "I have seen them shiver and look pale,

Make periods in the midst of sentences,

Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears."

M. N. D., V, i, 97.

A thorough-fare, an THROUGH-FARE. unobstructed passage.

Of wide Arabia are as through-fares now."

M. V., II, vii, 42; v. also Cym., I, ii, 11.

THROUGHLY. Thoroughly, completely, fully. Cf. Matt. iii, 12: Luke iii, 17.

"(I) am right glad to catch this good occasion

(1) all right grad to each this good occasion. Most throughly to be winnowed."

Hen. VIII-V, i, 110; v. also Temp., III, iii, 14; M.A., IV, i, 198; M.M., V, i, 258; M.W. W., II, iv, 80; T. of S., IV, iv, 11.

THRUM. Icel. thromr - the edge or verge of a thing; Norw. trom, tram, trumm an edge or brim: Ger. trumm-end, thrum, stump of a tree.

The tufted end of a weaver's warp, coarse yarn.

"Cut thread and thrum."

M. N. D., V, i, 275. THRUMMED. Made of coarse woollen cloth or the ends of a weaver's warp.

"There's her thrummed hat and her muffler too." M. W. W., IV, ii, 66. Note.—According to Fairholt (Costume in England) sick thrummed hats "were made with a lang nap like shaggy fur."

THUMB-RING. A ring worn on the Note.-It was an ancient fashion for aldermen and other civil officers to wear thumb-rings. Chaucer, The Squieres Tale, 83:

"Upon his thombe he hadde of gold a ring."
"I could have crept into an alderman's thumb-ring." I Hen. IV-II, iv, 310.

THUNDER-STONE. A thunderbolt. Chapman, Homer, Iliad, XV:

Though I sink beneath The fate of being shot to hell, by Jove's fell thunder-

"And thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bared my bosom to the thunderstone."
J. C. J, iii, 49; v. also Cym., IV, ii, 271;
and cf. Oth., V, ii, 235.
Note.—This word together with thunderbolt was formed upon an erroneous fancy that the destruction occasioned by lightning was effected by some solid body.

THWART. Adj. Cross, perverse (used only once by Shakespeare in this sense. Milton has the adjective in its ordinary sense of transverse in Paradise Lost, VIII, 132, and X, 1075).
"If she must teem,

Create her child of spleen, that it may live, And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her! K. L., I, iv, 270.

TIB. A contraction or corruption of the proper name Tabitha.

A low woman, a prostitute. Cf. Coles' Latin Dictionary: "Mulier sordida"—a tib.

" Every coistrel That comes enquiring for his tib.' Per., IV, vi, 176; v. also A. W., II, ii, 24.

A contraction for entice.

To entice, to seduce, to allure. Marlowe, I Tamburlaine, I, 2: "What strong enchantments tice my weary soul!

"These two have tic'd me hither to this place." T. A., II, iii, 92.

TICK-TACK. F. tric-trac. (Note the pronunciation has been modified.)

A sort of backgammon but more complicated, played both with men and pegs. Cf. Ben Jonson, Every Man in His Humour, III, 2: "He'd play at fayles and ticktack."

"Who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack. M. M., I, ii, 181. TICKLE. Adj. Uncertain, ticklish, unstable, precarious. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, III, iv, 249:

"So tickle be the terms of mortal state."

Thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milkmaid, if she be in love, may sigh it off." M. M., I, ii, 163; v. also 2 Hen. VI-I, i, 213.

TICKLE-BRAIN. A kind of strong drink, applied to the seller of it.

"Peace, good pint-pot; peace, good tickle-brain." I Hen. IV-II, iv, 368.

TICKLING. Adj. Flattering, cajoling. "That smooth-faced gentleman, tickling commodity." K. J., II, i, 573.

TIDE. A.S. tid — time, hour.

> (I) Season. Cf. Spenser, The Shepherd's Calendar, October.

"Forthy content us in this humble shade, Where no such troublous tides han us assay'd." " What hath it done,

That it in golden letters should be set Among the high tides in the calendar?"

K. J., III, i, 86. (2) Fit time. Cf. Scotch tid=a suitable time for agricultural operations; e.g. "We hae had a fine tid for the in-pittin."

"I have important business, The tide whereof is now."

T. and C., V, i, 79. (3) The time between the flux and reflux of the sea, hence, the flux and reflux itself.

"As men wrecked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide."

Hen. V-IV, i, 95.

(4) A flood of evil.

" I was amazed Under the tide." K. J., IV, ii, 138.

(5) A rush. "What a tide of woes Comes rushing on this woeful land at once!"

Rich. II-II, ii, 98. (6) A course, a current. "Think how such an apprehension May turn the tide of fearful faction."

1 Hen. IV-IV, ii, 67; v. also J. C., III, i,

258. (7) A favourable conjunction of circumstances or influences.

> "There is a tide in the affairs of men Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." J. C., IV, iii, 216.

This word is only once used by Shakespeare, and has been variously interpreted: (1) Fat, plump, well-conditioned; (2) nimble, Both agile. meanings are supported by quotations from contemporary writers, and both are still in general dialectic use.

"Thou little, tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days and foining o' nights."

2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 192. Note.-Clarke suggests the former meaning, and observes: "A more appropriate image for representing the appearance of the rotund Falstaff, hot, glistening, reeking from his encounter with the pestiferous Pistol could hardly be devised." TIE. v. Tye.

TIERCEL. v. Tercel.

Have wandered with our travers'd arms, and breathed

Our sufferance vainly." T. of A., V, v, 7. B., intrs. (1) To march (a military term).

"Hold, Wart, traderse."
2 Hen. IV-III, ii, 253; v. also Oth., I, iii,

(2) To use the posture of opposition in fencing.

"To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse." M. W. W., II, iii, 23.

TRAY-TRIP. F. trois; L. tres.

An ancient game the character of which is not exactly known. Success in it seems to have chiefly depended upon the throwing of treys, i.e. a dice of three spots. Cf. Ben Jonson, Alchemist, V, iii, 67:

"Nor play with costermongers at mum-chance, tray-trip."

Taylor the Water Poet in his Motto also mentions it among other games.

> "Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?" T. N., II, v, 171.

TREACHER. F. tricheur—a trickster. A traitor. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, iv, 365: "No knight, but treachour full of false despite."

"We make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were ... knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance." K.L., I, ii, 114.

To enrich. TREASURE. Vb.

"Treasure thou some place Sonnet VI, 3. With beauty's treasure."

TREASURY. (1) The body, as a repository or storehouse. Cf. the use of "casket" (K. J., V, i, 40).
"I know not how conceit may rob

The treasury of life, when life itself Yields to the theft."

K. L., I K. L., IV, vi, 43.

(2) Wealth, treasure.

"All my treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enrich'd
Shall be your love and labour's recompense."
Rich. II-II, iii, 60; v. also Hen. V-I, ii,
165; 2 Hen. VI-I, iii, 134.

> "You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time" flies." T. of A., III, vi, 82.

TRENCHERING. Trenchers, wooden plates for meat. " No more dams I'll make for fish:

Nor fetch in firing

Nor fetch in firing
At requiring,
Nor scrape trenchering nor wash dish."

Temp., II, ii, 169.

Note.—Most of the editors read trencher for trenchering: but Grant White observes:
"Surely they must have forgotten that Caliban was drunk, and after singing "firing" and "requiring" would naturally sing "trenchering." There is a drunken swing in the original line, which is entirely lost in the precise curtailed rhythms of "Nor scrape treucher, nor wash dish."

CHER-KNIGHT A serving man a

TRENCHER-KNIGHT. A serving man, a waiter.

"Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany,

Some numble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick, That smiles his cheek in years and knows the trick To make my lady laugh." L. L. L., V, ii, 466.

TRENCHER-MAN. A hearty eater or feeder. Cf. Lodge, Wit's Miserie (1596): "His doublet is of cast satten cut sometime upon taffata, but that the bumbast hath eaten through it, and spotted here and there with pure fat to testifie that he is a good trencher-man."

"He is a very valiant trencher-man: he hath an excellent stomach." M. A., I, i, 44.

TREY. F. trois; L. tres.

A three at cards or dice.

Cf. Chaucer, The Pardoners Tale, 653: "Seven is my chaunce and thyn is cink and treye."

"Nay then, two treys, an if you grow so nice." L. L. L., V, ii, 233.

TRIAL. (1) The act of testing, probation. " Make not too rash a trial of him, for He's gentle and not fearful.

M. N. D., I, i, 154.

(6) Criterion. "'Tis not the trial of a woman's war."

Rich. II-I, i, 48. TRIAL-FIRE. Fire for trying, ordeal fire. Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, Faithful Shepherdess:

" In this flame his finger thrust, Which will burn him if he lust;

But if not, away will turn,
As loth unspotted flesh to burn."
"With trial-fire touch me his finger end." M. W. W., V, v, 81.

TRIBULATION OF TOWER-HILL, or the Limbo of Limehouse. Probably the names of certain puritanical congregations.

Hen. V111-V, iv, 50.

Note.—Steevens observes with respect to the whole passage in which these words occur: "I can easily conceive that the turbulence of the most clamorous theatre has been exceeded by the bellowings of puritanism against surplices and farthingales. The phrase dear brothers is very plainly used to point out some fraternity of canters allied to the Tribulation both in pursuits and manners by tempestuous zeal and consummate ignorance." According to Grant White: "No other allusion to these places or assemblages has been discovered. It may be that these are the names of Puritan congregations, and that Shakespeare meant a satirical fling at the pretended meekness of that body; but it may also be that 'their dear brothers' refers to the obstreperous youths first named, and that the audiences referred to were of the same kidney. Within the memory of men now living 'Tribulation' was a common name within the melhoty of hel how living 'Tribulation' was a common name among New England families of Puritan descent." Cf. Jonson's Alchemist, where one of the characters is named "Tribulation Wholesome, a pastor of Amsterdam": and again in III, ii, 103 of the same work we find:

"Nor call yourselves
By names of Tribulation, Persecution, Restraint, Long-patience, and such like, affected By the whole family or wood of you."

"I fear'd he did but trifle,
And meant to wreck thee." Ham., II, i, 112.

TRIGON. Gr. τρίγωνος -three-cornered. A term in astrology, the junction of three signs. The zodiac was divided into four trigons or twelve signs. The four trigons were named respectively after the four elements-fiery, airy, watery, earthly. When the three superior planets were in the three fiery signs (Aries, Leo, and Sagittarius) they formed a fiery trigon. Note.—The fiery trigon was thought to denote rage and contention. Cf. G. Harvey, Pierce's Supererogation: "Now the warring planet was expected in person, and the fiery trigon seemed to give the alarm.

"Look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables." 2 Hen. IV-II, iv, 221. Note.—The allusion here is to Bardolph with his fiery face. TRIM. I., adj. (1) Neat, elegant.

"This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will too late Tie leaden pounds to 's heels." Cor., III, i, 313.

UNSCISSORED (Unscissared). Unshorn.

" All Unscissar'd shall this hair of mine remain Though I show ill in 't." Per., III, iii, 29.

To open by undoing the seams, hence, to rip, to cut open.

"He unseam'd him from the nape to the Mac., I, ii, 22. chaps.'

UNSEASONABLE. (1) Ill-timed, untimely. "At any unseasonable instant of the night." M. A., II, ii, 15.

(2) Taken, caught, or killed out of season, hence, unfit for food (a technical term). " He is no woodman that doth bend his bow

To strike a poor unseasonable doe.' R. of L., 581.

UNSEASONED. (1) Inexperienced,

"'Tis an unseasoned courtier." A. W., I, i, 64.

(2) Unseasonable, untimely, ill-timed. Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, Philaster, II: "These unseasoned hours." "Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill, And these unseason'd hours perforce must add Unto your sickness."

2 Hen. IV-III, i, 105; v. also M. W. W.,
II, ii, 150.

UNSEEM. To put on a contrary appearance.

"You do the king, my father, too much wrong, And wrong the reputation of your name In so unseeming." L. L. L., II, i, 155.

Deprived of virility, UNSEMINARED. being an eunuch.

"'Tis well for thee That being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts May not fly forth of Egypt." A. and C., I, v, 11.

UNSHAKED. Unshaken, steady.

" Keep unshaked That temple.

Cym., II, i, 60; v. also J. C., III, i, 70. UNSHAPE. To throw out of regular form, to disorder, to confound.

"This deed unshapes me quite."

M. M., IV, iv, 18.

UNSOUGHT. (1) Not searched for.

"(Who) unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about With this most tender air." Cym., V, v, 450.

(2) Unsolicited.

"Love sought is good, but given unsought is better."

T. N., III, i, 150.

(3) Unexplored.

"Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought Or that or any place that harbours men." C. E., I, i, 135.

UNSOUNDED. Not tested, not understood.

"Gloster is a man

Unsounded yet."
2 Hen. VI-III, i, 57; v. also R. of L., 1819.

UNSPEAK. To recant, to unsay.

" Unspeak mine own detraction." Mac., IV, iii, 123, 686

UNT

Adj. Dumb, wanting UNSPEAKING. the power of utterance.

" His description

Proved us unspeaking sots.'

Cym., V, v, 178.

T. and C., I, iii, 159.

A. and C., III, xiii, 30.

UNSUBSTANTIAL. Impalpable, immaterial, incorporeal. v. Tent, 2.

"Welcome, then,
Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace!"
K. L., IV, i, 7; v. also R. and J., V, iii, 103.

UNSUITING. Unsuited, unsuitable, unbecoming.

"Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your grief-

A passion most unsuiting such a man-Oth., IV, i, 70. Cassio came hither."

UNSURED. Not well established, uncertain.

> " For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie Thy now unsured assurance to the crown, That yon green boy shall have no sun to ripe The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit."
> K. J., II, i, 471.

UNSWEAR. (1) To retract by a subsequent oath, to abjure.

> "Unswear faith sworn." K. J., III, i, 24.

(2) To deny by oath.

"Be you well assured, No more than he'll unswear." Oth., IV, i, 28.

(2) Unaccused, not charged with crime. "And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd, Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty." Rich, III-III, vi, q. (3) Uninjured.

"Him in thy course untainted do allow For beauty's pattern to succeeding men." Sonnet XIX, 11.

To disentangle. UNTANGLE.

"This is that very Mab That plats the manes of horses in the night, And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs, Which once untangled much misfortune bodes."

R. and J., I, iv, 91; v. also T. N., II, ii, 37.

UNTAUGHT. (1) Unschooled, uninitiated.

"'Tis wonder That all invisible instinct should frame them To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught." Cym., IV, ii, 178.

(2) Unskilled, unaccustomed, having no necessity.

> "Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough. Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour." 2 Hen. VI-IV, i, 122.

(3) Boorish, ill-mannered, rude. " As the soldiers bore dead bodies by, He call'd them untaught knaves." I Hen. IV-I, iii, 43.

UNTEMPERING. Not moving or persuading, unpersuasive, incapable of exercising a softening influence.

"Notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage." Hen. V-V, ii, 241.

To bring out of a tent. UNTENT. "Why will he not, upon our fair request, Untent his person?" T. and C., II, iii, 178.

UNTENTED. Not able to be probed by a tent, incurable; v. Tent, 2.

"The untented woundings of a father's curse Pierce every sense about thee!"

K. L., I, iv, 287. UNTHINK. To retract in thought, to think differently about.

> "I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speak-ing." Hen. VIII-II, iv, 103.

UNTHREAD. To draw out a thread from (used figuratively).

"Unthread the rude eye of rebellion."

Note.—Melun is understood to say to the English nobles—retrace your steps, undo what you have done, desert the rebellious what you have done, desert the rebellious project in which you are engaged. For a similar metaphor cf. Cor., III, i, 124; Rich. II-V, v, 17; K. L., II, i, 121. From the frequent combination of the words thread and eye it is unnecessary to read here with Theobald "Unfread the rude way." Observe that "the rude eye of rebellion" stands, by hypallage, for "the eye of rude rebellion."

I., subs. A prodigal, a UNTHRIFT. spendthrift, a good for nothing.

> "Given away To upstart unthrifts." Rich. II-II, iii, 121; v. also Sonnet IX, 9; XIII, 13.

(1) Prodigal. II., adj.

"What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means?' T. of A., IV, iii, 305.

(2) Regardless of consequences.

"In such a night

Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew
And with an unthrift love did run from Venice
As far as Belmont."

M. V., V, i, 16.

(1) Reckless, wild, good UNTHRIFTY. for nothing.

"Can no man tell of my unthritty son?"

Rich. II-V, iii, 1.

(2) Inattentive, inconsiderate, neglectful. "Our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge." W. T., V, ii, 100.

UNTIMELY. Adv. Unseasonably, prematurely. Cf. Pope, Homer, Iliad, XI, 151: "The Trojans see the youths untimely die."

"That gallant spirit hath aspired the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth. No. and J., III, i, 115; v. also Mac., V, viii, 16; Ham., IV, i, 40; 3 Hen. VI—III, iii, 187; V, v, 62; Rich. III—IV, iv, 70. D. Having no claim, usurping, UNTITLED. illegitimate.

"O nation miserable, With an untitled tyrant bloody-sceptr'd, When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again?" Mac., IV, iii, 104.

UNTRADED. Not in common use, unhackneyed (only once used by Shakespeare).

"By Mars his gauntlet, thanks!
Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath."
T. and C., IV, v, 178.

UNTREAD. To retrace.

Where is the horse that doth untread again His tedious measures with the unbated fire That he did pace them first?"

M. V., II, vi, 10; v. also K. J., V, iv, 52.

UNTREASURED. Deprived (as of a deposited treasure).

"They found the bed untreasured of their mistress."

A. Y. L., II, ii, 7.

UNTRIMMED. Without personal adornment (yet attractive).

"The devil tempts thee here, In likeness of a new untrimmed bride."

M. J. III., i. 200.

Note.—The epithet has raised some diversity of opinion. Theobald reads "and trimmed," and Dyce "uptrimmed." The latter supports his conjecture by quoting R. and J., IV, iv, 24: "Go, waken Juliet; go and trim her up," also Marlowe, Ovid's Elegies:

"But by her glass disdainful pride she learns, Nor she herself, but first trimmid up die.

Nor she herself, but first trimm'd up, dis-

"Untrimmed" (=with dishevelled hair) is defended by the custom in former times of brides going to church with their hair un-braided, and hanging loose over their shoulders. Cf. Spenser, Prothalamium, 22: "Locks all loose untyde As each had been a bryde."

UNTRUSS. un + F. trousser - to bind.

To untie, to unfasten: specifically, to loosen the breeches by untying the points by which they were fastened to the doublet. Cf. Holinshed, History of England, Book IV, chap. 22: "He was about to untrusse his points:" also, Scott, Woodstock, x: "General Harrison was stalking up and down the parlour . . . with his points untrussed."

"Marry, this Claudio is condemned for untrussing." M. M., III, ii, 159.

(1) Falsehood. UNTRUTH.

"He would say untruths, and be ever double."

Hen. VIII-IV, ii, 38.

(2) Disloyalty, want of fidelity.

"So my untruth, had not provok'd him to it." Rich. II-II, ii, 101.

(3) Unfaithfulness in love.

"Let all untruths stand by thy stained name."
T. and C., V, ii, 179.

UNTUNEABLE. Unmusical, inharmonious, discordant.

"The note was very untuneable." A. Y. L., V, iii, 34.

UNURGED. Unsolicited.

"We swear A voluntary zeal and unurged faith To your proceedings." K. J., K. J., V, ii, 10.

UNVALUED. (1) Invaluable, inestimable. Cf. Milton, On Shakespeare, 11:

" Each heart Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued book Those Delphic lines with deep impression took."

Cf. also, Chapman, Homer, Iliad, I:

"Chryses the priest came to the fleet to buy, For presents of unvalued price, his daughter's liberty."

"Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl, Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels, All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea." Rich. III-I, iv, 27.

Despised, not prized, neglected, common, mean, ordinary. "He may not, as unvalued persons do, Carve for himself."

Ham., I.

Ham., I, iii, 19. UNVARNISHED. Plain, simple, unadorned. "I will a round, unvarnished tale deliver." Oth., I, iii, 90.

UNVENERABLE. Not worthy of veneration, contemptible.

> " For ever Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou Takest up the princess by that forced baseness Which he has put upon 't." W.T., II, iii, 77.

UNVULNERABLE. Invulnerable.

> "That thou mayst prove To shame unvulnerable." Cor., V, iii, 73.

UNWAPPERED. Un + wapper a frequent. from wap, from Dutch wapperen -to waver, to fluctuate, to vacillate. Not tremulous, hence, fearless through innocence.

"We come towards the gods
Young and unwapper'd, not halting under

Many and stale." T. N. K., V, iv, 10.

Note.—It is doubtful whether the original word is wappen or wapper. The former (q.v.) occurs in T. of A., IV, iii, 38; the latter is found as a verb in the Somersetshire dialect meaning "to move tremulously," and wappered in Gloucestershire means "restless," "fatigued."

UNWARES. Unexpectedly, an old form of unawares (only once found in Shakespeare).

"O God! it is my father's face Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd." 3 Hen. VI-II, v, 62.

Note.—The word is frequently used with at, e.g., see Holinshed, History of Scotland: "He did set upon them at unwares."

UNWASHED. v. With Unwashed hands.

UNWEAVE. To undo (something that has been woven), to resolve what is woven into the threads of which it was made.

"Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought."

V. and A., 991.

UNWEDGEABLE. Not capable of being split open with wedges.

> "Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
> Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak
> Than the soft myrtle." M. M., II, ii, 116.

UNWEIGHED. Unguarded, inconsiderate, careless. "What an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard picked out of my conversation?" M. W. W., II, i, 19.

conversation?" UNWEIGHING. Inconsiderate, thoughtless.

"A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow,"

M. M., III, ii, 124.

UNWHOLESOME. (1) Unhealthy.

T. and C., II, iii, 112.

(3) Degenerate.

"They are too unwholesome o' conscience." Per., IV, iii, 20.

(4) Mischievous, pernicious.

"The people muddied,
Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers."

Ham., IV, v, 65.

UNWILLING. (1) Disinclined, reluctant. "Which I was much unwilling to proceed in."
T. G. V., II, i, 95.

(2) Involuntary, undesigned.

"(Eyes), being open'd, threw unwilling light Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd."

V. and A., 1051.

UNWISH. To do away with by wishing. "Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men Which likes me better than to wish us one."

Hen. V-IV, iii, 76.

To deprive of the under-UNWIT. Vb. standing, to turn mad.

> " And then, but now-As if some planet had unwitted men-Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast, In opposition bloody."
> Oth., II, iii, 162. In opposition bloody." Oth., II, iii, 162.
> Note.—The allusion is to the influence of the science of astrology over the minds of men in Shakespeare's time.

(1) Undeserving. UNWORTHY.

"And so may I, blind fortune leading me, Miss that which one unworthier may attain." M. V., II, i, 37.

(2) Worthless vile.

"I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness." A. Y. L., I, i, 30.

(3) Not justified, not deserved.

"By despairing, shalt thou stand excus'd For doing worthy vengeance on thyself, That didst unworthy slaughter upon others."

Rich. III-I, ii, 88.

UNYOKE. A., trs. To disjoin.

" And shall these hands, so lately purged of blood, So newly join'd in love, so strong in both, Unyoke this seizure and this kind regret?"

K. J., III, i, 241.

B., intrs. To unharness (as oxen, or horses) hence, to give over, to cease. "Tell me that, and unyoke." Ham., V, i, 49.

UNYOKED. Unrestrained. licentious, reckless.

> "I know you all, and will awhile uphold The unyoked humour of your idleness." 1 Hen. IV-I, ii, 180.

UP. Adv. (1) Open.

"Had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell, Uproar the universal peace, confound All unity on earth." Mac., IV, iii, 99.

UPSHOT. Legitimate conclusion. Note. -Wright observes that the upshot was the decisive shot, a term of archery, like the "up-cast," or final throw, in the game of bowls.

"I am now so far in offence with my niece that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the wpshot."

T. N., IV, ii, 67; v. also Ham., V, ii, 368.

UPSPRING. A wild dance, according to Elze, the Hüpfauf, the last and consequently the wildest dance of the old German merrymakings. Cf. Chapman, Alphonsus, III:

"We Germans have no changes in our dances, An Almain and an up-spring that is all."

"The King doth wake to-night and takes his rouse, Keeps wassail, and the swaggering upspring reels."

Ham., f, iv, o.

Note.—By some interpreters the word is taken to mean "up-start," referring to the reels."

king insolent from sudden elevation.

UPSTARE. To stand erect and stiff.

"The king's son, Ferdinand, With hair up-staring—then like reeds, no hair-

Was the first man that leap'd."

WAN, 1. A.S. wann, wonn -dark, black. Cf. Scott, Minstrelsy: "Now they did swim that wan water." The origin is doubtful, probably from wann, wonn, past tense of winnan-to toil, to strive: hence, the original meaning would be worn out with toil, tired out, and pallid from sleeplessness.

To turn pale.

" Is it not monstrous that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit That from her working all his visage wann'd?" Ham., II, ii, 525.

WAN, 2. Past tense of win. Note. This word is common in Scotland and is convenient for poets, who used either wan or won to suit the exigencies of Cf. Drayton, Polyolbion, XI: "These with the Saxons went, and fortunately wan, Whose captain Hengist first a kingdom here began."

"And so my state,
Seldom but sumptuous, showed like a feast And wan by rareness and solemnity."

I Hen. IV-III, ii, 59.

WANION. Note.-No satisfactory account is given of the origin of the word. Probably the original form was waniand, present participle of A.S. wanian - to hence, with a wanion-with diminution, detriment, or ill luck: same as wan—deficient, lacking. Chaucer has wanie — to decrease, to diminish.

A vengeance (used as an imprecation). Note.—In Scotland the word is found in the additional sense of a curse, v. Scott, The Fortunes of Nigel, XXVII: "'Bide, down, with a wanion,' cried the king, almost overturned by the obstreperous caresses of the large staghounds." Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, II, 1: "I'll tell Ralph a tale in his ear shall fetch him again with a wanion to you." Cf. also Dryden, Wild Gallant, III: "I'll teach you to take place of tradesmen's wives, with a wannion to you."

"Come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wan-Per., II, i,. 17.

WANTON. A.S. wan(-deficient, wanting, lacking), often used as a negative prefix, like un, mis, and towen for togen, past participle of téon-to draw or educate, hence, originally, uneducated, not taken in hand, untrained. Cf. wanhope - despair; wanbeleve - unbewantruste - distrust; wanrest= unrest: wan-wierd = misfortune; chancie (Burns) = unlucky.

I., adj. (1) Lewd, lascivious, carnal, lustful.

"Frowned by nature, enemy to peace,

Lascivious, wanton."
I Hen. VI-III, i, 19; v. also M. M., I, iv, 59.

(2) Playful, sportive.

"Love is full of unbefitting strains, All wanton as a child, skipping and vain."

L. L. L., V, ii, 770.

Foolhardy, reckless.

"I have ventured, Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders."

Hen. VIII-III, ii, 421.

(4) Exuberant.

" My plenteous joys, Wanton in fullness, seek to hide themselves In drops of sorrow."

Mac., I, iv, 34.

(5) Luxuriant in growth, gay with blossoming trees, flowers, etc., or with abundant vegetation.

"The quaint mazes in the wanton green For lack of tread are undistinguishable."

M. N. D., II, i, 99; v. also Rich. II-I, iii, 214.

(6) Luxurious.

"She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down." I Hen. IV-III, i, 211.

Note.—This is an example of Hypallage or Transferred Epithet. V. also 2 Hen. IV-I, i, 148.

(7) Light, trifling. "Every idle, nice, and wanton reason, "Every idle, nice, and warmon is stated."
Shall to the king taste of this action."
2 Hen. IV-IV, i, 191.

II., subs. (1) A lewd person, a lascivious man or woman.

(2) A pampered, effeminate creature spoiled by indulgence.

"A beardless boy,

A cockerel, silken wanton."

K. J., V, i, 70; v. also Cym., IV, ii, 8.

(3) A merry, frolicsome rogue, a sportive creature, a trifler. Cf. Pope, Homer, Iliad, XV, 418: "The sportive wanton pleas'd with some new play."

'Shall we play the wantons with our woes?"
Rich. II-III, iii, 164; v. also Ham., V, ii, 283.

III., vb. To sport lasciviously. "To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest." V. and A., 106.

WANT-WIT. A destitute of person sense, a fool.

"Such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know myself."

M.V., I, i, 6.

WAPPERED (Wappened). Fatigued, tired, spent, used up. Note.—The word is still found used in Gloucestershire. Cf. Gibb's Cotswold Village (1898): "The horse is wappered out." Grosse in his Provincial Dictionary (1790) also gives the word and explains it as "restless, or fatigued." Unwappered (q.v.) occurs in the Two Noble Kinsmen. Other conjectures have been made. One suggestion is that it is connected with wap in the old sense of "to have sexual intercourse with.'

"This (gold) it is That makes the wappened widow wed again."

T. of A., IV, iii, 38.

WARD. I., vb. (1) To watch over, to keep in safety. Cf. Spenser, Faerie Queene, V, ix, 194:

"Whose porch, that most magnificke did appeare, Stood open wyde to all men day and night, Yet warded well by one of mickle might."

God will in justice ward you as his soldiers."

Rich. 111-V, iii, 254.

(2) To defend, to protect.

"Tell him it was a hand that warded him From thousand dangers." T.A., III, i, 195.

(I) Protection, defence. II., subs. "The best ward of mine honour is rewarding my dependants." L. L., III, i, 125. (2) Shelter, hiding-place. I should wrong it, To lock it in the wards of covert bosom." M. V., I, i, II.

(3) Custody, prison. Cf. Genesis xl, 3: "He put them in ward in the house of the captain of the guard." "I know, ere they will have me go to ward, They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement."

2 Hen. VI-V, i, 112.

(4) State of being under the charge or particular care of a guardian. I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward." A. W., I, i, 5.

(5) A lock, a bolt.
"The locks between her chamber and his will, Each one by him enforc'd, retires his ward."
R. of L., 303; v. also T. of A., III, iii, 36.

(6) A defensive position in fencing. "What wards, what blows, what extremities he endured."

I Hen. IV-I, ii, 170; v. also I Hen. IV-II, iv, 179; T. and C., I, ii, 247; Temp., I, ii, 471; W. T., I, ii, 33; T. N. K., V, iii, 63.

(7) A district of a town.

"Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it?"

M. M., II, i, 281.

WARDEN-PIE. A.S. wearden-to preserve.

A pie made of wardens or large hard pears, so called because they would keep long without rotting, and chiefly used for roasting or baking. They are now generally baked or stewed and covered with cochineal instead of saffron as of old. Ben Jonson puns upon the word in the Masque of Gypsies: "A deputy tart a church-warden pye." Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher, Cupid's Revenge, II, 3:

"Faith, I would have him roasted like a warden. In brown paper, and no more talk on 't."

Halliwell gives another example of a playful use of the term from Strype's Ecclesiastical Memorials: "Quimby, a fellow of the college, was imprisoned very strictly in the steeple of New College, and half starved with cold and lack of food, and at length died. He was asked of his friends what he would eat, who said his stomach was gone for all meat, except it were a warden pie. 'Ye shall have it,' quoth they. 'I would have,' said he again, 'but two wardens baked: I mean our warden of Oxford, and our warden of Winchester-London and More: for such a warden pie might do me and the church good; whereas other wardens of the tree can do me no good at all."" "I must have saffron to cover the warden pies." W. T., IV, ii, 41.

What wheels? racks? fires?" W. T., III, ii, 177.

(4) A car. "And would so, had it been a carbuncle Of Phoebus' wheel."

Cym., V, v, 190.

(5) A turnspit.

" I think if my breast had not been made of faith and my heart of steel,

She had transform'd me to a curtal dog and made me turn i' the wheel."

Note.—The allusion is to the use of dogs as turnspits. Cf. Topsell, History of Four-Footed Beasts (1607): There is comprehended, under the curres of the coursest kinde, a certaine dogge in kitchen service excellent; for when any meat is to be roasted, they go into a meat is to be roasted, they go into a wheel, which they turning round about with the waight of their bodies, so diligently looke to their businesse, that no drudge nor scullion can do the feate more cunningly." V. also under Turn i' the wheel.
